"I'm in trouble, serious trouble, Curly, " Jules said, and judging by the look in his eyes, Curly could see that he was.

Hazel came in from the kitchen to stand in the door, while Curly showed Belanger to a seat.

"Sit down, Jules, and tell me about it," he said.

"It's over furs—beaver pelts," Jules mopped his face. "The authorities here made a search at Bellevue and the dealer has squealed, and gave them my name. Ben Whitmore has just told me the news."

"But," Curly asked curiously, "why ask me about anything?"

"You brought those furs to me from a trapper's cabin, north of the Depot, last spring—remember," Curly did remember going to a trapper's shack to get a load of hardwood for Belanger and several bags of furs that were waiting for him.

"Yes, I remember," he agreed, "but I didn't know they were beaver skins, or I wouldn't have touched them. What do you want me to do?"

"Simply this," Belanger said, "I want you to go into hiding until I can get this thing settled. I don't want it to get into court. It might ruin my business. And besides, as you were the carrier of illegal furs, they may try to pin something on you. You must skip out, Curly."

Curly thought a minute.

"I'm sorry to tell you, Jules," he said crisply, "but I'll do no such thing. I have my own business to attend to, and after all, I'm not the running-away, hiding-away type of man. There's nothing like a man standing on his own two feet and facing the music, and—that's just what you're going to do, Jules Belanger."

"What do you mean, Curly?"

"Just what I said. You're catching the stage for Bellevue Monday morning. You're going to get out when you meet the up-bound stage to enquire if there is anybody aboard who is looking for you, but whether there is or not, you're going on to Bellevue and you're going to throw yourself on the mercy of the court. Ever been in trouble over illegal furs before?"

"No, Curly, never. And there won't be a second time!"

For a moment Jules Belanger sat with head bowed. Curly studied him thoughtfully. He deserved some pity, but not a great deal, after all the law was the law. Finally Belanger got up and started for the door. He was about to open it, when he stopped and turned.

"Forgive me, Curly," he said, "I should have known better than to ask you to run away from anything. I'll do what you say. I'll be back Tuesday evening."

"And I'll be there to meet you, Jules," Curly said, getting up and following him to the door. "Meanwhile good luck to you."

And Curly was at the Depot to meet Jules Belanger when he came back from Bellevue that Tuesday night. And Belanger admitted that he had been treated better than he deserved, perhaps, for it being his first offence, the authorities had been most lenient. However, beaver pelts were something that he was not going to traffic in again. And he meant that.

In October, the Liberal government at Ottawa decided to go to the country. On November 7th it was re-elected, George Casey, Liberal, contested the local riding with Dr. Misner, Conservative, the sitting member, but was defeated.

As the year closed, Curly was nominated for Township council for the second term, but he did not make a speech. A more sophisticated man than he'd had better wait until some other time when he might have something important to say. His first year in council had taught him, if nothing else, that there is more to municipal politics than is apparent from reading about them.

As though to make up for any lack of extraordinary or exciting events in the previous year, nineteen hundred and one burst upon Curly Brown with the knowledge that an addition to his family might be expected sometime in October. It was welcome news, for already having a son to carry on his name, he wished for a daughter. Hazel likewise hoped for a girl. Back in township council for a second year, and still chairman of the roads and bridges committee Curly could look back on some progress in road improvement. But all he had done for his efforts to give the Depot its walks was an estimate of the cost. But he was not through yet. If there was nothing in the March estimates to meet the cost of the walks, he meant to ask the reason.

The South African war still raged. The Boers were making it difficult for the British armies to cope with them, to catch up with them. Mafeking was under siege. The mother country, needled by press and public, was pouring men into the war zone. Canada was keeping pace. Late in January Queen Victoria died, and her son, the Prince of Wales succeeded her as King Edward VII. The schools closed for the queen's funeral and the coronation of the new king.

In the Curly Brown household at Hard Acres, the Easter week visit of Hazel's parents was being awaited. Curly and Hazel planned that if Peter passed his Easter examinations, he would return to Bellevue with them, and continue his schooling there and afterwards go to college. But Peter had other ideas on the matter.

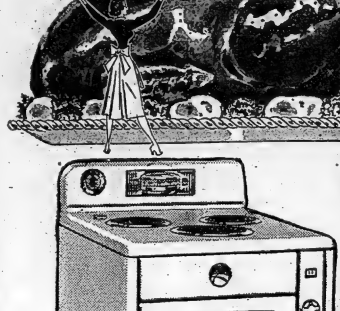
"It's the wish of your mother and me that you go to school in Bellevue," Curly told Peter as they sat before the fireplace one evening. "Your grandparents would like to have you stay with them, and then when you're through there and I can afford it, we'd like to have you go to college to study medicine—to become a doctor."

"But, dad, I don't want to be a doctor," Peter said. Then, bravely, "did your dad tell you what you must be when you grew up?"

"Yes, he wanted me to be a school teacher."

"And—were you?"

"Of course I was—for a time anyway."



"Then why aren't you a teacher now? That's what your dad wanted you to be, wasn't it?"

Police Begin Large-Scale Evacuation of Residents After Rioting Kills Fifty Persons

CASABLANCA, Morocco (CP)—Police today began a large-scale evacuation of French and other European residents from native-isolated quarters of this Arab-dominated trouble-torn North African metropolis after bloody rioting killed 50 persons.

The evacuees were moved to safer residential quarters.

Latest police figures indicated 50 persons including eight European Arabs had been killed in the widespread rioting Sunday and Monday and that 150 others had been wounded including seven European.

Reuters placed the wounded figure at more than 300 and said 60 were in hospitals. The news agency reported eight Europeans were killed and 18 were wounded.

To prevent new outbreaks of rioting the French flew 400 foreign Legion troops to this city of 800,000.

The Legionnaires were brought in four planes from Algiers, 400 miles from this city. Tanks and armored cars patrolled the streets and tightly ringed the Arab quarter where the rioting first broke out Sunday.

Some of the Europeans were so brutally attacked that even their sex could not be determined. Others were torn to pieces and burned.

The mobs, whipped up by leaders' promises that the murder last week of a labor leader in the adjoining protectorate of Tunisia, gathered weapon available.

They wielded razor blades fixed on sticks, shoeborns sharpened to dagger-sharpness and swung heavy iron balls on chains to crack skulls. Others grabbed bricks and knuckle dusters.

Three labor leaders who yesterday demanded the murder of "traitors" to the Moroccan independence movement were among about 150 persons arrested by police.

The disorders, which reached nearly revolutionary proportions, broke in sympathy with Tunisian workers whose leader, Farhat Hached, was machine-gunned and beaten to death.

Nationalist newspapers called for a boycott of French-owned food copies of hand bills demanding the murder of "traitors" who failed to support the Moroccan independence movement.

Demonstrators attacked a European couple and their three small children today as they drove in a truck along a street. The woman was hurt on the head and her husband on the knee, but they managed to reach their home with the children.

Police laid virtual siege to headquarters of the General Labor Federation, reported to be pro-Communist-controlled, where several hundred demonstrators took refuge.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis— Very mild weather still persists in Ontario. However, cooler air with daytime temperatures near or 30 will likely move into northern regions late today. This air will arrive in the wake of a low Pressure area located north of Lake Superior and moving toward Hudson Bay.

In southern regions no very great temperature change is expected today or Wednesday, and skies are expected to remain mostly cloudy.

Brigadier Walsh Leaves Brigade For New Post

HANNOVER, Germany (CP)—Brig. Geoffrey Walsh, CBE, DSO, handed over command of Canada's 27th brigade to his successor and said "leaving this brigade feels like losing a part of my heart."

The St. Catharines, Ont., officer brought the brigade to Germany in November last year and was succeeded by Brig. J. E. C. Pangman, DSO, of Toronto.

In his final action with the brigade Monday, Brig. Walsh briefed commanding officers on the operational role of the 27th. He said that in an operational group it must always be aware that it could be required to fight at any time on short notice."

Brig. Walsh and Mrs. Walsh left by train for southern Europe for a three-week holiday. He returns to Canada early next year to take up his new duties as director-general of military training at defence headquarters, Ottawa.

Nine Stranded For Tenth Day On Battered Reef

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP)—Nine coast guard lighthouse men spent their 10th day of storm-imperiled isolation on a bleak, wave-battered reef off the California-Oregon coast today with the storm's fury the worst in the North Pacific.

Three lightkeepers, a relief crew and two coastguardsmen were stranded Nov. 30 on 140-foot high Saint George Reef light.

Raging seas and high winds prevent them from lowering their three-ton relief crew by cable or attempts to reach the reef, seven miles off the rocky coast northwest of here.

The Coast Guard says the reef on which they are stuck is one of the most perilous spots off the California coast.

Relaxed winds offer some hope to the stranded men.

The storm, due to hit the coast late today, is not expected to be as severe as last week's blast, in which 14 persons lost their lives in California and Oregon.

Love Letters of Soviet Lothario Reveal Wife, Nineteen Fiancees

MOSCOW (AP) — Don Juan won a measure of immortality as a breaker of female hearts and it looks like Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vyshinsky is doing pretty well along that line himself. The former still in a long way from the Don's record 1,065 conquests.

Vyshinsky's wife won his share of fame today with the publication of love letters written to her by Vyshinsky when he was second secretary of the Soviet embassy in Rome.

The journal discovered that Peter Petrovich has 19 different fiancees all eagerly awaiting his embraces in 19 different cities of Russia, that he has one official wife in Leningrad and, in addition, maintains a residence with his ex-wife in Moscow.

Who is this gay Lothario? It seems he is a 51-year-old senior inspector of the central accounting office of the Soviet ministry of higher education. His neighbors and co-workers esteem him as a respectable gentleman.

Kokushkin travels 11 months out of the year in order, ostensibly, to verify accounts of the Soviet Union's universities. On his travels he courts the girls, and they keep file of his love letters. He has been married for many years, but his address book and the letters he received them to the Literary Gazette.

Men Escape With Bag Filled With Diamonds

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Donald Hurd, about 45, a downtown jeweler was shot to death today and two employees were badly beaten when two armed men held up Hurd's store. Police said the men apparently escaped with a small bag filled with diamonds.

Injured were Fred Volker, 45, clerk, and Fred Bartsch, a watch repairman. They suffered severe head injuries.

Hurd's wife, Doris, in the store when the holdup men entered about 10:30 a.m. EST, suffered only shock.

Salvatore Cassata, 31, a book keeper, told police he saw one of the men shoot Hurd down coldly and without comment.

Man Appeared Crazy

"It was horrible," Cassata said. "The one man, in blood, appeared crazy. He shot Mr. Hurd. He never gave him a chance."

Police Inspector Commissioner Michael Noeppel began scouring the city in search of the men.

Cassata said he was in the store when the men entered. He said they forced him into Hurd's office, where the shooting occurred. Then, he said he was dragged into an adjoining office and was bound up to a chair.

He said he could hear the cries of pain as Volker and Bartsch were attacked.

Doe Kidnapped

MONTREAL (CP) — Police sought today thieves who kidnapped a young doe from an SPCA compound last week-end.

The doe was taken to the compound after society inspectors found it Nov. 27 last locked in the back seat of a battered car, already loaded with carcasses of dead deer.

The SPCA official said the theft was committed "out of spite simply because we ordered the animal in the first place."

BUFFALO JEWELER SHOT TO DEATH IN ARMED ROBBERY

The continent's curiosity has been aroused by Lady Wender, Richmond's "talking" horse. Its fame credit the animal with giving them a clue to a Massachusetts child, missing for nearly two years. Hard to believe? Associated Press reporter Paul Duke thought so too, so he paid a visit to Lady's stall for an "interview." Here's what he found.

'Talking Horse' Flabbergasts Reporter by Correct Answers Of Name, Birthplace, Salary

By PAUL DUKE

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—So you're skeptical about Lady Wonder, Richmond's incredible "talking" horse?

So was this reporter when he went out to "interview" her.

A horse that can predict the future and reel off facts like a child prodigy? Bunk, I thought.

But after a half-hour "chat" with Lady I came away from her stall wondering whether fact isn't sometimes more incredible than fiction to horse sense.

Lots of other folk are wondering the same thing now that Lady has been credited with providing the "tip" that led to discovery of the body of Danny Matson, a four-year-old youngster from Quincy, Mass., home for nearly two years.

Since Sunday, Lady's mistress, Claudia Fonda, has been deluged with calls from people who want the 37-year-old horse quizzed on everything from stolen bicycles to wildcat oil wells.

Mrs. Fonda won't take the reins off Lady's temperamental head. Lady is not at her best unless the questioner is on hand to get the answer straight from the horse's mouth.

Lady flabbergasted me when she correctly answered most of the 15 questions I fired at her.

She does her answering by pole ing in chin at levers extending out from tiny slides containing numbers and letters. When she touches the levers, the numbers and letters shoot up, spelling out the answers.

Mrs. Fonda stood beside Lady, repeating the questions into the mare's ear.

Lady started out perfectly by spelling out my name. When I asked her where I was born, she spelled out Bethlehem, Pa.—the right answer. When I asked her how much money I make weekly, she gave the exact dollar-and-cents figure.

She fumbled it when I asked her where I went to school. But two questions later, she named the school in a delayed-action reply.

Lady has been playing this question-and-answer game for more than 20 years. The folks who visit her at Mrs. Fonda's small New York state cottage can get her to spell out words for $1.

Lady's trick is a tip off system between Lady and her mistress. But she has answered questions Mrs. Fonda didn't know, such as my birthday.

How does Lady do it?

Lady, alone, won't tell.

She slowly spelled out "m-I-o-d," I asked her if she'd like to be a horse.

"Yes," came the answer.

Reports of Bacteriological Warfare Committed by U.S. Featured at Peking Talks

By Gerard Filion

You may remember that the Chinese delegation at the Red Cross General Assembly which took place in Toronto recently made the devil's own fuss about bacteriological warfare in Korea. They even brought all sorts of documents with them to prove that American forces had used bacteriological weapons against the civilian population in Korea and Manchuria.

No doubt about it, this question got a thorough going-over at the Peking peace conference. Every speaker made one or two references to it and many of them launched forth into the most violent denunciations.

As for the atrocities which American soldiers are supposed to have committed, the Chinese distributed to the delegates a report prepared by an international scientific commission made up of six reports.

A REPORT NO ONE HAS READ

The main body of the report covers 60 pages but there are numerous appendices in addition. I had taken the trouble to read and study the report prepared by the International Association of Democratic Jurists and I took the trouble to study this report in great detail. I was probably the only delegate to do so. Afterwards, I questioned many of the delegates but not one of them had read a page of it.

I must admit before reading the report I was almost convinced by the validity of the charges made by the Chinese. I had heard them repeated with such force and conviction and I had visited the exhibit of parachutes, bombs, files, rats and mice which had been dropped over Manchuria and Korea by American fliers. And, what's more, I had been told that these were proofs of the truth. Therefore, when I began reading the report, I was favorably disposed towards it. When I got to the last line, I was less convinced than ever.

The report is based on hearsay evidence, furnished solely by North Korean and Chinese authorities on extremely suspect premises. Here's a sample. It indicates the weakness of the whole documentation of the proofs which these experts expect us to accept.

"Two lieutenants of the voluntary Chinese forces in Korea found a dense concentration of fleas in a useless hillock near Hsiao Yang. The fleas were grouped in such a manner as to suggest that they had been sown by a container which had fallen slowly from a considerable elevation. In the vicinity they saw signs of the container. Surprised at the density of the concentration which darkened the earth and blackened their overcoats, the two young men, who were later called by the commission to testify, went back to their billets and brought reinforcements to destroy the fleas by lighting a fire with pine branches and gasoline. In this case, the soldiers were protected in several ways and their prompt action prevented the spread of the fleas which would have inevitably populated areas. Analyses made by the Sino-Korean health services show that the fleas carried plague virus and that they were human fleas.

TO NATO MEETING

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States will send a 44-man delegation, headed by the secretaries of state, treasury and defence, to the Atlantic Pact council meeting in Paris Monday. The conference will review Western defence preparations which call for 50 divisions by the end of the year.

PEARSON GIVES HOUSE REPORT ON U.N., KOREA

Says India's Motion May Lead to Armistice

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson says India's United Nations resolution" on the key prisoners-of-war issue may lead to an armistice in Korea. Then again it may not.

"I would not like to give odds on one side of the question," he said in the Commons Monday in a three hour-long speech covering the high spots of recent international events. It was the minister's first major lecture in the Commons since his appointment as president of the United Nations assembly.

In any event, said Mr. Pearson, the Indian resolution has been accepted for discussion. Supported by all non-Communist countries, it now would be the basis for any new proposals of armistice negotiations. And having been accepted by Washington, it had become the policy of the unified command in Korea.

Good Germ Warfare Story

In his capacity as UN assembly president, he had sent it to the North Korean and Red Chinese governments with a letter appealing for them to accept the proposal in the hope for an "armistice and eventual peace" in Korea. He had hinted that the "eventual" might be soon.

The Indian resolution would set up a four-power repatriation commission to handle Red prisoners-of-war once they were released, and to arbitrate the disposition of each question.

Mr. Pearson said the UN has reached a "very difficult" stage in its development, one that may prove a critical "turning point." There was uneasiness and low morale among international civil servants working for UN. And the fact some have-not countries lined up against the "west posed a problem which might be as great a threat to peace as Korea itself.

Not Time to Weaken

But this was no time to weaken support of the international machinery because it has falsified some of its fears. Canada was founded when the charter was drafted." UN has been a mirror reflecting the split world of today.

In his verbal tour of the International scene the minister made these other observations:

1. Communist Chinese Treaty Organization building in Russia has been matched by similar strength has eased international tension. Though there is nothing to warrant a rest on the arms race, "at any rate for the long pull. . .we may decide to strike a somewhat slower rate."

No Polley Change

Russia is devoting more of her wealth to the heavy industries and equipment to strengthen her forces. There has been no change of policy on the part of Russia in the world of United States.

Governor Minister McCann said the government has decided to limit its policy to "strategic" exports to nations, whether publicly or privately-owned, to Iron Curtain countries.

It would be government policy to make national television available to as many people as possible through "co - operation between private enterprise." The government would consider applications for private - enterprise stations in areas now not served or not to be served by the publicly-owned CBC.

Two Toy-Gun Girls Nabbed by Police In Bronte Holdup

Restaurant Owner Slugged By Three Members of Gang

BRONTE (CP) — Three young thugs brandishing toy pistols held up the owner of a restaurant early today, slugged him on the head and robbed him of $100 in cash and $200 in tobacco and cigarettes.

Besides escaping in a car parked outside they also raided the living quarters of Sidgero Yamamoto, 38, who lives in the rear of the restaurant, and stole a radio.

Two girls are being held for questioning in the case. They were picked up a few hours later after police spotted them at Cooksville. They were caught at gunpoint after roadblocks were set up following the holdup of the Riverside Lunch close to this town five miles east of Hamilton.

Police said one of the girls was found crouched in a field with her cost pulled over her head. The other was found when the car crept into the cab of a parked transport truck.

Police are questioning the girls; one of whom said she came from Toronto and the other from Hamilton, about the men who slugged the 39-year-old Mr. Yamamoto and tied him to the rear living room floor.

Mrs. Nadu Tobato, 36, who works in the restaurant also was tied up by the three men.

Police said three youths and two girls jumped from a car and rushed into the restaurant. They ignored customers, ordered Mr. Yamamoto and Mrs. Tobato to lie on the floor, grabbed a cash box containing about $100 in cash, a radio and other articles stolen from a bedroom at the rear of the restaurant, and were back in the car.

Mr. Yamamoto said the three men walked into the restaurant and ordered hamburgers which they ate in the waiting car. When other customers left they came in again and ordered pie. He was slugged from behind when he turned to get the gun.

Number of Whites Joins Campaign Of Defiance

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—White South Africans, led by Patrick Duncan, son of a former governor-general, for the first time joined forces with native-led campaign of defiance against Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan's white supremacy and racial segregation laws.

Seven whites were arrested Monday for entering a nearby Negro settlement without permits and defying orders to leave. They included 18 Indians — including a son of the late Mahatma M. Gandhi — and 14 Negroes who joined in the meeting.

The group of protesting whites was led by Patrick Duncan, son of a former governor-general, who walked on crutches into the settlement. Duncan broke his leg in a meeting.

He was accompanied by Manilal Gandhi, second son of famed Indian leader and a resident of Durban. Duncan's wife, Alison, is head of the Bank of England director, Sir Patrick Ashley Cooper, watched as the group arrived in the settlement, where Duncan addressed a crowd of about 1,000. The police arrested Duncan, Gandhi and the others as they started to leave the settlement.

Doctor Says Space Travel Safe Sees This Generation on Trips

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Careful pop, don't kid your youngster about his space suit and ray gun. He may run off and join the rocket ship.

That's the word from Hubertus Strughold, doctor of space medicine at the University of Texas School of Aviation.

Strughold said children of today will see the time when they can take a 50-hour rocket trip to the moon.

The big problem, Strughold told a group of medical students Monday, is obtaining enough power for space travel. But he predicted that will be solved "in time for the younger generation to witness it."

Don't worry about people being able to take such a trip. The doctor said the science of space medicine, although still in its infancy, has succeeded to the point where space doctors can get passengers to their destinations alive if the rocket makers can get the ships there.

The doctor painted a fascinating picture of what awaits the men who have encountered at about 56,000 feet above the earth — dry, rarified air.

Dr. Strughold discounts the idea of weird-looking moon people and war-like Martians in space suits.

Actually, the space doctor believes, only certain kinds of bacteria or — at most — a low form of animal life exists on the planets.

Hearing Opens On Application To Jom Project

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal power commission opens hearings today on the New York state power authority's application to join Canada in constructing an estimated $450,000,000 power project on the St. Lawrence river.

A total of 29 parties have asked and been granted FPC permission of intervene. Some support the authority's application for a licence while others oppose it.

The authority seeks permission to join the province of Ontario in the hydro-electric project, which is calculated to develop 12,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of energy a year.

It would be built on the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence, from Massena, N.Y., and Cornwall, Ont.

Leon Keyserling, chairman of the power authority or New York, told reporters an annual saving of $65,-000,000 in New York users of electricity will result if the state is permitted to develop its share of developments on the St. Lawrence and Niagara rivers.

First Witness

Burton said he would so testify at the hearing. He was scheduled as the first witness. The hearing probably will require three days.

The Niagara proposal is not before the commission in the present case. It is, however, a part of the authority's power development.

1. Some $33,000,000 by using water rather than fuel for generating purposes at both sites.

2. Future development, instead of private, would contribute an additional $40,500,000 in savings. In both cases, he said, the economy would be guaranteed by contract for the users of power.

3. An integrated transmission system, operating under rules set by the New York public service commission, would provide a further saving of $32,000,000.

State Would Not Compete

Burton said if private utilities are willing and able to build transmission lines "in such a way that all the people may benefit," New York state would welcome this respect with the private interests.

Burton, in reviewing the background of New York's plan to develop the St. Lawrence, said recent years in the history of the power authority clarity and guarantee that the people through New York will receive an equitable share of the yield. It estimated at 2,300,000,000 kilowatt hours a year on the American side of the St. Lawrence River.

An equal yield will be produced on the Canadian side, Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission has already been designated the Canadian agency.

HIT-RUN DRIVER DAMAGES CAR

Charles Thorn, Camilton Rd., reported to police a hit-and-run driver had damaged the fender and running board of his car and then sped away without stopping. Mr. Thorn said he was driving on Station Street when the other car brushed his vehicle, jamming the fender into the wheel. He was unable to get the licence number or description of the other car.

Elvins' Condition Still Critical

Hospital authorities today reported the condition of Donald Elvins, 30, East Main Street, injured in Saturday's three-car highway accident which killed three persons, as still being very critical. Elvins suffered a fracture of skull and internal injuries and has not regained consciousness since the accident.

The condition of Wayne De-Mille, 19, of Holloway, and Reginald Bunbury, 35, of Tweed, was said improved. DeMille also suffered a fractured skull.

Francis Reid, 17, of Holloway; Arthur Crossley, 31, of Belleville, and Robert Jones, 37, of Stirling, are all instantly killed in the highway crash near Tweed, which sent five other persons to hospital.

Kenneth Graham New President

Members of the Bridge Street United Church Young People's Union held their election and installation of officers for the new year at their regular meeting held Monday evening.

President - elect for the new year is Kenneth Graham. Other officers are: Vice-president, Mary Emerson; press secretary, Shirley Connolly; treasurer, C. Harry; group leaders, Barbara Sagar and Louie Pound; recreation committee, Bernice Bell, Don Hall, Don Vance and Ruth Gunsolus.

Rev. R. H. Mills led the Bible discussion and after reviewing the four gospels spoke to the group on the Messianic ministry. The meeting was concluded with the singing of a roll of carol week's Christmas party.

Farm Forum Notes

In Hastings County, one-day farm forums are being arranged across the topic, "Why Price Supports?". An aggregate of 61 people took part.

All groups agreed that price supports are necessary to make farm income stable. Melrose forum says "organization is what we must have. Individuality is being pushed out. The law of supply and demand is on the way out." Foxboro as soon as the demand is strong enough to demand a price some smart alec finds a substitute.

Consumer Benefited

On the second question all four agreed that the consumer would also be benefited by higher prices "when one group is prosperous it enriches the whole community", said Melrose. The two groups felt consumer receives benefits: consumer food subsidies in price and with some assurance of a more or less steady income farmers can purchase the products of industry thus keeping the market assured."

It was generally realized that even efficient farmers need price supports because it is by support that makes for efficiency.

All four forums agreed the broadcast was good and the subject a timely one.

Many Soldiers Returning Home From Overseas

Canadian soldiers from both Europe and Korea will be arriving in Halifax this week and next week, Army Headquarters Central Command at Oakville has announced.

Slather-wick, Bannockburn.

Korean War veterans who arrived at Halifax Monday were Lt. Cpl. N. Curtis, 288 Ann Street, Belleville; Pte. Ronald Saldrea, Napanee; Cpl. H. R. Casselman, 16 Leopold street, Trenton and Pte. Ross Dunkley, 26 Campbell Street, Trenton.

Dairy Industry Must do Better Selling Job

—Jardine

The dairy industry must do a better job of selling its product, members of Hastings County Federation of Agriculture were told at their annual meeting at Stirling last week. Speaking at the meeting was Robert Jardine, secretary-manager of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association.

Illustrating his point, Mr. Jardine pointed out that the fruit growers in the United States had done in selling fruit to the city people. In 13 years the citrus growers had doubled their sales of fruit. Apple growers in the state of Ohio grew turnover to advertising.

In comparison the Canadian dairy industry spends approximately one fifteenth per cent for advertising.

Turning to marketing, the speaker stated Canada was producing 30,000 more hogs per week than the domestic market could absorb. As result of misguided production, 240,000 more hogs were produced in 1952 than in 1951, for which three million dollars was never received.

"Research into potential markets would overcome this situation," he said.

He said co-operatives were efficiently run they would return more of the consumer's dollar to the producer. The marketing board was doing everything possible to get the farmer a fair price, he said.

"With more intelligent use of the tools at our disposal, they will pay us dividends," he concluded.

President H. Varty outlined the Federation's activities of the past year. All officers were re-elected.

A feature of the meeting was the presentation of a gift set to Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Dalrymple. Mr. Dalrymple is county agricultural representative.

PLANE HITS HOUSE

STETTLER, Alta. (CP)—Five persons, one an infant, escaped injury at the week-end when a light plane crashed into the side of a Stettler home after attempting to take off from a highway just west of the town, 100 miles southeast of Edmonton. The house of Mr. and Mrs. D. Kistner was badly damaged, a wall being caved in by the impact. But the couple and their baby were unhurt. Pilot Roy H. Burmaster of Edmonton and an unidentified passenger climbed unscathed from the aircraft, also badly wrecked.

Obituary

GORDON WILFRED JONES
(Contributed)

Bancroft—North Hastings lost a highly esteemed resident in the death of Gordon Wilfred Jones on Nov. 19. Born in Port Perry, Ontario November 19, 1892, he spent his early years there. His schooling was completed in Toronto and his early employment began with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, followed by a period of employment with the City Of Toronto.

In 1910 Mr. Jones joined his father, the late Charles W. Jones, who had come to Harcourt, Ontario, in 1909 to establish a pulpwood and lumber business. In 1913, after a short period of residence at Baptiste Lake, Ontario, the family moved to Bancroft, Ontario. Mr. Jones, with his father, pioneered the development of the pulpwood industry in Central and Eastern Ontario, at the same time conducting a lumber business. From 1923 to the time of his death Mr. Jones' activities were confined to the pulpwood industry.

Mr. Jones forsook, and worked forthright hours, with the interment of this country. His fyles reveal years of service in his part toward projects which have now become realities. Well known for his charitable deeds, his kindly and understanding assistance to those in need of anything but fortune, he will be long remembered by the people of this country.

A life member of Bancroft Masonic Lodge No. 462, a Knight of Ramsees Temple of the Shrine, one of six to attain twenty-five year membership of Coun No. 83, Royal Order of Jesters, Mr. Jones was also a member of the local Lions Club.

Surviving are his widow, Arlene Marie Jones, two sons, Douglas Gordon and Donald Bruce Jones, both of Bancroft, New York. Hazel L. Stackhouse, Ottawa, Evelyn E. Jones, Bancroft, and one brother, Robert Grant, New York.

ROYAL THOMAS WARREN

Marmora—The death occurred in Belleville General Hospital early on Saturday afternoon of Royal Thomas Warren in the age of 84. Although his health became affected about two years ago, until that time he had been most robust and "Tom" as he was affectionately known still exemplified that industrious nature which had marked his life. To very few is it vouchsafed to pass the last days of a long life in a home removed but a few feet from where they first saw the light of day and such was the experience of Tom Warren.

He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Warren, who were Hastings county Marmora's early residents and his death removes one of Marmora's native sons who had a great interest in the happenings of the village from boyhood days on. He was a painter by profession and in addition to having contracts of his own, was employed for some summers in that capacity by the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited. His interest in municipal affairs was shown in his election to the Public School Board and to Marmora village council for two years.

He was a member of the former Methodist congregation but St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora. Fraternally he was the eldest member of Marmora A.F. and A.M. 222 and was secretary for a number of years. The now defunct Marmora Lodge of the Canadian Order of Oddfellows.

He was interested in the Marmora District Chamber of Commerce and expressed his delight at the village's progress since its inception a few years ago, welcoming at the same time, the advent of the district's newest industry that of the Marmora Steel Corporation.

His wife Eva — former Annie Pressley predeceased him nineteen years ago. He is survived by one daughter Gertrude who has kept home for him since his wife's death.

The funeral took place on Monday leaving his late residence for service at St. Andrew's United Church at 2.45 p.m. with Rev. E. C. Crawford B.A. B.D. officiating. Interment followed in Marmore Protestant cemetery.

5 Escape Unharmed

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A family of five escaped unharmed Monday night when a B-29 bomber propeller crashed down on their home in a Bakersfield residential section.

The blade sheared off a corner of the home, slashed through a bedroom and partially buried itself in the ground. Mr. and Mrs. George Cowie and their three children were at dinner in an adjoining room.

Four Belleville Rinks Enjoy Kingston Game

Despite the fact that the city has no curling rink, there are enough enthusiasts to have the game along hoping for the day when a new curling rink will be constructed for the use of everyone in the district. This was proven on Saturday last when sixteen from this city were guests of the Kingston Curling Club for a series of friendly games. Although the boys have had no practice this season they were only defeated by one shot in two games, the score being 37-36.

Every available comfort is to be had at the Kingston club. The ice was in perfect condition, the clubhouse warm and cheery and the hospitality of the members knew no bounds. It was a most delightful day.

At the conclusion of the afternoon's games the players were privileged to view a film on the 1952 Brier competition in Winnipeg and it was amusing at the accuracy of some of the shots. Closeups were given and the film was thoroughly enjoyed. An excellent buffet supper was served by the women members of the club after which the boys enjoyed another friendly game with the Kingston rinks.

W. C. Gault, president of the local club, expressed the pleasure of the invitation extended and hoped that the Belleville club would be able to return the favor privilege later in the season . The score:—

First Game

Belleville — M. Smeathers, D. MacKinnon, S. Bakay, W. Gault (Skip 8); Kingston — R. Turney, H. Frayn, G. Hooper, H. Edgar (Skip 11).

Belleville — R. Booth, M. Moffat, C. Broomfield, H. Fuke (Skip 6); Kingston — C. Tooze, J. Richardson, D. White, R. M. Allan (Skip 9).

Belleville — A. Anderson, M. Endicott, A. Mund, J. McFee (Skip 3); Kingston — P. Kettle, J. Newman, T. Bowling, J. P. Walsh (Skip 7).

Belleville — K. Beatie, D. Coghill, J. Cowan, S. Goodwin (Skip 4); Kingston — A. Mills, G. Stuart, H. Buck, W. Conley (Skip 6).

Second Game

Belleville — Gault, 8; Fuke, 5; McFee, 6; Goodwin, 5; Kingston — Allan, 6; Walsh 3; Edgar, 6; Neas 7.

Totals — Belleville 36; Kingston 37.

CHARGE DISMISSED

TORONTO (CP)—A charge of dangerous driving against John Mc-Donnell, 24, of Toronto was dismissed Monday for lack of evidence. McConnell was charged after an accident Nov. 22 in which Charles Harden, 77, and his 75-year-old wife, Anne, were struck by a car and killed.

Brief History Of Trade Fairs Told Rotarians

James T. Davis, secretary-manager of the local Chamber of Commerce, brought to the noon luncheon of the Rotary Club on Monday. Mr Davis accompanied his son on the 1952 Trade Fair with a film.

Explaining some of the purpose of this annual event, the speaker described, as well, a brief history of trade fairs down through the ages.

"On the historical side," Mr. Davis said, "legend goes back to about the year 1200 B.C., telling of Chinese fairs, where merchants sold in organized markets. Other fairs were held in India, Arabia and Phoenicia about the same time. Trade fairs," he continued, "were also held in Biblical times. In the year 575 B.C., a trade fair has been recorded as being held in the city of Tyre."

"Romans had trade fairs and by 421 A.D. there were various fairs in Italy, and in the eighth century, the Germans organized fairs at Aix La Chapelle and Verdun, later other European fairs were held at Champagne and Brie, France had fairs at Champagne and Brie."

"In more modern times, there are such well-known fairs as Leipzig, Paris, Milan, Cass Blanca and Turkey, but since the British Empire Trade Fair, begun in 1915, has proven extremely successful and so, in the year 1948 Canada, in order to maintain its international trade, began its own successful series of Trade Fairs."

Following this history on trade fairs, the speaker showed the film on the 1952 Trade Fair held at Toronto. How Mackinaw operated the projector.

In the business end of the meeting, Court Miller, Richard Winthrop, Frank Tulk and Joseph Rothwell were presented with birthday roses. President George Campbell announced the six new members will be invested into the club at the next meeting. It was further announced a directors meeting will be held at the home of the president at 7.30 p.m. Thursday.

The speaker was introduced by the president and thanks were extended to Mr. Davis and Mr. Macklem by Stan Hagerman.

CLERKS PLAY DETECTIVE

KITCHENER (CP)—Two store clerks playing detective Monday foiled the efforts of a man to steal an $80 postal order stolen from Tara post office in September, 1951. While one clerk wrapped two small articles the other rushed to check the list of the post office. The man became suspicious and left the store.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices continued weak in early afternoon stock market trading today.

Industrials and golds showed small losses on the exchange's index. Base metals were mixed but western oils lost strength.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 566,000 shares.

Senior golds and secondary issues weakened, with most losses in junior producers. Delnite, Sullivan and Macassa slipped while Campbell added pennies. Price changes in prospects were small as Gunnar and Lake Wasa gained and Cronor and Queenston slipped. Holding companies continued weak.

Base metals balanced a narrow list of gains and losses as Canstar, United Keno and Cons. Smelters gained and East Sullivan, Barvue and Noranda slipped.

Western oils losses ranged to about 15 cents and gains to 25 cents. Canadian Atlantic, Orlibell and Royalite rose while Bailey Selburn, Britalta, New Superior and Home Oil slipped.

Canadians Spent Only 4 Hours In Cold Army Says

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian troops waited nine hours for Gen. Eisenhower's arrival in Korea but they spent only about half of that time in the cold, the army says.

A telegram received from Brig. M. P. Bogert, commander of the 25th brigade, gave his version of the incident which got wide-spread publicity and which brought an apology from the general.

The telegram said the Canadians arrived at the airstrip at 6 a.m., had coffee in heated tents and went on parade at 8:30 a.m. and rehearsed with troops of other countries until 10:45 a.m.

Then they were taken to tents and had lunch at 11:30. At 1 p.m. forty per cent on parade and rehearsed until the general's arrival at 3 p.m. and his departure half an hour later.

Campney Calls On Liberals To Beat Drums

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General Campney today called on Liberals to beat the publicity drums louder about the party's accomplishments.

"Away with our modesty!" he urged in an address prepared for delivery before the Liberal Business Men's Club here.

"Let us," he said, "be as noisy as the Tories, as repetitious of the CCF and as politically-immodest as the Social Creditors, but let us above all tell the people of this country what we have done."

If Canadians know the facts of the Liberal record, Mr. Campney said, the party need have no fear of the outcome of the next federal election.

The newly-named minister said the Progressive Conservative cry of "it's time for a change" is only an attempt to capitalize on the victory slogan of the Republicans in the United States election last month.

"The Progressive Conservatives pretty hard up for a battle-cry and without any constructive policy worth mentioning, are seeking to derive some benefit from the recent election to the south.

"This would seem to be a rather sorry reflection on their lack of constructive policy — or interests of the Canadian people. . . .

"If it is time to . . . perhaps . . . it's time that the Tories changed their leader and found a policy."

Accused Admits Torture Slaying Of Woman

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Marine Corps air base reported today a sailor had confessed the torture slaying of a pretty, still unidentified, whose nude body was found Sunday at a lonely spot north of Miami.

The provost marshal's office in the dead is Wilbur J. Whaite, 20, of Coupeville, Wash.

Whaite was arrested Nov. 7 on a charge of hitting a Miami beach woman with a brick. He was at liberty on $2,000 bond in that case.

Modern Detection Methods May Yield More Iron Ore Deposits Group Told

Advanced study, by two government officials, of the Hastings County area may yield future discoveries of iron ore deposits. "Scientific coverage of the area by modern instruments of metal detection could lead to further iron ore discoveries in the Hastings County district," Dr. M. E. Hurst, Provincial geologist told members of the Engineering Institute of Canada (Belleville branch) here, last night. Dr. Hurst, along with the Deputy Minister of Mines for the Province of Ontario Mr. H. C. Rickaby, addressed the Institute meeting on the geological aspects of Hastings.

Beneath the layers of rock, shale and limestone which cover the surface, through the "overburden", down again through the paleozoic limestone, and into the precambrian limestone, may be hidden rich deposits of iron ore. According to Dr. Hurst, "this type of succession very often hides the deposits of this metal."

Survey by Dip-Needle

"Through the application of modern equipment," Dr. Hurst explained, "the new operation at Marmora and Deloro you are all familiar, has been brought along. We now know there are iron ore deposits in this area. By means of such modern methods, as the dip-needle survey, we are very often able to determine the presence of the ore under the limestone."

In describing the geological aspects, Dr. Hurst outlined the layers of shale and rock formation, pointing out, through the use of maps, the significance of rock which is the carrier of iron ore.

Also the succession will yield other materials, such as mica and fluorspar. But in the metallic field, the yield would be chiefly iron along with some radioactive uranilite."

Early Discovery Mining

The other speaker, the Deputy Minister of Mines, Mr. Rickaby, explained he had been out of the geology field for over 12 years and he suggested Dr. Hurst could explain the geological aspects of the area better than himself.

He did outline some of the mining history of the area, however. "The first provincial assay laws of this country were established in the city of Belleville in 1896," Mr. Rickaby commented. The ministry mentioned Dr. H. E. Burwash was then the office here and who, he said, was instrumental in obtaining Dr. Hurst's and his own job.

"Right at your back door, and this has been recognized fact for some time," he said, "you have the greatest variety of minerals available in the country."

"If I remember correctly, the first gold was discovered in this area in 1866 by a man named Powell. The discovery was made somewhere in the Madoc area. This resulted in the opening of the Cordova and Deloro mines. Surprisingly enough," the speaker said, "Deloro once was a gold mine. There of course were several other discoveries made and worked. In 1890, considerable gold was around with the industrial minerals, such as mica, being of little importance.

"Now, today, the interest in this area centres around iron ore. This area, along with other mineral accomplishments had the first blast furnace, established here in 1800. When the Lake Superior iron mines came into the public eye, interest in the iron for this district languished considerably. But now, with the application of modern scientific methods in Marmora, interest in iron ore has once again been fanned into flame in the Hastings County area."

WHERE YOUR MONEY GOES

Amateur statisticians and budget-conscious housewives have been deprived of a hobby which must have given them many hours of mathematical satisfaction in the last few years. For the last six months Canada's cost-of-living index has not varied by more than .1 per cent.

However, the application of a new index must have helped to revive their interest somewhat — presuming, of course, that there are some citizens outside of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics who profess to know how a cost-of-living index works and how the new works differently from the old.

In any event the DBS seems to have felt that this uncommon period of stability in household budgeting has left a gap of interest, and it has come up with some cost-of-living "averages" to whet the interest of hearth-side bookkeepers. One feature of the new index is that it presents a type classification of family spending.

Previously the portion of family income spent on tobacco and alcoholic beverages had not been included. Now both items are considered and it is revealed that out of each dollar the average family spends on goods and service 4.2 cents is spent on alcoholic beverages and 2.9 cents on tobacco.

Now there is no attempt make to distinguish between luxuries and necessities, nor to assess the desirability of any particular type of expenditure from a moral or social viewpoint in computing the index. In the monthly household "basket of goods" just about every sort of expenditure is taken into account. For comparison the Bureau has recently provided a breakdown of the way the spending which will intrigue and, in some cases, perhaps, annoy the amateur statisticians.

The Bureau finds that out of every $100 spent by the average Canadian family on goods and services, $32 is spent on food. Another $15 is spent on shelter — the average rent for the average family being between $35 and $40 a month. This figure, the Bureau points out, includes imagine, by one which places household operation at $15 out of $100, and another of $25, for "other commodities and services."

Canadian women spend more on their clothes than their husbands. Out of every $100 spent for clothing, $39 is spent on men's wear and $43 on women's wear. Children's wear accounts for $10 and the remaining $8 out of $14 is spent on footwear for all the family and $4 is spent on piece goods.

Out of every $100 spent on household operation $28 goes for fuel and lighting, $42 for home furnishings and $30 for supplies and services. Out of every $100 for "other commodities and services" $28 is spent for transportation. Interestingly, 27 per cent of this $28 covers automobile transportation, $8 per cent goes for street car, bus and taxi fares and 13 per cent for "travel."

The cost of living yardstick accounts for $34 out of every $100 spent on food. Cereal products account for another $31 and other groceries account for $35, out of the $100. If you are interested enough to be really critical of the $100" a lot of hundreds of dollars are being spent, you are the sort of amateur statistician for whom the DBS goes to all this trouble. Sharpen your pencil.

THE WEATHER WAS "NIPPY"

Until the Canadians now in Korea get back home we will probably never know whether they were required to stand for hours in freezing weather to be reviewed by President-elect Eisenhower.

The first report from the Associated Press correspondent accompanying Eisenhower was that they waited more than eight hours on the parade grounds. It was said that some of them suffered frost bites in the prolonged wait in bitter cold.

This sort of news was received with an outburst of indignation at home at the kind of brass hat stupidity which could have permitted such an inexcusable occurrence. Then from Korea came a somewhat modified version of Associated Press Correspondent Bess. Canadian Press wireman correspondent in Korea, made the whole thing sound almost like a memorable experience for the Canadian troops. He wrote: "The weather was nippy. In fact, it was nearly zero. But the Canadian troops didn't mind too much last Wednesday as they waited 8½ hours . . . Newspaper correspondents were somewhat critical of 'top brass' arrangements that had forced the Canadians and other United Nations troops to spend most of a cold, raw day outside waiting for the arrival of the general. But the men themselves didn't complain. They said they considered it an honor . . ."

But Boss did state that the men were hauled out of their frontline billets at 3 a.m. to be ready at the corps headquarters at 6.30 a.m. Then they stood around until 9 a.m. when the first rehearsal of the day's parade was scheduled to begin. They were dismissed for the interim at 1.15 p.m. The general arrived, as scheduled, at 3 p.m. "While waiting," Boss reported, "the men kept warm by beating their hands together, kicking their feet and pounding each other's backs."

Now Ottawa has the "official" version of the incident from Brigadier M. P. Bogert, commander of the 25th Brigade. While times that vary from those given by Boss, the official story is that the men only spent four and a half hours in the cold.

It still will look like a "bad show" to a lot of people, and the more so in the light of the obvious efforts to make it look like a minor incident.

A WOMAN'S HAT

It may appear as though it were
A flying saucer dropped on her,
It may be large, it may be small,
Be wide of brim or none at all,
But since it's what she bought to wear
A woman's hat is her affair.

Time will fix shake my head
And smile . . .
At what was called "the latest style"
I'd ask her, when I had viewed her hat,
"Is her" hat,

"What clever salesman sold you that?"
But later on I ceased to care.
A woman's hat is her affair.

'Tis not for man to criticize
The hat his wife or daughter buys.
Queerne have appeared in what "their kings
Have thought to be most beautiful things.
But kings have learned to their chagrin
The hats of queens are their affair.

Poor Old Grandpa!

(Peoenix Phase)

He lived his life in privation
And under-privilegement.
He never dreamed of the joy of having the tax collector take a large bite out of his earnings each week before he got his pay cheque. Nor did he experience the thrill of wrestling with an income tax form, or the sport of matching high prices with a shrinking buck.

To him was denied the privilege of building, polishing and babying a four-wheeled steel; of finding a place to park it in the traveis; and of reshodding its flat feet in rain, heat and cold.

Not for him was the bliss of achieving weight reduction through starvation, or winning a high place by high-pressure, of gaining fame via ulcers.

He never had the priceless sensation of worrying about flying saucers, A-bombs and H-bombs. He was a backward and uncivilized age. Poor old Grandpa!

Strength for the Day.

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

AUTHORITY IN RELIGION

Some time ago I heard a preacher make the statement, "I believe in the authority of truth." I said who is to interpret that truth? No doubt the man would have said, "Why I will be the final authority myself." In other words, in the face of conflicting theories of life, you, my friend, yet yourself up as the sole and final authority. Doesn't that sound a bit silly?

It is true, of course, that the final decision upon which man's salvation depends rests with the individual. No one can make that supreme decision but the individual himself. Furthermore, individual interpretation of truth is very real in the case of every Christian, no matter to what branch of the Church he may belong. But it is also true that in deciding on the great spiritual verities of life we are part of a large community, and in addition to our own responsibility there is an authority outside ourselves.

To say this does not mean to link our reason with the reason of others. The problem of authority is the most important problem in religion. Get that settled and all other problems will be settled. Individual conclusions are important, but they are not all-important. The so-called "authority of truth" is not too satisfactory to be a foundation for one's life. There is more to the problem than that.

Alberta's Liquor Laws Unique

(Calgary Herald)

Twenty-five Irish policemen, lured by the city of Edmonton away from the Royal Ulster Constabulary, have arrived to take up their duties with the Edmonton police force. They are to begin immediately on a course of indoctrination in city bylaws, the Criminal Code, and the Alberta Liquor Control Act.

We wish them luck—especially by the last item.

The Irish policemen will be charged with the thankless task of enforcing an act which embody believes in and which very few people take more than a casual attempt to observe. It must be presumed, however, that they will be instructed to enforce the act, and enforce it to the letter, whether they respect that we wish them luck.

The violations daily committed against this peculiar and repressive act are legion; citizens who believe that laws are made for all ordinary purposes are, thoroughly law-abiding, render themselves liable to arrest and conviction on a minimum fine of $20 almost every day of the week.

Most of them, we suspect, have no idea that they are breaking the law. It may be helpful, therefore, to list some of the offences prescribed under the act; offences which, presumably, the police force will be carefully will be required to prosecute to the fullest extent of the law.

Albertans, for example, who spend their holidays in the United States this summer, and in accordance with the normal practice (and with no protest whatever from the Dominion Government's customs officials at the border) bring back a bottle or so, have thereby rendered themselves liable to a minimum fine of $200 or a minimum jail terms of three months' hard labor.

Any person in Edmonton whose wife happens to be under 21 is liable, if he gives her a drink, to a minimum of 30 days in jail.

It is all right for his father-in-law or brother-in-law to pour a drink for the young lady, but not for the husband himself.

If you have a guest in your home, you must not offer him a drink if, as the acts puts it with commendable brevity, he is "apparently under the influence of liquor." Come Christmas, when your friends and relatives will leave a bottle of Scotch under your Christmas tree, you must sternly refuse to accept it, since it is an offence to be in possession of liquor not purchased upon your own individual permit.

If you purchase liquor for your old one, you must not pour the real estate agent a drink while you are signing the papers, for he is guilty of bribery by giving or receiving any gifts of liquor at the time of transfer of property.

All these are matters which the Edmonton police force will have to study. They must also ensure that members of the Petroleum Club do not take their guests there for dinner more than 14 times a year and that members of the Edmonton Club are not introduced into the Petroleum Club as guests, this being offences under the act.

Seems to us the new recruits are liable to be pretty busy.

Executives Are Lazy?

(Windsor Star)

Mr. Morris I. Pickus, who bears a peculiarly appropriate name for a specialist in executive, is a personnel institute, Inc., claims best executives are brilliant but lazy. They don't attempt to handle details and thus may put their clerical minds to work.

Mr. Pickus does pick a weakness in modern methods when he says executive spend is so busy directing and managing operations that they don't find time to think and evolve policies or philosophies. That's one reason for many executive's ills encountered present problems. Their key men haven't been trained to think, to have the aptitude, to think ahead and avoid such problems as those, for example, in labor relations.

Great thinkers and philosophers usually have had the time and the space they didn't do much physical work. They were almost content cluttered by the day-to-day, or even hour-to-hour, problems that fill the lives of executives and ponder the real meaning of the universe and man's place in it.

Mr. Pickus does leave one question unanswered. He says that a lazy man, in these days when so much emphasis is placed on actual production, get to be an executive.

Senseless 'Slanguage'

(Charleston, S.C., News-Chronicle)

Having progressed somehow from on the hog, to the beam, to the groove, hep, solid, real gone, and out of this world, the English appreciation for something superlative is now "real George." It makes no sense whatsoever in fact, and we say 23 skidoo to any generation whose slang is based on senseless combinations of words.

Personal Health Talks

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letters from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MOUSE NEST IN CAT'S EAR

I would like to tell you how grateful I am for the help you have given me—I might say for the health you have given me. My wife, Mrs. R. Mc. for nine years I had what doctors called nervous breakdowns.

My interpretation of that is simple. When a doctor doesn't know what ails the patient he can call it "nervous breakdown" and get away with murder—as a rule the layman takes it as an honest diagnosis.

Mrs. McK. continues: I dropped from 155 to around 100 pounds in weight. I saw your article saying the need to supplement our ordinary diet with calcium and vitamin D and the use of plain wheat instead of refined white flour. We got your health booklet about wheat and your booklet on nutrition. Both books showed me how to follow both suggestions . . . I feel like a new person, again. I do all my own housework, cook and prepare three meals a day (no reducing diet) in America today, namely, the use of white sugar and white flour as source of most of the calories in the everyday diet, both items being stripped of most of the minerals and vitamins that nature supplied with them; and the inadequate consumption of milk and milk products by the average family. I am convinced that means you and you and you. Milk and milk products—skim milk, separator milk, buttermilk, sour milk, Acidophilus milk, Bulgarian milk, yoghurt, cream, soy and every kind of cheese, is the best food source of calcium especially for young folks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Fluorinate the Drinking Water

Some medical, health and dental authorities now advocate adding fluorine to the public drinking water here. I oppose this recommendation to save young body slow's teeth . . . (R. W. M.)

Fluorine is not a body's friend's health or teeth any harm, and it may save the teeth of a great many children and if governed from premature decay.

Thanks for the Confidence

We want you to know that we heartily agree with your stand Cri. From personal experience all the members of our family are convinced that a combination of weather never causes any illness whatsoever, except people who have alleged "colds". Our children wear whatever the weather is like and they like it when out playing . . . (W. R. L.)

Answer—Thanks. Human nature, I suppose, to say nothing of your being put to the angry if you agree but to the angry if you disagree to the editors or publishers if you don't . .

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Women as a class have a great many bad habits. Squeezing toothpaste tubes from the top instead of the bottom. They forget to put the cap back on the toothpaste. They have an evil habit, by and large, of putting used tea in the third step from the bottom of the staircase, instead of the kitchen. Then the next time the go up. But they always put them in the kitchen.

Instead on advice from Johns Hopkins University we spray was turned on a nearby patch of forest land. The water, loaded with this insecticidal scrap, amounted to an annual fall of 1,200 inches a year. Consequently the trees in the wettest natural jungle at Chenapau, Puerto Rico, average only 100 feet.

The National Geographic Society says: "Today it is as if the woods people gone mad. They seem to germinate that would otherwise die. Seeds that would rot in the soil and vines twist together into a solid mat of greenery. Through the jungle Keller moves with the aid of only normal numbers of small animals such as rabbits and birds.

No one knows why the woods are able to absorb so much water. Stands of spruce per day without being flooded. Nor does anyone know if field crops, when sprayed, can controlled massive applications of water. Perhaps the jungle will be been a stretch of artificial jungle, under a ready deluge of slightly dirty water.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

AUTOMATIC BLESSINGS

My attention was attracted to the beautiful usefulness of the human thumb. So automatic is its use that we hardly think of it, yet how handicapped is that one who has lost his thumb! This thumb is but one example of the many automatic blessings God has given us which we so often minimize.

If we would but meditate upon the many blessings that are ours, and which are so evident, we would soon be free from all our selfish wants. Our complaints would disappear, too, for as we forget these blessings that are ours in large measure, and in addition to our own responsibility there is an authority outside ourselves.

To say this does not mean to link our reason with the reason of others. The problem of authority is the most important problem in religion. Get that settled and all other problems will be settled. Individual conclusions are important, but they are not all-important. The so-called "authority of truth" is not too satisfactory to be a foundation for one's life. There is more to the problem than that.

Without our thinking anything about it, many function works automatically. It is only when we abuse our body that it makes a complaint or danger signal. But if we are kind to our body, it will be kind to us. A healthy working body is one of the great blessings of life.

No book that has ever been written can describe the beauty in the open book of nature. There are mysteries there, yet man has made discoveries in that realm. The animals and birds have an unfailing instinct, and man has intelligence and is endowed with reason. Yet to nature we have gone for many of the knowledge that is ours. Many a first examination has been answered in nature. Nature distributes its blessings lavishly.

The light of each new day is an automatic blessing, and if we make the most of it, we will be doubly blessed. Benjamin Franklin used to keep a little book in which he wrote down his pains and losses as applied to personal habits. In this method he grew and become one of the most inspiring of all our early Americans, as alive today as

Jungle Grows In Jersey

(Cornwall Standard-Freeholder)

Almost by accident, a jungle has sprung up in New Jersey. A huge mosquito control project first found had to dispose of up to 12,000,000 gallons of water every day during peak operations. There was no method of disposing of such an enormous amount of water.

Spraying it onto an open field resulted in a small lake of mud which would only spread until it was a danger. The experiment was without success until the engineers in charge had almost decided to install a biofilter, a million dollar plant to purify the water.

Instead on advice from Johns Hopkins University the spray was turned on a nearby patch of forest land. The water, loaded with this insecticidal scrap, amounted to an annual fall of 1,200 inches a year. Consequently the trees in the wettest natural jungle at Chenapau, Puerto Rico, average only 100 feet.

The National Geographic Society says: "Today it is as if the woods people gone mad. They seem to germinate that would otherwise die. Seeds that would rot in the soil and vines twist together into a solid mat of greenery. Through the jungle Keller moves with the aid of only normal numbers of small animals such as rabbits and birds.

No one knows why the woods are able to absorb so much water. Stands of spruce per day without being flooded. Nor does anyone know if field crops, when sprayed, can controlled massive applications of water. Perhaps the jungle will be been a stretch of artificial jungle, under a ready deluge of slightly dirty water.

Squadron Leader First R.C.A.F. Casualty of War

OTTAWA (CP)—Air Force headquarters reports that one of its top fighter pilots, Sqdn. Ldr. A. R. Mackay of Montreal, is missing on operations in Korea.

This was the first RCAF casualty of the Korean war.

Sqdn. Ldr. MacKenzie, a 32-year-old veteran, was credited with a distguished Flying Cross piloting fighters in the Second World War. He is the officer commanding No. 441 fighter squadron, one of three Canadian squadrons stationed at North Luffenham, England.

He left this post temporarily the fall, going to Korea in October on exchange duty with the United States Air Force to gain combat experience. He is the 12th Canadian pilot to fight in Korea with the USAF. Five others are still on operations in the theatre.

RCAF headquarters received no detail of the operation in which Sqdn. Ldr. MacKenzie is missing.

A cable said simply he is "missing as a result of flying operations in Korea."

Both in England and in Korea, Sqdn. Ldr. MacKenzie flew the speedy F-86 Sabre jet aircraft. In the Second World War he flew Spitfires with No. 401 and 403 squadrons in 1942 and 1944 and was credited with 9½ "kills." He returned to Canada in 1944 and since then has been stationed at Patricia Bay, B.C., Goose Bay, Labrador, and at Air Defence Command.

Top Canadian pilot of the Korean war is Flt. Lt. Wilbur Garrow of Leaside, Ont., with three kills and four damaged. Both have left the Korean theatre.

Three Doctors Fined $5,500 For $44 Fraud

KENORA (CP)—Three doctors in this northwestern Ontario town were fined a total of $5,500 and one was sentenced to three months in jail when they pleaded guilty to obtaining $44 by fraud.

The three, members of the Lake of the Woods clinic here, were charged after investigations into a health insurance plan for employees of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company. The case was heard in police court Monday before Magistrate J. A. Cox of Dryden.

Sentenced was Dr. Peter F. Flavelle who pleaded guilty to five charges of obtaining money by false pretences. He was fined $2,000 and cost on each of the five charges with the alternative of another three months in jail.

Dr. Kent S. Bryce-Smith and Dr. Allan M. Torrie pleaded guilty to three similar charges and were fined $1,200 each with the alternative of three months in jail.

The charges were laid by L. A. Tolle, chief Canadian agent for the Benefit Association of Railway Employees which provides the medical health scheme for the paper company. The doctors were convicted of forging fictitious calls on patients' claims for payment.

The amount of money obtained fraudulently on each charge was $4.

GRANTED WAGE INCREASE

KITCHENER (CP)—About 60 employees of the Rumpel Felt Company Ltd., have been granted a wage increase of seven cents an hour, retroactive to Nov. 17. A contract signed between the company and the United Rubber, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America (CIO-CCL) brings the average rate to about $1.30 an hour. The work week is being reduced from 48 to 45 hours. It is the first union contract signed by the company.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Yendel Nadasdi Monday was committed for trial by a higher court on a charge of manslaughter arising from the death of Laszlo Elles. Elles died in hospital Nov. 2 of pneumonia and head injuries. In a statement read by police, Nadasdi said he and Elles got into an argument. Elles struck him with a piece of iron and he in turn hit Elles with it.

Commonwealth Leaders Said Agreed on 3-Point Program To Get Sterling Area off Hook

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Finance Minister Douglas Abbott of Canada said today the present Commonwealth economic conference is the "most satisfactory" of all the post-war parleys he has attended in international capitals.

The Canadian minister gave this verdict in a guarded statement to reporters. He ducked direct questions on whether conference decisions may lead ultimately to increased sterling-area buying from Canada, but it was assumed the minister's satisfaction with the talks is based on a fairly confident expectation of wider world trade.

"Of all the conferences I have attended since the war, this has been the most satisfactory," he said. "I am moderately optimistic about the direction the talks have taken."

He said he hopes for some early relaxation of trade restrictions rather than any further discrimination.

Written Statement

In a written statement, Abbott confirmed that the present two-week conference, expected to end Wednesday or Thursday, is a prelude to similar talks with Western Europe and the United States. He said:

"Since it is desired to establish the conditions for expanding trade on the widest possible basis, the countries of the Commonwealth will wish to seek the co-operation of other like-minded governments. It is hoped that concrete steps will result from these wider discussions. The co-operative and constructive spirit in which the groundwork is being laid during the present conference is encouraging."

Questions by reporters about the "brass tacks" of the conference — sterling convertibility, a possible increase in the price of gold, the possibility of greater borrowing powers for the international monetary fund, the general agreement on tariffs and trade — drew noncommittal replies. The minister said he could not anticipate the communique expected to be issued Wednesday or Thursday.

In regard to development plans within the sterling area, Abbott said he thought it possible that some of the capital equipment needed might come from Canada.

Meet Wednesday

Meanwhile, the Commonwealth leaders were reported to have plotted a three - point program which they hope will get the sterling area off the financial hook. They also are planning talks with other Western countries aimed at smoothing world economic difficulties.

The top statesmen of the nine sterling area lands are reported to have agreed on suggested changes in various sections of monetary policies which the United States will be asked to approve.

Quarters close to the conference said the Commonwealth leaders have agreed that Prime Minister Churchill should go to Washington early next year to outline the sterling area's plan for expanding world trade.

Will Visit U. S.

Churchill will seek a meeting some time between March and May with U. S. President-elect Eisenhower's new Republican administration.

The Commonwealth statesmen are not expected to accompany Churchill but Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, and Richard Butler, her treasury chief, will go with the Prime Minister.

The decision on immediate Commonwealth economic problems are reported to be:

1. All Commonwealth members will try to keep within their means and should fight inflation by slashing luxury imports and spending.

2. The group should go in for a long-term program of developing Commonwealth raw materials now imported from the dollar area and should encourage any project that shows signs of earning dollars in trade.

3. The group should dovetail individual development programs, thus, for example, coarse, expensive steel could be spread around among the Commonwealth.

These decisions probably will be included in the communique to be published at the end of the conference.

This statement also will reaffirm that the Commonwealth wants a convertible pound — one that can be exchanged for other currencies and transferred freely. It probably will add, however, that this can be done only when the sterling area's gold and dollar reserves are much bigger and when world trade is freer.

A second document reported before the Commonwealth prime ministers lists the proposed steps on which U. S. agreement will be sought in the talks with the incoming Eisenhower administration as well as with West European leaders. The meeting hopes these talks will develop in stages into a world economic conference aimed at freeing trade.

Officials said the conference envisions international talks on trade and money controls, raw material production, prices and relations between the dollar and the non-dollar world.

Negro Minister Refuses to Sit In Rear of Bus

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)—A 67-year-old Negro minister says he was beaten by two white men because he refused to sit in the rear of a Greyhound bus.

Rev. Amos H. Carnegie came to the office of the Chattanooga Times on arriving here from Atlanta, Ga., Sunday night, and displayed a severe head wound and swollen eye.

He said that when he took a seat in the middle of the bus in Atlanta, the driver asked him to sit in the rear. When he refused, the driver called a policeman and again he refused.

Shortly out of Atlanta the two men, after conversations with the driver, pounced on him and beat him on the head and kicked him, the Negro added.

The driver did not stop the bus, he said, until it reached Acworth, Ga. There two policemen were called and the minister said he was in such misery and pain I decided it would be better to resist no longer, so I went to the rear seat."

He added that the bus was held up at Acworth until a Greyhound official ca e from Atlanta.

"The official offered me medical aid, but I told him I would go on to Chattanooga," he said.

POPE TO BROADCAST

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Pope will broadcast a Christmas message to Roman Catholics the morning of Dec. 24, the Vatican announced Monday night. The Pope's broadcast will be in Italian and will be re-broadcast by the Vatican radio in 25 languages.

REPORTS

"The fact that they were human fleas is an important point. According to what is known about these insects it would be impossible to find them in such great numbers so far from housing developments. What can one say of the discovery of a multitude of these parasites, certainly tens of thousands of them, in an area far away from all habitation? Such a witches' Sabbath is not the work of nature. The explanation is rather that of the plans which members of the C. P. V. S., stationed in the region heard flying in the area about four a. m. on the morning of the discovery."

That, as Mollers would say, is the reason why your daughter is dumb.

Benefit to the Accused

I am not a scientist and I am not capable of judging the value of a scientific report. But it seems to me that such ridiculous proofs could not disturb anyone who is in the least serious about the matter.

I don't say that the Americans have not used bacteriological weapons in Korea. The man who ordered the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima is quite capable of experimenting with bacteriological warfare in Korea. But until an accused person is declared guilty, he is presumed to be innocent. And ridiculous reports like this one won't convince me that he is guilty.

There is only one way to settle this question decisively. That is for both sides to agree to form an international commission of persons who would be really competent to judge and would be free from prejudice. Even in this case, it is by no means certain that the world would ever find out the truth.

A similar fuss was made over the confessions of the four American pilots. Such testimony does not impress me in the least. Among the American pilots captured in Korea there are in all probability some Communists. The fabrication of testimony is not a possibility that can be entirely discarded when one is dealing with the experts in dialectic materialism.

It is still true, and still dangerous, that millions of persons behind the Iron Curtain and hundreds of millions of the yellow races in non-Communist countries are strongly convinced that America forces have bombed Manchuria and Korea with infected flies, fleas, mice and rats in order to infect the civilian population. The charge is very serious. It harms not only the Americans but the whole white race. It should not be lightly dismissed. If it is false, it must be refuted.

Tabernacle United Church W.A. Installs New Officers

The last meeting of the Tabernacle United Church W.A. for 1952, was held as usual in the ladies' parlor with Mrs. Burgess, the president, presiding.

After singing "The Church's One Foundation", Rev. R. A. Rowley installed the following officers: president, Mrs. David-son; vice-president, Mrs. R. Nelson; recording-secretary, Mrs. Lockyer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. Burgess; treasurer, Mrs. Schillwerk; flower convener, Mrs. H. Foote; kitchen convener, Miss E. Horton; manse convener, Mrs. Gorsline; pianists, Mrs. Robb and Mr. Coughlin.

This part of the meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Rowley. Five minutes, roll call, treasurer's report and report of cards sent out were given, after which Miss Ethel Horton read the Christmas story as found in the second chapter of Luke.

The little testament from which she read was a gift to her from her former Sunday School teacher, Mrs. Campbell, who was the guest speaker for the day.

Mrs. Campbell illustrated her talk by the use of the stereoscope which reminded everyone present not to leave the "Christ" out of Christmas.

Mrs. Wardner moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Campbell for her inspiring address and the after meeting closed with refreshments and a social period followed.

Evening Branch W.A. Enjoys Descriptive Trip

The Evening Branch of the W.A. of Christ Church met in the Parish Hall for their regular monthly business meeting with the president, Mrs. H. Ingram, conducting the devotions.

Tells of Scotland

Mrs. A. E. Wemacott was introduced by the president, and told of her recent trip by plane from New York to Prestwick, Scotland, and of her visit to her girlhood home in Dundee.

She also spoke of the many historic and picturesque places she had seen: Glamis Castle; Edinburgh Castle; Crathie Church, where the royal family worship when in residence at Balmoral; the Edinburgh War Memorial, the largest in the world; the Floral Clock and also of the beauty of the country with its rivers and hills which in September are covered with heather.

Miss Frances Reid expressed the appreciation of the members to Mrs. Wemacott for her delightful talk.

Much business was dealt with, following which, refreshments were served by Mrs. C. Hayes and Mrs. E. Greene.

Mrs. George Benedict Celebrates Her 92nd Milestone

Yesterday one of Hastings County oldest residents, Mrs. George Benedict, celebrated her 92nd birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. T. Ross, Geddes Street.

Mrs. Benedict was born in Tudor township, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Donaldson, who passed away some years ago. Her husband was predeceased her.

She is a member of the United Church, and has been an active worker in all the activities of both church and community as long as years permitted, and is equally alert to the present day events. She possesses remarkably good health, and is still interested in her hobbies of knitting and crocheting, which, in spite of advanced years, are beautifully executed.

Mrs. Benedict has five daughters, for whom were present for this momentous occasion: Mrs. C. Beddick, of Rossmore; Mrs. C. Overholt, of Kingston; Mrs. J. R. Scott, Mrs. T. J. Ross, both of this city. Mrs. W. Welbourne, of Peterborough, who was unable owing to her mother's illness, wishing her many happy returns of the day.

Mrs. Benedict also has 11 grandchildren, 27 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

Mrs. H. Burmeister, of Victoria, B.C.

She was the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts, which included wearing apparel, beautiful flowers, and boxes of chocolates, as well as numerous lovely cards from far and near, and telegrams of congratulation and best wishes.

Among the dinty refreshments served was a lovely birthday cake, made by her granddaughter, Miss Helen Beddick.

All join in extending to Mrs. Benedict best wishes for a most happy and healthful year, and the 100th milestone to come.

President Campbell welcomed members and introduced five new members joining their lodge namely, Edward Wood, Frederick Smith, Earl Stansfield, Jack Willey and Percy Sterne of the U.S.A. Five presented.

Old timers' pins were presented to members by Mr. Bernard Hackett. A toast to the Queen was made with Jimmy Corradi at the piano.

Previous to the banquet, bowling was held at the Recreation bowling alleys with high score winners being Les Adams, Jew, Campbell, Frank Connor and Fred Canton with prizes being presented by G. Stewart.

After supper an enjoyable evening was had by all in playing cards, watching television and a sing-song with Jimmy Corradi at the piano.

Mr. Stewart tendered thanks on behalf of the old timers to the Women of the Moose. The convener for the banquet was Florence Carufel; those who served: Mary Peoples, Olive Roth and Peggy Minor. Wine glasses: Gladys Ritch, Nellis Seymegeur, Florence Carufel and Leslie Dorman. Looking after the dessert: Lena Connel.

Co-worker Carufel thanked the co-workers for their help and to return received compliments for how well everything went and for the success of the banquet.

Reviving Demand For Fox Furs Could Help N.B.

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Signs of a reviving demand for fox furs could mean much to New Brunswick where the ranching industry before the Second World War.

United States' fur dealers have reported that fashion designers are swinging back to fox, favoring furs in natural shades and also dyed a variety of colors, including pastels. Interest in these furs is reported more enthusiastic than at any time since the industry slumped 14 years ago. All shades of fox are showing new fur styles by Paris designers.

Within the last half century fox ranching became a vital link in the economy of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. A fox ranche raised around Moncton had more foxes than any comparable area in the world. Salisbury was transformed from a hamlet to a bustling village and a nearby fox ranch produced 3,000 to 4,000 silver blacks annually.

Expensive Stock

At first, tremendous prices were demanded for breeding stock. One farmer bought a pair of silver blacks for $18,000. Another paid $30,000 for three pairs. As supply became more plentiful, prices naturally declined. A unit which formerly would have cost $2,500 came within the scope of the average woman's purse.

The industry nevertheless established itself for years, with an output of up to 40,000 pelts a year from about 2,000 New Brunswick fox farms, and many more from Prince Edward Island. New types, such as sapphires, were evolved and commanded fancier prices.

The depression years, plus changing styles in women's wear, struck hard blows at the industry and the Second World War almost finished it. Since then many fox farms have been abandoned.

But if the industry recovers, those who maintained partial ranches will be in position to take advantage of the rising market.

Women's Activities

BRIDGE STREET W.M.S.

The singing of Christmas carols preceded the opening of the recent Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street Church.

Mrs. Houston then called the meeting to order by quoting an appropriate Bible passage and by prayer.

The Christian Stewardship secretary, Mrs. Ackerman, gave a brief resume of the year's work speaking first in relation to time, ability, gifts and possessions and contributions in leadership and interest.

Christmas Suggestions

A timely Christmas suggestion, recommending a series of excellent children's books such as "Tell Me About God" and "Tell Me About the Bible", was made by the literature secretary, Mrs. G. Campbell.

A request from Mrs. F. Burroughs, leader of the Mission Band for assistance with their Christmas party resulted in a collection to help with refreshments.

A magazine from Japan brought by Miss Clarke was on display.

Slate of Officers

The president, Mrs. W. Finkle, was asked to take the chair and called upon Mrs. A. H. Maguire to bring in the list of officers for 1953. This slate was approved, the installation ceremony to take place the first meeting in January.

The recognition of the faithful services as president during the past two years, Mrs. Houston was presented with a leather bound hymn book. The presentation was made by Mrs. Adsett, who extended also to the retiring executive the thanks of the Society for their work or the past year.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Houston's and Mrs. Cooke's group. Mrs. Broad conducted the Christmas devotional, in a very effective way she read a Christmas story, accompanied by Mrs. Bird at the piano. The Christmas lessons were read by Mrs. Trull and Mrs. Kells, assisted by Mrs. Gunsolus and Mrs. Adams reading passages of Scripture.

Black Madonna

A beautiful story, "The Black Madonna", was given by Mrs. Ralph Morden. This was a narrative of an Italian artist hired to paint in a Nile church a stained glass window of the Madonna and Child. Because of his black skin the artist felt a great bitterness toward the church people, so made a window with a black Madonna and Child. According to the story, as the unveiling the consternation was great but the minister chose to regard it as a topic for a fine Christmas sermon with much benefit to the artist and his people. This story was not only told beautifully by Mrs. Morden but most sympathetically.

Mrs. Rogers Reidel sang sweetly the Christmas solo, "Little Shepherd". It was much enjoyed by everyone present.

The next meeting was announced by Mrs. Hyde, as the second Thursday in January and would take the form of a pot-luck luncheon.

The favorite of all Christmas carols, "Silent Night, Holy Night", was sung.

Tea and dainty sandwiches, and because of the season, Christmas cake was also served.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If his mother makes his decisions, weigh well

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 next month and have been engaged since June. My fiancee is not that my self-willed mother does not want him to get married. I have gone with him for three years, and all the time now he has been trying to break us up.

Seven months ago she succeeded, and we were separated for six months. At Johnny there and so much that he came back against her will. When he gave me my engagement ring she was furious at him. I went to work and tried to save my money, because I thought this would make Johnny and his mother very proud of me. But she was still against us, and when I told Johnny how much I had saved, he just laughed and said: "If you could save that much in one year, you could keep, but until then, don't get married."

When I asked Johnny when we should set our date, he said he was going to wait another two years before even giving it a thought. I told him that with both of us working, and me making as much as he, we would have a very good start, but he said his mother thinks it's better to wait.

About a month ago I told Johnny that if he did not plan to marry me for years I was going to buy a car, and he said to go ahead. So I did, and now his mother and he are trying to make me get rid of it. I told Johnny that if we got married now I would get rid of it, but that if not, I was going to keep it.

I love Johnny more than life itself, and I would do anything in the world for him, so I hope you can help me.—T. M. M.

Dear T.M.M.:

No matter how much you love Johnny, if he is afraid to set his mother ahead of you, and act so disinterested about marrying, then I think you should have too much pride to take such behavior, or to keep on begging him to love you. Moreover, I am perfectly certain from what you tell me that if you did marry under the present circumstances, you would have a mama's boy on your hands, instead of a husband, and you would soon be even more unhappy than you are now.

I doubt very much if you are going to take my advice, but since you have asked it, my opinion is that you should tell Johnny that, since he is so uncertain about when he wishes to marry, you feel there should be no further engagement, and that you should have the right to go out with anyone you please. I'm sure that you are going to say that you don't want to go out with anybody but him. I can assure you that you are not going to keep him with Johnny by showing him as plainly that he is your whole life. The only possible way you have a chance in this situation is to take definitely but firm stand and let him know that you don't intend to make a doormat of yourself for him.

We should learn to understand each other

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you think there is any harm in a girl going out with boy, whose nationality is different from hers? I have gone out with several very nice such boys in my home town, but some of my friends and relatives think I shouldn't.—J. S.

Dear J.S.:

So far from thinking there is any "harm" in going with young people whose nationality may be different from yours, I am all for such friendships. How are people ever to get along together in this world if each nationality keeps to itself and refuses to make friends with any other? Our only hope for the future is to learn to understand those who have different backgrounds and different ideas from our own, and if you young people don't make a point of doing so, the outlook is sad indeed.

Slim Waistline Reward Of Strong Will

By Mary Moore

If anybody hates me a "spoil sport" for this I'll just quietly point my nose and stalk away and hide.

But if you don't want a waistline like tree trunk come mid-January now is the time to decide exactly how much Christmas poundage you are going to consume.

You and all of your friends are in a frenzy baking rich cakes, puddings, cookies, candies, and so much that he came back against her will. When he gave me my engagement ring she was furious at him. I went to work and tried to save my money, because I thought this would make Johnny and his mother very proud of me. But she was still against us, and when I told Johnny how much I had saved, he just laughed and said: "If you could save that much in one year, you could keep, but until then, don't get married."

When I asked Johnny when we should set our date, he said he was going to wait another two years before even giving it a thought. I told him that with both of us working, and me making as much as he, we would have a very good start, but he said his mother thinks it's better to wait.

About a month ago I told Johnny that if he did not plan to marry me for years I was going to buy a car, and he said to go ahead. So I did, and now his mother and he are trying to make me get rid of it. I told Johnny that if we got married now I would get rid of it, but that if not, I was going to keep it.

I love Johnny more than life itself, and I would do anything in the world for him, so I hope you can help me.—T. M. M.

Dear T.M.M.:

No matter how much you love Johnny, if he is afraid to set his mother ahead of you, and act so disinterested about marrying, then I think you should have too much pride to take such behavior, or to keep on begging him to love you. Moreover, I am perfectly certain from what you tell me that if you did marry under the present circumstances, you would have a mama's boy on your hands, instead of a husband, and you would soon be even more unhappy than you are now.

I doubt very much if you are going to take my advice, but since you have asked it, my opinion is that you should tell Johnny that, since he is so uncertain about when he wishes to marry, you feel there should be no further engagement, and that you should have the right to go out with anyone you please. I'm sure that you are not going to say that you don't want to go out with anybody but him. I can assure you that you are not going to keep him with Johnny by showing him as plainly that he is your whole life. The only possible way you have a chance in this situation is to take definitely but firm stand and let him know that you don't intend to make a doormat of yourself for him.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

She's right . . . to sign the informal menus on their Christmas cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I sign our Christmas cards (I am not being surprised), should I sign them "Dorothy Anne, Robert and Marie Beaumont" or "Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Thompson and daughter?" I prefer an informal way to sign, and the latter seems too formal to me. Although I've noticed that many people do sign their cards "Mr. and Mrs. ——".

Also, this year, so many people do sign their cards, "Mr. and Mrs. ——" But this form is absolutely incorrect as a signature to Christmas cards.

Note In—Your names signed after the message on your Christmas cards should be your informal names.

Note 2—When a child is included in the signature, the father's name comes first.

Therefore, correct: Robert and Marie and Dorothy Anne Or, when necessary, include the last name: Robert and Marie Thompson, and Dorothy Anne.

Courteous for bride to ask groom's sister to be a bridesmaid

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) Is it not expected courtesy for the bride to ask the groom's only married sister to be matron of honor or the only niece to be the flower girl? Or is it proper for the bride to have her sister as matron of honor, another sister as bridesmaid, and her niece as flower girl? (2) Should the groom's sister be asked to serve at the reception?—E. M.

(1) It is courteous for the bride to ask her own sister to be her honor attendant. Therefore her own sister, not the groom's sister, would be invited to be matron of honor. Also if the bride is to have only one bridesmaid, she would properly invite her other sister to be her bridesmaid. However, since it is customary for the bride, when possible, to ask the groom's sister to be a bridesmaid, the wise and courteous plan would be for the bride to have two bridesmaids, her own sister and the groom's sister. This also makes a more balanced wedding party. Then she might either have her own niece as flower girl, or might have two flower girls, the nieces of her groom's niece.

(2) Not necessarily. . . this would depend entirely on circumstances, and these you didn't tell us.

How to serve the wedding dinner . . . predicament

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My uncle has asked me to write you about his difficult situation. The daughter of his only brother is to be married soon. And the daughter of his wife's sister is to be married on that same day. My uncle and his wife can go to the church ceremonies because these are to be an hour apart. But the problem is that the wedding dinners are at different places, at the same hour. He wants to know if he should go to his niece's dinner, and his wife to her sister's dinner. Otherwise, he does think it would look very strange for each to go alone. What would you suggest?—L. M.

That's the best solution, I should say . . . for them to go together to the church ceremonies, then for his wife to go to her niece's dinner and for him to go to his niece's dinner. It's unfortunate they can't go together to the dinners, but it certainly will be very simple in explaining the reason for the close proximity, and to anyone else "whom it may concern". And of course, the explanation must be given as soon as possible before the date of the dinners.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Keep fit and feel youthful

With health, a great disposition and an alert mind, almost any woman should be able to make herself an attractive personality, pleasing to the eye. It should not be forgotten that charm is beauty's twin sister. As for exercise, loveliness something is no longer considered a frivolous pastime, the by-product of vanity, but a matter of maintaining one's self respect.

It is foolish to be serious all the time.

Vitality contributes to good looks, so there should be regard for the laws of health that are so often ignored. By learning to live wisely, we avoid many pulchritudinous ills that are easier to prevent than to cure. In the field of diet, the most essential necessary is ticking like a little Swiss watch, there are fewer chances of getting wrinkles, sagging facial tissues, and the middle-age spread.

It is particularly necessary to cultivate a sense of punctuality. Do we bear hosts of decision from the wife and mother whose home hold duties keep her on the jump? It can be done, lady. It is a matter of one's viewpoint.

The woman whose life is organized, who endeavors to do her work restfully, keeps within finger touch of her youth. Confusion, haste and family distractions can wear the nerves raw, and this condition is reflected in the countenance. It is difficult for a tired woman to be normal in behavior. When fatigue is present, efficiency is lessened and one's tasks become twice as difficult. When you feel worn as a frazzle, drop everything, lie down, and close your eyes. It is wonderful how nature will recharge your energy motors, pick you up, put you on your feet again.

Many women drive themselves as they would never drive another person. They neglect to do just as much work each day, and they do it until something slaps them down.

If life teaches a woman anything it is moderation. She has developed a social philosophy that will direct her along the path of health and beauty. She will then endeavor to get along happily with the members of her family and with her fellow creatures. She will wide-step arguments.

She must not forget how to play. It is foolish to be serious all the time. She must have a certain amount of outdoor life to air condition her lungs and put roses in her cheeks. She must keep fit—physically, mentally, spiritually.

Ecuador on the Pacific coast of South America has a down mountains over 18,000 feet in height.

Fashion Flashes

OF COURSE it is wonderful to have a mink stole, but most aren't avoiding a fur stole just because it can't be mink. We've noted handsome jobs of Persian lamb, muskrat and caracul, all in heavenly colors, as well as the more conventional fluffy fox pieces. There are also beautiful fabric stoles edged with fox.

COMING INTO THE PICTURE with increasing frequency is the slim dress featuring a slightly peg-topped skirt, a slim bodice matching the skirt and long sleeves. This silhouette is seen in soft silk crepes and patterned silk satins, as well as in timeless thin woolens.

COLOR IN THE HOME is added and betted by the beautiful at-home fashions now being shown. Pale lavender, heavy used for a top that has a deep scooped neckline, tight push-up sleeves and close your eyes. It's buttoned closing. Separate skirt is matching purple jersey, pleated and accordion pleated, with a deeper velvet tie-in sash.

FIRE GUYS BUILDING

CLARKSON (CP)—A woodworking shop and storage building, owned by Clarkson Young, were totaled Friday night in a fire at the Bettiga Industrial Park property. Fuel oil tanks are located about 30 yards from the house, but a strong west wind carried embers from the fire away from them. Clarkson is 15 miles west of Toronto.

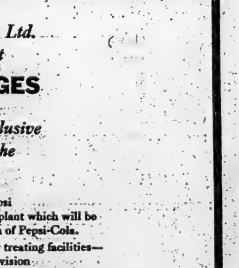
Medal Metal



It's hard to realize that less than one hundred years ago aluminum was a precious metal, priced at $17 an ounce. In fact, Queen's University at Kingston, Ont., pro-nounced the first aluminum bar by chemistry course with an abundance model in 1859.

Nowadays the price of aluminum is 19c a pound. How is it that a dollar buys as much aluminum today as $1.50 before the war, while it buys so much less of most other things? One big reason is the tremendous use of aluminum — ten times that of 15 years ago. Volume production by new production costs down. Aluminum is not only light and strong — it is low in price too. Start Wednesday To Answer Some Of 96 Questions

OTTAWA (CP)—The government will start Wednesday to reply to some of the 96 written questions placed on the order paper of the Commons since the session opened Nov. 20.

The questions, placed on the order paper by individual members, concern a variety of subjects ranging from defence matters to the amount of canned pork now held by the government.

Approximately 20 questions deal with defence or defence production.

T. L. Cardiff (PC—Huron North) asked how many Garand rifles Canada has ordered and received from the United States. He also wanted to know if Canada was still buying the rifles.

In another question, Mr. Cardiff asked for information about the number of fires in defence department establishments since 1950. He wanted to know how many prosecutions had been launched by the department as a result of the fires.

In a six-point question Earl Cruthers (PC — Haldimand) asked for details about government's handling of surplus canned pork.

Rev. R. G. Hansell (PC—Macleod) asked for statistics on the manufacture and sale of cigarets in Canada. C. D. Coyle (PC—Regina) asked for figures on seizures of American cigarets smuggled into Canada.

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Fire gutted a small downtown hotel early today, killing three persons, including Mrs. Hattie McCroskey, 83, blind invalid. There were 33 persons registered. Two were injured and others escaped unhurt.

Nine Canadians Given Degrees

QUEBEC (CP)—Nine Canadians, including External Affairs Minister Pearson, received honorary degrees from Laval University at a convocation marking the end of year-long centenary celebrations.

Mr. Pearson received an honorary law degree Monday night from Msgr. Maurice Roy, chancellor of Laval.

Mr. Pearson said that never before in Canada's history has teaching "based on sound morality and high ideals", been so urgent.

Cleric Describes Faith Healing As 'Psuedo' Religion

HENRY (CP) — Legislation to curb "pseudo-religious" confidence healing was recommended by the Rev. R. H. Catley-Willis in a sermon at First Baptist Church here Sunday night.

Mr. Catley-Willis was commenting on a recent incident in Winnipeg where 13-year-old Mary Taylor, a diabetic, died within 36 hours of abandoning insulin injections after deciding to try "faith and prayer" as a cure.

"Any law which will halt this pseudo-religionism, which brings such reproach upon the church of God, will have my support insofar as it does not infringe upon our fundamental liberties," Mr. Catley-Willis said last night.

Although affirming his belief in divine healing, the Nazery pastor said that God needs no human medium to dispense His healing blessings. "If He does not use them, they are doctors, the use of whom the Lord Jesus advocated," he added.

"We have no record anywhere in the Bible of meetings being held specifically for the purpose of healing the physically sick. Nowhere does God advocate divinity or the implication the disparaging of medical assistance."

Only 10 of 18 Founders Of Cominform Left

BY DON DALLAS

LONDON (Reuters) — Eighteen chosen European Communist leaders met secretly in Poland five years ago and vowed to "fight as comrades in a fight against the "imperialist" West.

Today only 10 of those 18 founders of the Cominform have survived execution, disgrace and natural death. Delegates who attended subsequent Cominform meetings have fared little better.

The Cominform was founded to link the Communist parties of Russia and her satellites with those of France and Italy.

A policy statement issued after the first meeting divided the world into two camps—progressive and imperialist.

Of the 18 who helped formulate that statement, two were expelled within nine months. These were the Yugoslav representatives, President Edvard Kardelj and Milovan Djilas.

Two Die Naturally

Two have died a natural death, according to doctors' certificates: Antonin A. Zhdanov of Russia, generally believed to have been the architect of the Cominform, and Vladimir Poptomov of Bulgaria.

Once, Rudolf Slansky of Czechoslovakia, was described by Pravda Dec. 3 as a traitor and saboteur. Stefan Rakovsky, his colleague, that he is going through a period is reported to be in jail, stripped in the party doghouse.

Got a Horse Shoe Or Rabbit's Foot?

LONDON (AP) — The fabled good luck of limping pacemaker Jack Solomons looked pretty groggy today after a couple of solar plexus blows. Harry Matthews, Seattle, Wash., heavyweight who is booked to meet Britain's "enemy Williams under Solomons' sponsorship Wednesday is ill in a London hotel and may have to withdraw from the bout or postpone it. Matthews injured his back in training three days ago. A doctor was examining him today and rule whether the American can go into the ring this week.

While Solomons was worrying about that blow, thieves raided his West End office and escaped with cigars, whisky, a camera, £16 in cash and some office records.

"All I need now is a fire," griped the promoter.

Age, Ability Adaption Needed Says Educationist

TORONTO (CP)—The three A's, age, ability and adaption, are as important in education today as the three R's, Rev. J. Kelly of St. Michael's College, says.

"We must adapt our curriculum to the individual pupil," he told 500 members of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association Saturday. Our education has been too intellectual, we must consider the physical, emotional, aesthetic, spiritual and social aspects of living, he said.

Dr. J. J. Geoghegan, Ronnewood Saskatoon, Guelph, said playing favorites, discriminating between pupils, sarcasm and ridicule from the teacher take their toll in mental ill-health. He said rapid promotion develops successful in brighter pupils because they can't cope with the students and subjects in senior grades.

DEMENS DAMAGE CLAIM

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A claim for $18,000 damages by William Craig, who said he lost the sight of one eye after being struck in the face, was dismissed in Supreme Court Friday. Craig said Jack O'Neill, a former neighbor now living in Montreal, assaulted him without provocation. But Mr. Justice Maurice King ruled the injury accidental.

Proper Inquiry Turned Down Says George Drew

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, says the government has turned down opposition requests time and again to have a "proper inquiry" into the whole system of government accounting and organization.

In a speech prepared for representatives of the southwestern Ontario constituencies meeting here Saturday, Mr. Drew said the government shows "disrespect for Parliament and for the people of Canada." Parliament "is treated as though it should be satisfied with any crumbs of information the government cares to give."

Mr. Drew said that opposition claims that the government is overtaxing the Canadian people and their request that something be done about loss of British markets is termed "nonsense."

He said there have been instances of colossal waste and extravagance in government expenditures. As an example he said they had bought a million and a half pairs of boots, more than a million ties, 15,000 greatcoats for the Canadian Women's Army Corps—although there are only eight in the active force—29,630 aluminum teapots and numerous other items of a similar nature.

He said the defence orders indicate "a breakdown of supervision which has been responsible for the loss of equipment and theft of stores across Canada."

13 Staff Chiefs Assess Strength Of Russia

PARIS (Reuters)—The 13 chiefs of staff forming the military committee of the Atlantic Pact today received a report assessing the military strength of Russia and her satellites.

They will consider it as they settle down to the task of preparing their own report on the progress of the western military build-up this year.

The military committee, meeting for the first time since February, is expected to approve plans for integrating the forces of Greece and Turkey into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Goals set by the committee at its last conference in Lisbon are the building of 25 active and 10 reserve land divisions in Europe this year are expected to be rounded.

Will Be Below Strength

But many of the formations, especially the reserves, will be below strength and there will be a short fall in the total of 4,000 additional aircraft.

The military committee will also consider developments in the search for a standard rifle for the Alliance.

Chiefs of staffs attending today's meeting include Gen. Lawton Collins of the U. S. and Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes of Canada, the rotating chairman.

Wednesday the military committee holds talks with NATO's permanent council in Paris to complete reports for the ministers' session due to open here next Monday.

London's Worst Fog in Years Blowing Away

LONDON (AP) — The great fog that gripped London for the fourth day today was blowing away this morning.

A cold wind came happily out of the southwest and the 8,000,000 prisoners of the biggest mass of modern times began to breathe more easily.

Air subsidity weather experts said the fog should clear completely during the day.

This morning, however, there were thick fogs in some sections. Even these were lightening quickly as the sun crashed through the smog overcast.

At the city's London and North-ast airports, visibility increased to 660 yards.

Central London, which only a few hours before dawn was a blind jungle of dampness, could boast 300 yards of visibility at 9 a.m. Conditions improved steadily as the morning progressed.

A weather expert said "the southwest wind is getting up and as it increases, the force of it will blow the fog away."

The Automobile Association, however, warned drivers to be careful of the patches of air trouble.

The fog was a break for burglars. More than 100 thefts were reported.

Officials estimated that the smog-laden mist had cost from £14,000,000 to £28,000,000 in smoke damage, loss of business and accidents.

Drivers' Permits To Cost $2 Next Year Says Doucett

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister Doucett says drivers' permits will cost $2 next year.

Speaking on a CBC provincial affairs broadcast Monday night, Mr. Doucett said the contribution to the unsatisfied judgments fund will be doubled from 50 cents to $1.

The highways department annual report shows that revenue from the fund during the last fiscal year was $780,000 while payments amounted to $932,000. The extra $200,000 was taken from the consolidated revenue fund.

The fund was established to pay accident claims where victims are unable to collect from the defendants in a traffic accident case. It also provides for claims in accidents where the guilty driver is not apprehended.

Mr. Doucett said more than 1,500 drivers are being removed from the highways each month.

Floating Crap Game Broken Up

TORONTO (CP) — Police early today broke up what they described as a huge floating crap game and arrested 34 persons. John Argier, 36, was charged with keeping a common gaming house in the basement recreation room of his bungalow in suburban North York.

Two High Red Officials Are Suspended

BERLIN (Reuters) — Premier Otto Grotewohl of East Germany today announced the suspension of two high Communist officials and the arrest of seven others with "sabotage which have developed."

Supply Minister Karl Hamann and his undersecretary, Rudolf Albrecht, were ousted from their jobs. Hamann, 48, has been under criticism for poor food supplies ever since he became minister three years ago.

Grotewohl also disclosed that a serious shortage exists in East Germany. For this he blamed Fritz Hantzs, former departmental chief in the supply ministry who fled to West Germany last month.

President-elect At Pearl Harbor On Thursday

ABOARD USS HELENA (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower and his party crossed the International dateline tonight and faced another day of full discussions on various aspects of problems in the Far East.

The Helena set through the date-line at 9 p.m. Tuesday. That set the clock and calendar back to Monday.

The ship is due at Pearl Harbor Thursday.

Top-level discussions continued Monday, but there was no announcement or report to indicate their trend. Eisenhower and his advisers met first as a unit, then broke up into smaller groups.

The president-elect and members of his "brain trust" took time out from weighty world problems to do some shore-shooting on the Helena's fantail.

Eisenhower, Gen. Lucius Clay and Treasury Secretary-designate George M. Humphrey shared top honors. Their shot for 30 minutes and did not miss once.

Then the Helena reached Pearl Harbor at the end of its 3,300-mile trip from Guam, the group will confer for possibly three more days with military leaders and advisers now gathered there.

Then the president will fly back to his headquarters in New York.

$15,000 in Jewels Taken in Daring Daylight Robbery

NEW YORK (AP)—A Brooklyn diamond merchant was robbed of $15,000 in jewelry early today by three men who met him outside his home and took his glasses to prevent him from identifying them.

Police said Jack Kastin, 48, was entering his automobile parked in front of his home at about midnight when two men approached him from behind.

One man who was reported armed grabbed Kastin's glasses before he could see the assailants. Then the two forced him to enter another automobile in which a third man was waiting.

The trio drove Kastin around for about 20 minutes before freeing him a few blocks from his home.

Justice Forced To Adjourn Murder Trial

WINCHESTER, England (AP)—An astounded judge adjourned a murder trial after he discovered the four defence witnesses had taken the afternoon off.

"I have never known such a thing to happen in my life in a murder trial," Justice Croom Johnson said Monday as he postponed the session to today.

The absence of the witnesses was disclosed when defence counsel summoned the first to the chair. A search disclosed that all four had gone home.

Chinese Charge Intolerable Acts Against Thailand

LONDON (AP) — Communist China today warned Thailand to "stop undermining the interests of Chinese in Thailand immediately" or suffer "grave consequences."

Peiping radio printed a statement by Ho Hsiang-ning, chairman of China's overseas affairs commission, specifically what it called the banning of two Chinese-language newspapers, Chuan Min Pao and Nan Chen Pao, by the Thai government.

Hsiang-ning charged this was part of the Thai government's consistent plan to undermine the interests of several million Chinese residing in Thailand. Such acts, it added, are "intolerable" to the Chinese.

It warned the Thai government to stop such measures at once, release all Chinese now "illegally detained" and lift the ban on the two newspapers.

Vishinsky Says UN Fails in Its 'Duty for Peace'

NEW YORK (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky sallied for home today with the comment that the "work of the (United Nations) General Assembly as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

Vishinsky made the comment before newsreel and television cameras as he boarded the French liner Liberte.

His remarks were translated by Alexandre Soldatov, an aide.

"Although the work of the assembly isn't finished yet," he said, "it shows that the general assembly does not fulfil its duty for peace. Its duty is fighting for peace. The very fact that the assembly adopted a resolution which is not promoting peace shows that its work as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

Valparaiso, the chief seaport in Chile, was founded in 1543.

DOOD EH

There was a time when hat-throwing had a bright prospect here. All they had to do was contact Bill Cook, Toronto Maple Leafs' manager, and immediately the hat would whirl with "scads" as far as Junior hockey is concerned.

Yep, there was a time when William, with no regard for pneumonia, or a lingering death, tossed caution to the winds wherever his juniors were getting, what he thought, the "wrong end of the deal."

He did it by the simple expedient of tossing a custom-made beauty (had to rouse guys) to the wide expanse of the surface, in protest of an official decision.

But that was years ago. Bill has discovered that that isn't any cure for beaver-away, to be bolded piecemeal by a steaming foeman. Yes, Bill has yet over that. Now he merely tosses a cigar butt in the lap of the nearest person handy. Incidentally there are almost five boxes of said cigars left. Which all adds up to the same as far as the Cookian habit is concerned. Bill gets both out his mind, when the urge demands.

Take last night in Peterborough, Bill took over the coaching job of his "Juniors" Marcelli, who hopes 'em pounds if every time, with, loss or draw, wins a beaut, due to business reasons.

So what happens?

William Scotch-loped his fedora to his sparely-thatched cranium, whispered instruction to the real-hungry Hawks and Pitt-be-damned, if he didn't come up with not only a win, but almost a real-wow-finish.

Yup, again, the kids walloped the Peterborough Triple Aces by a 12-4 fare-thee-well last night and in doing so demonstrated they are the rightful possessors of the city's top.

They are now four points in front of the pack.

And zombies this Oshawa pack is not so powerless packed after the night before. Why Vic held the group's Notre-Dame-Lately's to a three-all tie. Said it was a good one, too. The real test, however, will come when Bill's Marcelli-Juniors visit the City Hide-A-Way next Saturday, December 18th, in Oshawa. Good too, for the Oshawans that have as yet had the benefit of Junior "A" cast-offs." If they have, so what BATTLE THAT ARGUMENT!

In 1926-27 the National Hockey League was increased to a ten-club circuit when the New York Rangers, Chicago and Detroit Cougars were added to the league. The league was split into two divisions, the Canadian division being comprised of Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal Maroons, Canadiens and New York Americans. The American division included the Rangers, Boston, Chicago, Detroit and Pittsburgh. In the 1928-30 season the Pittsburgh franchise was transferred to Philadelphia and the next season their club dropped out of the league. In 1932-34 Ottawa dropped out and the franchise was given to St. Louis. The franchise, actually was the transfer of Ottawa's rights and players. In 1934-35 St. Louis dropped out after playing one season and quit the game indefinitely, leaving $6,000 each for its rights in the league and the franchise. The St. Louis players were distributed among the other clubs.

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Eddie Mac Jr., coached by Fawn Bros. of Mitchell Bay, won by Ace Hodgins, and Cecil Lud, owned by C. Hess Harrisburg and driven by Percy Pollard, scored a heat win in the 2:16 class and featured harness event at Dufferin Park Monday night.

Jerrod G., owned and driven by Ross Ryan of Toronto, won both heats in the fifth and secondary events. Tom C. Grattan placed second and Stewart Peabridge third with Jerrod.

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Ross, second baseman, was sent to the minors Monday by New York owners of the National Hockey League in Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern Hockey League. Ross is subject to immediate recall.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Billy Conn formally released as manager of the National League Pittsburgh Pirates, in serious condition at the hospital to which he was with a heart attack said Monday he was stricken with the attack while in his hotel room.

CHICAGO (AP)—World flyweight champion Yoshio Shirai of Japan will defend his title against Terry Allen, British 113-pound king, 10 rounds in Chicago Stadium Monday. The exact date was not given. Allen, former world flyweight champion, lost the crown to Pedro Marino who in turn was beaten by Shirai. Shirai defeated Marino in a return title bout in Japan on May 11.

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—Gerald Dodd of South Africa won the British Empire welterweight championship Monday night by pointing Cliff Curvis of Wales. Dodd, a 24-year-old boxer from Durban, was a clear-cut winner.

NEW YORK (AP)—Jackie Robinson and Gil Hodges won't be traded or sold, said Brooklyn President Walter O'Malley as he arrived Monday by plane from the major baseball meetings in Phoenix, Ariz. "All talk of their being traded is ridiculous," said the Dodger boss.

Goal-Hungry Hawks Rampage In Wide-Open Scoring Spree Lead Group by Four Points

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

In a bruising junior "B" hockey game, Barrie Black Hawks last night walloped Peterborough Oddfellows 12-4 in the Littlest city. A total of 23 penalties were called during the rugged tussle.

Ray Hermiston, Ron Halstead, Henri Therrien, Doug Hull and Dewey Jones each scored twice for the winners with George Jacklin and Pete Green adding singletons.

Roger Smith and Paul Doris each counted a pair for the losers.

The victory ended a fine for Bill Cook, general manager of the team who hauled the club in the absence of Coach Jim Garrett. It marked the first time a Cook club won in Peterborough while in the coaching traffic from the bench.

Black Hawks jumped into a three-goal lead in the first period on three unassisted tallies. Hermiston got the first when he rammed the loose puck in front of the Peterborough net and slammed it home.

Halstead racked up a dandy minutes later by grabbing the puck at his own blue line and racing all the way to score. Green repeated Halstead's performance when Garrett let on a breakaway.

The Hawks kept flying high in the second session. From a faceoff in the Peterborough zone, Jones got the puck to Ron Hull who drilled the best goalie Delahey. Hull made it 4-0 when he picked up a rebound and sliding in under the harassed Delahey.

Belleville pulled farther ahead when Jones pulled a spectacular, rushing dash to score. He came right back to set up Therrien. The latter faked Delahey out of his socks before pulling the trigger.

Smith finally put the Petes on the tally sheet by backhanding a shot past Barclay after taking Byrne's relay.

The locals, however, weren't standing still for such nonsense. Hermiston, from just in the blue centre, soon barged Hull's passback. They combined for Hermiston's second goal. Hull putting the finishing touch on a breakaway with Hermiston to make the count 5-2.

The Oddfellows got closer again, however, on a rush with Gardiner. Smith added another when he poked home a counter from a scramble on Barclay at doorstep. Halstead got that back before Doris scored when Gardiner's pass put him into the clear. That was the last gasp for the Petes.

Jacklin tore the length of the rink to notch Number 11. Jones wound up the scoring 45 seconds from the end after taking a pass from Green.

The Black Hawks had a good night, no doubt about it. Along with the scoring stars, Barclay played a pile of a game between the pipes. Smith and Doris were best for the losers.

The teams:

Belleville—Goal, Barclay; defence, Green and Sicoco; centre, Gilmour; wings, Jones and Therrien; reserves, Perillat, Halstead, Halstead, Hermiston, Hull, Casey and Power.

Peterborough—Goal, Delahey; defence, Wilson and Clapper; centre, Kennedy; wings, Smith and MacDougall. Alternates: Twist, Doris, Gardiner, McCracken, Gardiner, Doris, Sullivan and Byrne.

Referee: Calhoun, Oshawa; linesman, Kingdon, Peterborough.

Northern Electric Hockey Results

General Assembly and Office were returned winners in the week-end games of the Northern Electric Interdepartmental Hockey League. Assembly defeated Area "Q" 6-3 and Office turned back Sheet Metal 7-1.

Office grabbed a 4-0 lead midway through the second period before Sheet Metal scored its lone marker. Ken Scrimgeour added another in the period and one more by the third best.

Mulvihill paced the winners with three goals and an assist. Bush scored two with Woodley and James getting the others. Bailey scored for Sheet Metal.

Ted DeGray paced the Assembly attack with three goals with McCabe Soules and Gregory getting the rest. The Jones boys, Peter and Dewey accounted for Area's three markers with Peter getting two and an assist. Dewey also racked up an assist with his single tally.

Assembly drew a 3-1 lead in the first, increased it to 3-1 in the second and added three to Area's pair in the third.

Mixed Commercial Bowling League

Sun Rays, Bombers, K.V.A.'s, Symcos and Short Circuits were seven-point winners over Eye-heads, Fy Liners, Marketeers, Jets and Line in the Mixed Commercial Bowling League weekly session.

Whitsangs overcame Smash-erooos, 5-2 and Power Pins took a 6-3 victory.

Grace Clapp led the ladies with a 681 with Mary Fabbian having a 643 and Marie Bell a 617.

Gar Anderson was top scorer for the men with a 726.

Barrie's Teal Leads Junior Scoring Race

TORONTO (CP)—Skip Teal of Barrie Flyers still leads in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scoring race but two players are at his heels.

Statistics released by the OHA including games of Dec. 7 show Don McKenney, also of Barrie, and Murray Costello of Toronto St. Michael's within one point of the flashy Barrie forward.

Teal has 23 goals and 21 assists for 44 points in 25 games. Costello has 22 goals and 21 assists in 23 games and McKenney, who has run second only to Teal most of the season, has 23 goals and 20 assists in 25 games.

Jim McBurney of Galt Black Hawks has scored the most goals. He notched seven in two games during the week-end to bring his total to 36. He is in fifth place with 13 assists in 27 games for a total of 41 points. Wally Maxwell of Toronto Marlboros is fourth with 42 points, followed by McBurney.

John Henderson of Toronto Marlboros remained the goal-leading leadership with 37 scored against him in 23 games for an average of 2.48. Dennis Riggin of the last place Windsor Spitfires was next with 7.26.

Marlboros lengthened their lead to five points. St. Michael's held second place and Barrie was two points up on Galt to remain third.

Tiger-Tabbies Not Purring Yet, Drop 19th in Row to Kitchener

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The luckless Hamilton Tigers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series are still looking for a victory.

They got another dose of washday blues Monday night as Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen pulled to third place by defeating the Tabbies 5-3 in Hamilton. The only bright spot for the home-towners was the work of Al Bennett in the nets.

In dropping their 19th game of the season without a win or tie, Hamilton managed to score once each period. Billy Hammond got two for Tigers and Johnny Ritchie

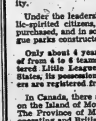
Under the leadership of various civic organizations and public-spirited citizens, teams have been organized, equipment purchased, and rink cares special regulation size Little League parks constructed.

Only about 4 years ago there were 94 Little League leagues of from 4 to 6 teams in existence. Today there are 1,784 registered Little Leagues comprising 7,538 teams in the United States, its present-day extension. Approximately 186,000 players are registered from the ages of 12 down.



In Canada, there are 8 Leagues in the Province of Quebec; 4 on the Island of Montreal, 1 in St. Johns and 1 in St. Rutsche. The Province of Manitoba has 25 Ball-fledged Little Leagues operating and British Columbia has 10.

Progress has been made in Little League baseball in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. There are leagues in Moncton, Saint John, Halifax and Sydney. There are fully equipped regulation Little League parks in Manitoba and British Columbia. These add color, incentive and pride. Williamsport, Pa., with a population of 50,000 has fifteen fully equipped Little League baseball parks.

It is estimated that over 20,000,000 people witnessed Little League baseball this year in the United States and Canada. There were 7,000 games going every week, and as the season is 10 weeks long this would give you 70,000 games played per season.

The most significant thing about Little League is the way it gets these boys in their formative years, giving them a chance to learn good sportsmanship, team play and proper submission to constituted authority. It gives the boys something constructive to do. It gives them a standing among their own age group and gives them a place in the community. It helps the boys acquire self-confidence and self-assurance. Important lessons it teaches are good sportsmanship, fair play, team play, and how to get along with others. On top of this, it provides wholesome recreational activity.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN
by Elmer Ferguson

One of the most interesting developments in Canadian sport has been in the last few years in Little League baseball, under a coast to coast blanket, and growing tremendously every years.

Few civic enterprises have made a more permanent contribution to the community. Through careful planning and able leadership this worthwhile activity has been made available to thousands of boys all over North America. Followed to meet the special needs of boys in the 8 to 12 age group, Little League baseball has gained widespread popularity.

Kesselring Wins Top Golf Honor For Second Year

TORONTO (CP)—Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener Westmount was named Canada's top amateur golfer for the second straight year.

The 23-year-old Kitchener player Monday was awarded the same rating by the Canada Golf Association's ranking committee as in 1951 when he displaced 36-year-old Mick Wesleck of Windsor Essex. Wesleck is ranked in the No. 2 spot this year. Phil Farley, veteran from the Toronto Scarboro club, stands third.

Others listed among Ontario's top 10, in order of ranking:

Keith Kirkpatrick, London Highlands; Bruce Carter, Toronto Islington; Gordon Ball, Kitchener Westmount; Doug McMillan, Toronto Scarboro; George Kluck, Windsor Lakewood; Ernie Bentley, Toronto Weston; Jerry Kuehnbeck, Kitchener Rockway; Jim Neale, Hamilton Glendale and Emerson Creed, London Hunt.

Kesselring won the 1952 Ontario open and amateur championships, the second amateur to win both provincial titles in the same year. Farley took both in 1945.

In Willingdon Cup interprovincial play, won by British Columbia, 10 tall, lean Kesselring scored 128 for 36 holes to tie the record set jointly by Jim Robertson of Vancouver and Weslock.

In Canada-U.S. matches at Seattle, he defeated Harvie Ward, Jr., British amateur champion from Tarboro, N.C., at the 38th hole and downed Fernando Gonzales of Mexico 11 and 9.

The rankings committee gave honorable mention for: R. J. Ansell, Toronto Lambton; Bob Fair, Toronto Scarboro Jerry Mann, Toronto Lambton; Bill Parkes, Woodstock Oxford; Colin Brown, London Hunt; Colin Sharp, Hamilton Burlington; Ernie Nerlich, Toronto Thornhill and Moe Norman, Kitchener Grand Valley.

What's This Publicity Gag?

QUEBEC (CP)—A hornet's nest has been stirred up here by a decision signed by Maurice Richard of the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens which said that part of the crowds attending hockey games in the Quebec Coliseum act like "bandits."

The column appeared over the NHL star's signature in the Montreal week-end paper Samedi-Dimanche last week-end.

Protests have been voiced by members of the city council, local sports writers and fans. Pro-mayor Gaston Filiatrio suggested that a "provincial sports commission" be set up.

The article was described as "insulting" to Quebec City by alderman Joseph Matte.

It said Quebec hockey fans throw coins, marbles and bottles at players on the ice and that there was no control over the crowds.

'Good Time' Is Horse of Year

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—For the second time in five years the U.S. turf writers voted Good Time, son of Hal Dale-On Time, harness racing horse of the year.

Holder of the single season all-time money winning record of $119,299, Good Time received 300 points on a 10-7-5-3-1 basis from 99 horse writers. He was the choice of 90 writers for first place.

Winner of the $25,000 National Pacing Derby and nine other events worth $10,000 or more, Good Time boosted his lifetime earnings to $318,782, a peak for standard-bred horses.

The poll, conducted by the U.S. Trotting Association, placed C.W. Clark's sharp Nots second with 459 points and Star's Pride, owned by R. R. Hartmann and L. B. Sheppard of Goshen, N.Y., third with 324.

'Lil Mo', Pal Win Australian Tennis Title

MELBOURNE (AP) — Little Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Calif., who seems to win a championship every time she picks up her tennis racquet, added another title to her list today when she teamed with Julie Sampson to win the women's doubles crown in the Victoria tournament.

The California "teen-agers trimmed the top-seeded Australian pair of Mary Hawton and Beryl Penrose 6-2, 6-4 in the finals.

The Aussies' crack doubles team of Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor whipped Ken Rosewall and Lewis Hoad 6-4, 13-4, 1-6, 6-3, in an all-Australian final of the men's doubles.

Guelph Bilts Break Even With Quebec

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series broke even in their home-and-home two-schedule tour of Quebec with a victory and a defeat.

Guelph defeated the 2-4 decision to Quebec Citadelles Monday night. They downed Three Rivers Reds 4-3 Sunday.

Toronto Marlboros start a Quebec tour tonight. The Marlies view the prospects with some doubt. Four players will miss the trip because of their studies. George Sloyan, Dave Jackson and Dave Reid are at University of Toronto facing Christmas exams while John McDonald has the same trouble at Brampton High School.

The Dukes will promote defenceman Red Sanderson and centre Charles Burns from Weston Dukes Junior B team to the series which starts tonight with Montreal Canadiens.

Citadelles scored four in the third period for their win. Raymond Cyr and Camille Henri notched two each. Other Quebec goals went to Roland Leclerc, Jacques Plante, Adolph Kukulowicz and Cignac. Chuck Henderson scored twice for Bills. Singles went to Bill McCreary and Danny Blair.

Barrie travels to Windsor in tonight's action while Oshawa is at St. Catharines in the series which starts tonight with Montreal Canadiens.

Canadiens Buy Gaye Stewart

MONTREAL (CP)—Frank Selke, general manager of Montreal Canadiens of the National League, announces the purchase of Gaye Stewart, veteran left winger of New York Rangers, for the waiver price of $7,500.

Stewart is expected to join the Montreal team in Toronto Wednesday night for a game against the Leafs.

The Canadiens hope Stewart, a 5ft1 William product, will add scoring punch to the team which has lost five and tied four games in their last nine starts.

SENATORS SELL RAFF

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Senators Monday announced the sale of outfielder Earl Rapp to San Diego of the Pacific Coast League. Rapp, 31, was obtained by the Senators on June 15 from St. Louis Browns. He ended the 1952 season with a .324 batting average.

'Slingin Sam' Fires Last Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sammy Baugh, possibly the greatest passer in football history, announces he will retire Sunday after Washington Redskins' game with Philadelphia Eagles.

This is his 16th year in the National Football League.

He has thrown the most passes, led the league the most often, completed the most passes, gained the most yards, thrown the most touchdown passes and had the biggest percentage of completions of any pro football player.

Baugh, who made the announcement Monday, began playing football in junior high school, and became widely known as a passer at Texas Christian University. He has played with the Redskins since 1937.

FRANKFORD Bowling League

FRANKFORD — The Frankford Bowling League saw no change in standing in either division this week. In Division "A" the Outlaws paced by "Fearless" Finnegan, rolled a clean sweep over Preston Chase's Jets, to strengthen their hold on first place. For the rest of the league, it was definitely a second division night as Jack Farley's Pick's Jockers took four points from Gib Gilmour's Gib's Gang, Rob Arnaskie's Roughriders took five from Ross Huffman's Racketeers, and Karl Austin's Curley's Crew took five from Lloyd Hannah's Robbers.

Standing: — Outlaws 65; Gib's Gang 58; Robbers 57; Racketeers 51; Hopefuls 45; Curley's Crews 43; Jack's Jockers 42; Jets 37.

In division "B" Karl Rogers' Merry Macs' closed the gap between first and second, as they took five points from Milford MacAuley's Aristocrats. Elmer Rogers' Screwballs took five from Melbourne Sharpe's Fearless Kids. Next week it's Screwballs and Merry Macs on 1 and 2, Aristocrats and Fearless Kids on 3 and 4.

Aristocrats 57; Merry Macs 58; Screwballs 43; Fearless Kids 32.

NAME WALKER CUPPERS

LONDON (AP)—Britain Monday named the first five members of her nine-man 1953 Walker Cup golf team to compete against the United States at Merion, Mass., next September. Lt.-Col. A. A. Ask U.S. to Keep Locks Open Until December 20

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government has asked the United States to keep open the U.S. locks at Sault Ste. Marie to Dec. 20 instead of closing them Dec. 15 as scheduled, says R. W. Milner, transport controller.

A reply from Washington is expected today.

Extension of the closing date would help in movement east of Canada's record grain crop, and it is considered feasible because of mild weather, Mr. Milner said Monday an extension might mean Canada could move an extra 8,000,000 or 9,000,000 bushels of grain out of the lakehead in the five-day period.

Even if the locks close as scheduled Dec. 15, Canada will still have moved between 215,000,000 and 220,000,000 bushels east via the lake route by that time, Mr. Milner said.

Meanwhile, the St. Lawrence river shipping season closed Monday, with the last grain shipments clearing from all river ports except Quebec.

Future Depends On Long Contracts Says Coldwell

AULTSVILLE (CP)—CCF Leader M. J. Coldwell says the future of Canada's dairy industry depends on obtaining long-term and stable markets overseas.

In an address Monday night before a man's service club he's, Mr. Coldwell said dependence on United States markets as outlets for Canadian agricultural surpluses has proven unwise.

The United States had imposed quotas on Canadian dairy products "in contravention of the General trade agreements" and "will not accept our surpluses when their domestic production falls short of their domestic requirements."

Mr. Coldwell said the decisions of the present Commonwealth conference in London "may have an important bearing on the disposition of our present and prospective agricultural surpluses."

The problem was one "British inability to earn sufficient dollars in Canada to buy goods here.

The problem was one "British inability to earn sufficient dollars in Canada to buy goods here.

One step to help solve this problem would be to defer payments on the $1,200,000,000 loan without interest and make the amount due Canada this year available for purchase of agricultural and dairy products, he said.

HANDBALL OVERHAND STROKES AND THE SERVE

Side-Arm Overhand Strokes
Send arm at a right angle, cock head behind ear. Face front wall in waiting position. Hit at or slightly above shoulder level, with left foot stepping forward. Control and speed comes from straightening arm and snapping wrist.

Full-Arm Overhand Stroke
Arm is fully extended here and ball is hit at full arm's length over the head and slightly back of the player. Body bends back at the waist and weight starts from the right leg. Left leg steps forward in direction of shot.

The Serve: Face side wall. Rest weight evenly on both legs. Body bends well forward, ball is held in left hand and dropped from about knee height. Keep head inclined slightly to rear — this allows server to observe opponent's actions.

Yes, It's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form on the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and games.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Get the jumps and you will no know have the fidgets. Besides each type of jump has its particular meaning. Believe it each admits certain values let denies certain qualities. Any jump responses admits ticks enough to help make a ne. If it is an immediate one- ump, two suves are among them. It is an immediate double- ump, it denies two suves. A bid of one heart was the opening by south with this hand:

♥ A K Q 10 9 3
♦ Q J 7 10 9 3
♣ None

West doubled for takeout. North double jumped to four hearts, promising heart support among five tricks and denying any more. East passed and it is now back to south.

Eight tricks are in the south hand. They are counted by the four high cards (aces, kings, queens), three shorts in (void) suits, one short in (doubleton) suits.

With five tricks shown by south, a count of 13 tricks thus turns up in the pair from where south sits. This will usually be enough for a slam. Should South go to slam in hearts?

To make a slam it is usually advisable to have enough aces and kings. Without them the counted tricks may not come in fast enough. Opponents may get enough defeating tricks first.

Therefore, unless prematurely pushed into it, slam should not be bid until enough aces and kings are found. To do this a player employs a convention signal for aces and kings asking.

The signal employed for this purpose is a bid of four no-trump. However, even with enough trick count it should not be used unless the player holds in his own hand two aces and a king.

South does not have the two aces and king required for a bid of four no-trump. So, he should pass the four heart bid. Safety first is always a good bridge policy.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fred Astaire's singing is the object of one of the biggest projects in phonograph record history. But he admits that he has never cared to hear himself sing.

Astaire, teamed was a big number of 40 songs, most of them published by Astaire in his long career. Designed as a collector's item, the album features his singing, plus a few numbers in which he ad libs some dance steps. Only 1,900 of the sets have been issued.

"I must admit I wasn't too hot on the idea," said the dancer. "But Norman Granz, the man who puts on Jazz at the Philharmonic, was eager to do it, so I agreed."

"The truth is that I have never cared for my singing voice. I know there are some people who think that it fits the sort of thing I do. But I just don't like my own singing.

"People seem to expect a dancer to sing, too. So I've always had to oblige them. But I'd much rather be dancing, and I try to keep the singing down to a minimum.

"As a result, I'm only singing nine numbers in this picture," "The Band Wagon."

Whether he likes it or not, Astaire's voice will doubtless be heard in movies for a long time. After "The Band Wagon," he is set to co-star with "White Christmas," an Irving Berlin opus with Bing Crosby.

CARD COUNT

IN KOREA (AP)—A fourth Korean soldier attached to the U.S. 45th division has learned to count in English by watching American soldiers at their favorite pastime. This way: "Ace, deuce, trey, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king."

300 Jet Fighters Complete First Lap of Flight

OTTAWA (CP)—The first group of more than 300 jet fighters being built in Canada for British completed the first lap of a flight to England, landing at Goose Bay, Labrador.

Air Force headquarters said the nine F-86 Sabres and their RAF pilots will wait at Goose Bay for another five Sabres to join them from Bagotville, Que., where the first nine started their flight.

The 14 jets then will head across the Atlantic over the same route used earlier this year by four squadrons of RCAF Sabres which flew overseas. They will stop at Bluie West, Greenland Keflavik, Iceland; and Prestwick, Scotland.

Calm Returns To New Mexico State Prison

SANTA FE, N. M. (AP) — Calm returned to the New Mexico state prison today with at least eight convicts in isolation after a vain effort to trade hostage guards for freedom.

Six more prisoners presumably were due the same punishment for taking part in a 20-hour rebellion. Warden Morris A. Abram said only that they probably were involved.

Governor Edwin L. Mechem said there would be an investigation.

The outbreak ended before noon Monday when eight captive guards — for whose release the convicts demanded a car to carry them through opened gates of the 900 year-old penitentiary — were freed by the 14 rebel prisoners.

The guards emerged unharmed from the barricaded prison but refused to talk about their experiences. Abram said they were well treated.

Mechem and Abram described the attempted break as "a spontaneous proposition" led by Robert Zadi, 32-year-old holdup man.

Britain to Take Legal Action If Oil Sold

LONDON (AP) — Britain has served notice she will take legal action against any American oil companies which try to buy or sell Iranian oil.

Foreign secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons Monday: "The British government continues to regard the products of the oil industry in South Persia (Iran) as the property of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company."

He said the government will stand by its "full legal rights" until Iran and Britain agree on compensation for AIOC properties nationalized by Iran 20 months ago.

New Wave of Arrests Reported in Belgrade

BELGRADE (Reuters) — The official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported today that Deputy Premier Zdenek Fierlinger, five ex-ministers and "many other people" are being held in a new wave of arrests in purge-torn Czechoslovakia.

The cathedral at La Paz, Bolivia, where 12,000 persons can worship, was started in 1835.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look to the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Good day generally, especially for study, teaching, research; for household needs, decorative and artistic projects. May need extra incentive for laborious tasks.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Your Venus and the Mercury aspects highly favor intelligent plans, astute management, personal and artistic affairs. Can be a profitable, pleasant period for cheerful Taurians.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Excellent indications for Gemini. Keen thinking, new ideas of worth, promoting and advertising sponsored. You can achieve.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—May not be a day for fulfillment of all desires, but if you are smart self you can advance. Mercury and Venus will aid.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Encouraging day but you must do your share to bring desired results. Patience, tolerance are necessities always but especially now.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Keep incentive for a gainful and universal day, no matter how difficult your schedule, be hopeful and cheerful; you may even double some returns.

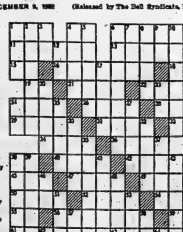
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Read Taurus, your indications similar. Don't permit trifling irritations to hinder progress or spoil high hopes.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio)—Much is up to you and how you use your ingenuity this mixed-type day. Important you keep a fairly steady pace. Skilled workmanship will pay extra.

November 24 to ... 22 (Sagittarius)—Jupiter does not give the "green light" to spending without reckoning nor for reckless investments. It is a promising day for you who manage ... affairs, smartly conscientiously.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Favorable Saturn rays linger from yesterday, ... benefic incentive—Mercury and Venus (artistic) vibra... should not find things too hard.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Very similar outlook to Capricorn now. Profit by advice to them. Be alert but not fidgety. Have faith in your own ability. Steady program best.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Favorable trend can run smoothly, profitably with your clever managing. Strike out for new gains, new clients; know that you can make good.

YOU BORN TODAY: Energetic, proud, inclined to be combative if things don't go as you'd like. You have fine characteristics, resources; rightly use these assets and you can be truly successful. Birthdate: Cesar Franck, noted composer; Thos. H. Gallaudet, pioneer teacher of deaf in U.S.

ASTHMA QUICK RELIEF

Don't wheeze, gasp, choke for breath. Take Templeton's RAZ-MAH Capsules, specially made to help relieve asthma in other more costly and complicated ways. So they work regularly and may bring restful nights of sleep. 45c, $1.35, 2.65

Chosen Candidate

GUELPH (CP)—Opposition Leader George Drew says communism is not a political doctrine "but organized treachery."

Speaking to the South Wellington Progressive Conservative Association Saturday night, he said the fight against communism should start at home and a law should be passed "which will give tools to destroy our freedom should be tried for treason."

Communist propaganda in foreign-language newspapers in Canada were poisoning the minds of new Canadians, Mr. Drew said.

Alfred D. Hales, Guelph businessman, was chosen Progressive Conservative candidate for South Wellington in the next federal election.

Director Tells Of Power From Atomic Energy

MONTREAL (CP)—Future atomic energy reactors may produce each year from 50,000,000 tons of coal or 57,000,000,000 kilowatt hours from only five pounds of atoms, Dr. D. A. Keys, director of Chalk River, Ont., atomic energy project, said here.

Addressing the young men's section of the Montreal Board of Trade Dr. Keys said Monday night the possibilities are limitless for obtaining power from atomic energy for industrial and domestic purposes.

Atomic furnaces could produce heat through nuclear reaction and, used to produce steam, could operate conventional generators. The heat that can be done at present is to obtain one tenth of one per cent of the possible energy from natural uranium 235.

Even this amount was tremendous, being equivalent in theory to the labor of more than 53,000 men for a year.

Police Charge Second Man With Armed Robbery

WELLAND (CP)—Police charged a second man with armed robbery in the holdup of the Calms Poppin bake and continued the hunt for a third. The holdup men fled with between $2,500 and $7,000.

John Recinot, 36, of Niagara Falls, who was taken into custody Friday night in a Niagara Falls hotel and brought here for questioning, was charged Saturday. The holdup was on Friday.

Earlier Edward Sorokowski, 25, of Niagara Falls, was similarly charged after being arrested in a bus terminal restaurant. Police said he had almost $1,000 in bills in his pocket, but was remanded Saturday to Dec. 12.

A warrant for the arrest of a third man has been issued.

Police said two bandits entered the savings institution in Welland's French-Canadian section while a third waited outside in a getaway car.

RECAPTURE ESCAPEES

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—Four men who sawed their way out of the provincial jail here Thursday were recaptured Friday near High Prairie, Alta. Police said they were driving a stolen truck. The four are Lorne McQuarrie, Gordon Johnson, Terrence Talbot and Conley Hall.

Canadian Destroyer Crusader Member 'Train-Buster Club'

ABOARD HMCS CRUSADER (CP) — This Canadian destroyer qualified as member of the "train-buster club" in a recent night patrol off the east coast of Korea.

The Crusader, commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. John Bower of Montreal, for some nights had stationed herself close to the enemy shore where a railway runs near the beach. Gun crews stood by their weapons, ready to open up the instant a train appeared.

Their shooting would have to be quick and accurate. There was only about 1,000 yards of exposed track running between two tunnels, with a smaller tunnel in the centre. With the train travelling between 25 and 30 miles an hour, the gunners didn't have much time.

Engine Is Target

Their instructions were to get the engine, thus stopping the train. However, the first night the crusader gunners managed to knock off only two box cars and on succeeding nights there were no trains.

On the last night of the patrol the chance came. The moment the train came in sight the 4.5-inch guns stopped it cold with one salvo.

When smoke cleared there was no sign of the engine, but it soon reappeared from the centre hundred, smoke and steam pouring from every seam. The guns gave it their full attention, but it disappeared again, so the Crusader turned her attention to the B box-cars left behind.

Air spotters reported at dawn: "Remains of 10 cars on and near railway, all badly damaged, several burned out, track cut in at least three places, with section of rail hanging down embankment.

CONVICTED OF THEFT
LONDON (Ont.) (CP)—Mrs. Helen Blanche Schmidt, 41, of Windsor, Ont., was convicted in county judge's criminal court Monday of theft of a $125 cost from Wolf Bros. Ltd. A saleswoman testified that Mrs. Schmidt on Oct. 14 took the cost to the shop door, then kept on walking. Judge J. F. MacMillan of St. Thomas remanded Mrs. Schmidt until Friday for sentence.

Crime turned over at bottom of punishment. Railway completely derailed.*

A she headed for port, the Crusader received this message from the commander of task force 95: "Welcome to the train-busters club."

SKELTON IN HOSPITAL

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Canadian Red Skelton entered hospital Monday for observation and possible surgery. A hospital attendant said Skelton was suffering from a hernia condition.

NOTICE TO ONTARIO MOTORISTS

Re Unsatisfied Judgment Fund Fee

Notice is hereby given, that pursuant to the Highway Traffic Act and effective with the issue of 1953 motor vehicle operators' and chauffeurs' licenses, an Unsatisfied Judgment Fund Fee of $1.00 will be collected from each person to whom is issued a 1953 license.

This increase in fee is required in view of the fact that the 50 cent fee heretofore collected has proven to be inadequate to meet the demands for payments out of the fund. Since 1947 when the fund was created payments out have exceeded $3,000,000. During the current year it has been necessary to obtain an advance of $300,000 from the Treasury Department in order to make the payments required. A further advance will be required to meet the payments anticipated before the end of the fiscal year (March 31, 1953).

A detailed statement of the Fund may be obtained by writing to the Registrar of Motor Vehicles, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 2, Ont.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

"Well — oh — well —" Curly stammered, running his fingers through his hair. Of all things to have the tables turned on him so easily by his own son, a boy of fourteen. And Curly thought, this is not impertinence, this is not disobedience. This is not the way I was brought up, but it makes good sense. Yes, why should any parent force his son to be what he does not like? Why not permit him to make his own choice? And so he said, "We'll go into this matter some other time, Peter," and let it go at that.

Much to Miss Wood's disappointment, Peter failed in his leader stand. The Walkers returned to Bellevue without him. When school re-opened after the holidays, Peter was back in class, and remain there, if all was well, until summer. holidays which started late in June.

When spring returned to the farmland, Johnny-Molkwk, on starting on his spring and summer cut, he was in Bill McTaggart's office with a proposition — to trade logs for lumber.

"Going to build something, Curly?" McTaggart asked.

"Yes, when I can afford to, Curly agreed, "but I thought if I got the lumber now, it would be well seasoned by the time I'll need it. I can take home a load with me every night."

"That will be all right with me, Curly," Bill said promptly. "Tell you what to do. Go down into the yards and pick out a pile of lumber. Tell the men that that pile is yours and to keep their hands off. You make sure is as you take it away, and when you're done drawing it, bring in your figures and I'll tell you what you owe me in logs on skids close to the creek."

So that's how it was that Curly Brown was drawing home a load of lumber every night, and that was why Dummy McGowan was in his bush cutting logs. People began to ask "what is Curly up to now?" Hazel also wanted to know, but all she got for an answer was "you might be surprised."

But there were more surprises in store for Hazel than that. Late one afternoon Curly was in Belanger's store to order some groceries, when the merchant handed him a parcel.

"This," Belanger said, beaming, "is for Hazel, the best clerk I ever had. It's the nates for a dress, a blue silk dress, that I promised her a long, long time ago. Hazel's a fine girl, Curly, a fine girl—"

"Out at Hard Acres, we think she's the best," Curly grinned, "but from what she tells me, she won't be wearing that sort of dress this summer."

"You—mean—" Jules Belanger's eyes rounded.

"Yes, I guess I do."

Jules Belanger reached across the counter and grabbed Curly by the hand. "Congratulations, Curly, and extend the same to Hazel. I think you should have a girl this time, don't you?"

"Yes, I do," Curly laughed, "but I suppose we'll have to take what we get and be satisfied"

Railways, Union Resume Talks On Wage Dispute

Friendly Attitude Marks Meeting, No Statement

MONTREAL (CP)—Railway and union officials met for 1½ hours today in resumed negotiations on their lingering wage dispute and scheduled another session for Thursday afternoon.

No statement was issued by either side after today's meeting, but the conference was reported to be friendly. Neither side would indicate how long the talks may last.

The dispute is between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and two national and 23 international brotherhoods representing 144,000 non-operating railway employees, those who don't actually operate trains.

The two parties came together on an invitation extended by Labor Minister Gregg after the unions rejected and the railroads accepted a federal conciliation board recommendation that the employees be given a 12-cent-an-hour wage increase. The unions sought a 45-cent raise; the railways offered an increase of seven per cent.

The meeting was in federal labor department offices here.

U.S. NAVY PLANES BOMB TARGETS NEAR MANCHURIA

Biggest Seaborne Raid Of the Korean War

By SAM SUMMERLIN

SEOUL (AP)—U.S. Navy planes smashed four big Communist rail and supply targets on the doorstep of Manchuria in the biggest seaborne raid of the Korean war.

One of the strikes carried American planes on their northernmost raid of the war, to the limits of a Korean strip that juts into Manchuria. It hit a surface target on three sides by that Chinese Red Province.

It also carried the navy planes within 12 miles of Soviet Siberia and almost directly north of the Russian port of Vladivostok which lies to the east.

Targets of the Tuesday raids were Hoeryung, Musan, Najin and Hyesanjin.

Panther jets, Sky Raiders and Corsairs from the Carriers Princeton, Bon Homme Richard and Essex launched the bombers, jurisdictions, locomotives, box cars, buildings and supplies.

Part of Lntry

Musan is the northernmost target; is within a few hundred yards of the Manchurian border and is the port of entry to Korea for the major east-coast rail lines.

Najin and Hyesanjin, the vital rail line there was wiped out and Hoeryung was blacked out by smoke from raging fires.

Musan is southwest of Hoeryung. Najin is due east of Hoeryung. Hyesanjin is inland, southwest of Musan.

The navy listed this toll:

Destroyed—Eight rail repair shops, 30 locomotives, 30 box cars, seven buildings, 500 yards of tracks and six trucks.

Damaged—18 buildings, five locomotives, two tank cars, 19 trucks, one locomotive shop and one roundhouse.

Heavy Damage

The commander of Task Force 77 said "the enemy has suffered heavy damage."

One of the year's major lulls clung to the ground front.

The Chinese and North Korean armies held their fire except for brief skirmishes.

Rear Admiral A. Van Fleet's Eighth Army reported UN ground forces killed 1,875 Reds and wounded 1,875 Red soldiers last week. This is the lowest figure in three months.

President-Elect Eisenhower Looking Forward to Hearing MacArthur's Views on Korea

By DON WHITEHEAD

ABOARD USS HELENA (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower is willing to hear any plan his old commander, Gen. MacArthur, may have for ending the Korean war.

An exchange of messages, announced Tuesday aboard this heavy cruiser carrying the President-elect and members of his projected administration to Hawaii en route to the United States, cleared the way for a conference between Eisenhower and MacArthur.

It also appeared to dissipate whatever coolness had developed between the two former chiefs of staff during the presidential campaign.

"I am looking forward to informal meetings in which my associates and I may obtain the full benefit of your thinking and experience" on Korea and the Far East, Eisenhower radioed MacArthur Sunday.

MacArthur Replies

MacArthur replied Monday: "I am grateful for your interest in my view.

"A successful solution might well become the key to peace in the world."

The exchange followed MacArthur's speech in New York Friday, when he said "there is a clear and definite choice to be made—conflict" without unduly increasing the chances for defeating the cold world war.

MacArthur implied there is a willingness to present his views to Eisenhower.

Eisenhower made it known that he wanted MacArthur's views.

MacArthur had been cool to Eisenhower's candidacy for the presidency, favoring the nomination of Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

May Heal Breach

But the exchange of messages appeared to be more than the without making a speech about it."

$11,029 Given In Damage Suit

WELLAND (CP)—Damages of $11,029 were granted in Buffalo plaintiffs by Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson in a Supreme Court action arising out of a two-car collision March 18.

The cars collided on Homer bridge crossing the Welland Canal east of St. Catharines. The plaintiffs claimed more than $50,000. Judgments were against Helen Cooper, owner and driver respectively of the car which struck the United States automobile.

The largest awards were $3,508 to Harry Howe and $4,283 to Delores Decarie, 18.

President-elect asking for MacArthur's Korean views, pointed out MacArthur had aboard this ship that it was a diplomatic move by Eisenhower to heal the breach and give his administration the benefit of MacArthur's long experience in dealing with Far East matters.

Twenty months ago MacArthur said he proposed to bring a final solution in Korea included bombing Red China bases in Manchuria, blockading the Red China coast and amphibious landings on the Chinese mainland to drive Communist forces from Formosa.

But MacArthur reiterated Friday that changed conditions called for a revised plan. He said public disclosure or discussion now would be improper.

In Washington, a high defence department official said it was "highly unlikely" a soldier to present the plan through army channels "without further ado and

GOVT. PREPARING COURT ACTION IN VISA FRAUDS

Charges Will be Laid Against 5 or 6 Persons

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government is preparing court action against a half-dozen persons involved in visa frauds through which hundreds of immigrants entered Canada illegally last year.

Immigration Minister Harris disclosed this in the Commons Tuesday in a brief reply to a question by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader.

Mr. Harris said charges will be lodged against "five or six persons" whom he did not identify. The charges now were being prepared by officers of the immigration and justice departments.

Latest Action

This government step is the latest action in a departmental and RCMP investigation which began last year when the discovery that between 200 and 300 immigrants from Italy and Germany had entered with fraudulent visas. The visas were said to have been obtained with the connivance of immigration department officials in Rome, Naples, Germany, and Montreal.

Many of the illegal immigrants have been tracked down and deported. Other developments to date include the arrest of a visa officer in Rome and another in Karlsruhe. Two employees of the immigration department's Montreal staff have resigned.

It was learned that the first series of charges will deal only with the illegal entry of persons concerned the major racket. They may be charges of bribery under the Immigration Act or charges of conspiracy under the Criminal Code, both of which carry substantial penalties.

Drew Enters Debate

Mr. Drew entered the general debate situation by asking that the sitting to reiterate a demand for government consideration of the television policy. He continues his speech today.

He said the government would permit private stations only in "essentially unfavorable areas." But it was going to use the taxpayer's money to finance CBC operations in the "favorable areas" Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Halifax.

$220,000 Slot Over Lost Gold Is Launched

TORONTO (CP) — A $220,000 damage suit over lost gold was launched against Trans-Canada Air Lines.

The action accuses the airline of gross carelessness in the loss of 76 bones of gold worth all nearby Malton airport Sept. 24. G. McMurty instituted the action Tuesday in Supreme Court of Ontario. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt and the Johnson Mattheyy Company of London, lawyers for joint owners of the gold shipment.

Police said at the time of the theft that a man had been taken to the airport for shipment to Europe by way of Montreal but only four reached Montreal.

Footе Criticizes Don Jail Report Blaming Governor

Indicates Brand to Stay Despite Judge's Findings

TORONTO (CP)—Reforms Minister Foote indicated today that Thomas W. Brand may be kept on as Don jail governor, although a royal commission report recommends Mr. Brand's replacement.

"I think the decision as to whether he will be left as governor will rest with me," said Mal. Foote. "I may be the one to stand that much serious thought should be given to him remaining in his post.

"My feeling is that Brand is a good man. He went to the Don after a notorious reformatory, an entirely different institution, under the most difficult circumstances, in that he was not trained for such work. "He has now, I think, the necessary experience to handle the job and I feel certain in my mind that he could handle the task.

Had No Choice

"I am not going to throw anyone to the wolves. I am convinced there was a gentle, tough problem at the Don. We did not know about it either and I don't think we can put too much blame on the Governor Brand.

"Myself, the deputy minister and the chief inspector all assumed things were in a normal state of affairs. The jail had a new name to blame than I am."

Mr. Foote and Mr. Brand should have reasonably expected that Deputy Governor Alexander Wolfe, with 25 years experience, would have carried out safety orders at the jail.

According to the evidence, however, he (Wolfe) left instructions behind the night-bail when he ignored the warning signals from the listening devices which had been placed in the prisoners' cell corridors. He further ignored the four dangerous prisoners in the jail for about three hours.

Noble also picked the least experienced men to guard those four prisoners and he did not institute a thorough search of the cells.

"In any event, Brand will, I am sure, be a valuable asset to the department."

Mr. Noble himself, commenting on the report, said he thought it "fully justified" in recommending Mr. Brand's replacement.

Further Inquiry

Mr. Foote said there should be an immediate inquiry into the whole jail set-up and it should be decided whether the city or province should take the lead in this.

He thought the 30 extra beds recommended for mentally-ill prisoners too many.

"That type of prisoner should be cleared right out of the jail. They simply do not belong in an ordinary jail."

Two Eldorado Men Killed In N.Y. State

ONTARIO CENTER, N.Y. (AP) —Two Canadians were killed Tuesday night when the auto in which they were riding and a truck collided head-on about a half-mile west of this Wayne county village.

They were Grant P. Sager, 22, and Kenneth J. Alexander Whilman, 24, both of Eldorado, Hastings County, Ont.

Sager's body was taken to the Howe and Atchison funeral home in Ontario, N.Y. Whiteman's body was removed to the Monroe county morgue in Rochester.

The two young men were employees of the Ontario Hydro at Fenwick in the Niagara district. It is believed they had motored over New York State to spend the evening when the accident occurred.

Sager is survived by two brothers, Leslie, and Charles, both of Eldorado, and a sister Mrs. Bert Hynds, Hillier. Whiteman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whiteman of Eldorado, near Eldorado. Neither of the two young men was married.

Provincial police at Madoc early this morning notified the families of the accident.

Says Accents Decide Choice U.K. Officers

LONDON (AP) — A Labor Member of Parliament says that British army officers are selected for their accents and not for their competence.

The charge was made in the House of Commons yesterday by George Wigg, a one-time regular army private who rose to the rank of colonel. He quoted an army statement to the effect that 80 per cent of conscripts granted commissions live south of a line drawn across the country through the Midlands industrial center of Birmingham.

British accents vary according to geographical locations. Wigg, himself, is from Dudley — six miles from Birmingham line.

War Minister Anthony Head agreed that most of the commissions were granted men from south of the Birmingham line. This is "a fact that has been known for years," he said, but gave no explanation.

Nehru Denies Oath to Queen Is Contemplated

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Prime Minister Nehru today angrily denounced an allegation of "monstrous nonsense" a report that he would take the oath of allegiance to the Queen at her Coronation in London next June.

He told opposition members of the legislature who had tried to force the issue that the reports were guilty of "amazing irresponsibility." Before taking formal action for a debate they should first have asked him if there were any truth in the rumor, he said.

The opposition shouted back: "Tell us who are irresponsible," and "don't lose your temper." Nehru's supporters added their shouts to the din.

The opposition motion for a debate was rejected before the legislature met, and the matter would not have been aired if a New Delhi newspaper had not published an account of the motion. That touched off the clamor.

India became a sovereign republic in January, 1950. She remained a full member of the British Commonwealth, however, accepting the Sovereign as "the symbol of the free association of its independent member nations and, as such, the head of the Commonwealth."

The report referred to by the opposition appeared Dec. 4 in the German-language newspaper Neue Zeitung published in Munich under sponsorship of the U.S. high commissioner for Germany and his role in the Commonwealth, and then said:

"In recent years have passed since India achieved her independence, and the man who is to invest Elizabeth with the Coronation as India's representative is the man who has spent many years in a British prison for his leading part in the struggle for that independence. . . ."

No One Injured As Trains Bump Nose to Nose

MONTREAL (CP) — Two slowly-moving freight trains bumped nose to nose today on a Canadian Pacific Railway bridge at the northeast suburb of Bordeaux but damage was comparatively light and no one was injured.

Several wheels of one locomotive were derailed as the engines came together at 9:45 a. m., blocking the double track and holding up passenger trains heading out of the island of Montreal. Railway officials said the lines soon would be cleared.

The accident occurred on a narrow CPR bridge spanning Montreal Harbor, which separates the island of Montreal and Ile Jesus, big island to the north of the city.

The collision was between a freight eastbound into Montreal from Three Rivers, Que., and one leaving Montreal island for the Laurentian valley north of Thereso.

Was Backing Out

The Three Rivers freight was backing from the "out" track on to the "in" track to make way for other traffic when it was hit by the Three Rivers train, approaching on the "in" track.

However, both freights were moving slowly and in the same direction—the Ile. Therese freight backing and the Three Rivers freight approaching. Hence the impact was not heavy enough to cause serious damage.

The front ends of both engines were badly dented.

The line is the main CPR route for trains going to Quebec and Ottawa on the south shores of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers and also serves trains bound for the Laurentian mountains.

RULE NOVEL OBSCENE

TOKYO (Reuters)—The high court today ruled that D. H. Lawrence's novel "Lady Chatterley's Lover" was obscene and upheld a 250,000 yen $700 fine imposed by a Japanese publisher by a lower court.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis — Very mild air moving northward from Gulf of Mexico has brought near record temperatures to Ontario for the past day or two. However, cooler air is moving steadily eastward across Prairie provinces and will cover all of Ontario by tonight. Along the junction of these two different air masses, a wide band of precipitation formed on Tuesday and will continue across Ontario stopping in the Windsor area around noon today.

Temperatures on Thursday will range from the low forties in southern Ontario, to the low thirties in the north

U.S. Historian Says Britain, France Planned 1940 'Rescue' of Finns

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain and France had a plan for marching across neutral Norway and Sweden to help Finland from Russia, but action was delayed and the operation dropped when Finland surrendered, a British official war history disclosed today.

The plan, approved by the Allied supreme war council Feb. 5, 1940, contemplated sending two or more Allied brigades to the front where the Finns were sturdily resisting Russian invasion, according to T. K. Derry in "The Campaign in Norway." It is the first of a series of official war histories published by the British government.

Derry, who has a specialized knowledge of Scandinavian affairs, wrote: "On its way to rescue the Finns the main striking force was to land at Narvik and proceed along the railway to Kiruna and Gallivare, the centres of the rich North Swedish ore-field, and on to the Baltic port of Lulea.

"On March 12 however, March 12 approved a plan for rushing volunteers ashore at Narvik, but the Finns surrendered the same night.

"On March 14 the British war cabinet decided, with the reluctant assent of the French, that in the altered circumstances our plans would meet with positive resistance from Norway and Sweden and might drive them into the arms of Germany," Derry said.

Show of Religious Freedom Put On for Delegates Attending Peace Conference

By Gerard Filion

The organizers of the Peking Peace Congress took great care that the delegates would not lack for any material comfort. They didn't even forget their spiritual needs. On the Sunday following our arrival, they were told that they would High Mass to be celebrated in the Catholic cathedral of the Holy Saviour.

There must have been about 20 of us Westerners who attended it. Later, it turned out that very few of them were Catholics. Several Protestants came along to see how free the Catholic Church is in the new China.

First of all, the whole thing looked shady to me. So many people were attending it with unprecedented interest in this Mass. And then, there was such a scattering of traffic policemen, such a waving of flags, torches and banners that I couldn't help but feel suspicious. When such enormous means are used to prove that liberty exists, liberty does not need to be proved with such fanfare.

The Holy Savior Cathedral is presided over by Cardinal Tian, who has been in Rome since May—he came to Peking for the congress. The priests remained faithful to Rome or have they gone over to the side of the reformed church which is declared to be Communists? Only the religious authorities can answer this question. A passing newspaperman can hardly possess the facts which would allow him to unravel the mystery.

RELIGIOUS CEREMONY

We were led to benches before the ceremonies began. The church was invaded by an army of cameramen. There were reporters in the nave, the transept, in the choir loft, almost on the altar. In the aisles, the Mass-dressed cameramen walked down to the aisles, the choir, etc. There were some 20 nuns on the right side of the church. Had they been dressed for the event? Were they real nuns? There was no check disclosed regarding this point. Red rags had been stuffed into the armholes of that one and of eight other nuns.

The Mass was sung by four voices in the best Western style. The ceremonies delivered in Chinese. They say he spoke about peace. And during the whole Mass cameramen worked like madmen. They must have taken thousands and thousands of feet of film. Some of them took a single picture. They wasn't photographed in every position, seated, standing and on his knees.

After Mass there was a reception in the presbytery. The celebrant who was said to be the administrator of the diocese received us (about 10 Westerners) to tell us that the church is free in New China. Dr. Hou Wen-Yoo, director of the University of the Dawn, a progressive Christian and therefore rejected by the Catholic Church, took it upon himself to provide the explanations. He looked uneasy. I had already had a couple of chances to question him and he had been rattled by my queries. I should explain that the University of the Dawn was the great Shanghai university run by French Jesuits. It was nationalized like the others and Dr. Hou, a former graduate of Louvain and a professor of mathematics, went over to the Communist regime and became director of the university.

At the reception, there was a Mr. Burns, a London fireman, two New Zealanders and two Indians. Mr. Burns talked with the administrator on the freedom of religion in the New China. Everything went well. The explanations were logical. Besides, we had just had proof of the existence of religious freedom. We had just taken part in a religious service.

Church Council Head Denounces New Bible Work of Satan's Agents

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Rev. Carl C. McIntire, president of the radical, pro-Communist ideas in these very churches, with the backing of the Bible project.

Rev. McIntire is president of the International Council of Christian Churches and a founder of the American Council of Christian Churches, which sponsored the rally.

Rev. McIntire addressed a crowd mostly of smaller, young denominations, have strongly opposed the national council, embracing more than two-thirds of American Protestants.

Mr. McIntire said the Bible was the "smoothest, slickest, biggest sales promotion job ever put over on the American people," and announced a series of rallies would be held across the country Jan. 30 to protest it.

Burned to Death

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Ethel Marlene Windover, nine months, was burned to death Tuesday in a log cabin on a farm on Lakefield road, 30 miles northwest of Peterborough.

She was the second child the parents, Gerald Windover, 33, and Laura Margaret, 32, have lost. In March, 1950, their three-month-old baby died as it strayed about unbowing a fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Windover had left the baby in her crib in a bedroom at the back of the cabin while they went to a neighbor. When they returned five minutes later the cabin was ablaze.

TOOTH TRANSPLANTED

VIENNA (Reuters)—A human tooth has been successfully transplanted, Dr. Kalman Kerenstei, lecturer at a dentistry dental clinic, described the operation Tuesday. He said three years ago he removed a tooth from a boy of 10. He transplanted it to the jaw of a 30-year-old woman in a corresponding position. The tooth grew normally.

MASTER OF ORGAN HEARD OVER AIR

A new 15-minute radio show named "Too Little Time" made its debut over radio station CFRB Tuesday at 9:45 p. m. The lone star of the show is Deag Whalen, sensational young organist from Belleville.

In his inaugural program, Mr. Whalen played "El Rancho Grande," "Taking a Chance on Love," "Indian Love Call" and a fast-moving Strauss medley.

Born, reared and educated at St. Catharine's Separate School, Mr. Whalen's first job was with the Northern Ontario Organs at the Belleville plant. Later, he played at the Odeon theatre here, before taking over a feature spot on station CFRB.

Toronto and his wife find them beckoned the young musician.

TV SETS SUBJECT TO LICENCE FEE

Contrary to some reports, television sets are subject to a licence fee of $2.00, the same as radio receiving sets, according to A. G. E. Argue, radio inspector of the Department of Transport, Kingston.

"Television is a form of broadcasting, and as such is required to be covered by a licence receiving station licence," he added.

Mr. Argue is in the city checking up on radio and television licences. He intimated that court action will be taken against persons operating radios or television sets without a licence. The $2.50 fee covers both radio and TV.

FIRE TRUCK, TAXI IN COLLISION ON CEDAR STREET

While racing to a fire at the Bakelite Company plant early today, a fire truck owned by the local fire department was in collision with a taxi. Damage of about $350 resulted to the right side of the taxi, while the bumper and front fender of the fire truck were damaged.

The fire truck, driven by Fireman Fred Dalnard was being driven south on Cedar Street, when it was in collision with a Dafoe taxi operated by Roy Maingrist, R.R. 3, Belleville. The taxi was proceeding west on Catherine Street.

WEIGHT OF TANK TOO MUCH FOR TRUCK

The weight of a big storage tank at the Bakelite plant east of the city proved too much yesterday for a crane truck owned by Lightfoot Brothers.

The crane had been secured to move the big empty tank but when the winch was operated to move the tank, the weight apparently proved too much and the crane truck was tipped completely on its side. This morning workmen were preparing to set the crane truck back on its wheels.

Obituary

JOHN NEWTON ALFORD (Toronto-Belleville)

John Newton Alford died at his home, 36 Chichester Road, Toronto, on Tuesday, after an illness of six months' duration.

Born in this city he was in his 67th year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Alford. He received his education in the local school and upon graduation from the high school he entered McGill University, Montreal, from which institution he graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science. At the outbreak of the First World War he enlisted in the fall of 1914 with the Eaton Machine Gun Battery, Toronto, and went overseas with that unit. Later he transferred to the Royal Canadian Engineers and served with the engineers in France for the duration of the war.

Upon returning home in 1918, the late Mr. Alford resided in Hamilton for a time and then entered the service of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario as an electrical engineer and for the past 37 years he was employed by the commission and resided in Toronto. During the Second Great War Mr. Alford served as an engineer with the Royal Canadian Air Force and was stationed in British Columbia.

The late Newton Alford was a member of the United Church and fraternally he was a member of The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A.F. & A.M.; member of the Society of Professional Engineers, and the Knights of the Round Table Fraternity, McGill University, Montreal.

Surviving him are his wife, Dorothy; one sister, Miss Edith Fanny Alford, Belleville; two brothers, Mr. Ernest C. Alford, Montreal, and Dr. Harry E. Alford of the Customs Department in this city.

Interment will take place at the Alford family plot in Belleville cemetery on Friday.

The announcement of the funeral arrangements is made elsewhere in this edition.

ROYAL THOMAS WARREN

Marmora—St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was well filled on Monday afternoon for the funeral of Royal Thomas Warren which took place under auspices of Marmora A.F. & A.M. 222 of which the deceased was the oldest member and holder of Grand Lodge 50 year jewel. The service was conducted by Rev. K. J. Crawford B.A., B.D., who gave an impressive address on the text of the 90th Psalm: "Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place."

Hymns chosen were favorites of the deceased member "Unto the Hills Around Do I Lift Up My Head" and "Abide With Me." Following the committal taken at the graveside in Marmora Protestant cemetery by Rev. K. J. Crawford the last rites of the Order were conducted by Right Bro. C. H. Bullard, Wor. Bro. Canon C. M. Brownlie and Wor. Bro. H. C. Barlow.

The pall bearers were William Barlow, Sidney Sandham, Ralph Neal, Jesse Reid, Harry Johnston and Edward Warren.

THOMAS JAMES MOFFATT

Marmora—Thomas James Moffatt died suddenly on Monday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. James Jones, in Marmora township. Sixty-six years of age and unmarried, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Moffatt and was born in Marmora township. A cripple all his life, he bravely faced his disability. He attended Marmora public school and was one of the pupils there when the late Hon. Robert Weir was principal. He greatly prized a picture he possessed of his old schoolmates.

After attending university in Toronto, he later was employed for a period by the Canadian General Electric Co. in Peterborough.

Later still he engaged in light farming including the raising of hogs. He was a man of varied interests and always much engrossed in sports of every kind. When in Peterborough he was attending to the baseball Salvia football team and closely identified himself with other sports in that city. As he returned to his native district he followed baseball and hockey managing different teams and also umpiring baseball games at the plate.

He was a worker also for the Conservative party and a supporter of Marmora Agricultural Society. In religion he was an Anglican.

He is survived by two brothers, Arthur, Peterborough, and John, Marmora township, and two sisters, Mrs. James Jones, Marmora township, and Mrs. Gordon Bell, Walkerton.

The funeral took place this afternoon from the residence of his nephew, Gordon Jones at 1.30 p.m. for Zion United Church, North Marmora, where Canon J. M. Brownlie officiated. Interment took place in the family plot in Zion cemetery.

ROBERT HOWARD JONES

The funeral of Robert Howard Jones, who was killed in a car accident near Tweed on Saturday evening, was held from the Bellville Burial Company Funeral Home on Tuesday afternoon. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. S. E. Larman and he also said the committal rites in Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Arnold Welch, Joe Corneveaux, William Carson, Albert Sivrits, William Hicks and Robert Rump.

FRANCES REID

The funeral of Frances Reid, killed in an accident on Saturday night near Tweed, was held from the home of his parents to Sidney Baptist Church on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. Keith Daniel conducted the service and also the last rites at Gaffin Cemetery.

The bearers were Kenneth Groves, Douglas Prest, Everett Reid, Kenneth Sloan, Lloyd MacInnes and Don MacInnes.

50 YEARS ON COUNCIL

VISCOUNT, Sask. (CP)—Robert Hastie will have served 50 years on municipal council at the end of this year. He was reeve for 37 years. Mr. Hastie, who travels 15 miles to meetings, hasn't missed one.

Motorists, Pedestrians Asked To Use Extra Precaution In Pre-Christmas Rush

The co-operation of pedestrians and motorists to use extra precaution in making this an accident-free pre-Christmas shopping period, was asked today by Police Chief Walter Probert.

Children especially were urged by the police chief to use every precaution when crossing streets and all pedestrians were asked to cross streets at designated cross walks instead of in the middle of the block. Stepping out from between parked cars was also frowned upon, Chief Probert noting this was one way to invite accidents.

It was pointed out that downtown traffic will be particularly heavy from now until the Christmas shopping period is over.

"Motorists are asked to drive carefully and to be on the lookout particularly for children who despite repeated warnings are apt to dart out from between cars," the chief said.

Motorists were also warned to lock cars when parcels are left in them Unlocked autos merely invite theft.

"With full co-operation by everyone we can go a long way toward making the pre-Christmas shopping period a safe one," Chief Probert concluded.

William Bailey New President Canadian Legion

William Bailey, active and enthusiastic member of the Canadian Legion, Branch No. 80 since his return from overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the Second World War, was elected president of the branch by acclamation at the annual meeting held in the clubrooms on Coleman Street on Tuesday evening. L. Monteith was chosen as first vice-president, Chris Legatt treasurer, and an executive composed of Pat Philip, H. Revell, E. Burling, T. Southerne, Art Scott and Max Matthews. The sergeant-at-arms will be M. Downey with W. Daugherty and J. McDonald chosen as auditors. The secretary will be appointed by the executive at a later date. It was the first time in many years that the entire slate was elected by acclamation. Archdeacon Arthur Smith will continue as chaplain.

The report of the treasurer showed that the branch is in a healthy condition with a good surplus in the bank but the membership, although at a high peak, will be bolstered by a membership campaign in the near future. President Leroy Madden, thanked the members of the executive and the membership at large for the co-operation shown him during his term of office. "It has been a wonderful year for me and I will not soon forget the fellowship made that possible. The branch has had a very successful year and this has only been due through the tremendous amount of work that was done by each individual."

Great Progress Made

Mr. Monteith, a member of the executive, and in charge of boys' work, stated that the branch had made great progress this year. "The Boys' Choir had achieved outstanding success at the C.N.E.," he said, "and the branch had sponsored also hockey and baseball teams. We must look after the youth of our city."

The president, through the executive, presented Chris Legatt, treasurer and Gordon Nicholls, secretary, with honorariums for their work during the year. Both expressed their pleasure at the remembrance and promised a concerted effort during the coming year.

It was decided to collect pocket books and novels for the troops overseas and J. Schwager volunteered to package the books at the Legion Hall and have them sent to the proper address. The branch requests that any books will be acceptable but the pocket books are most desired. He members are sure there are many lying about the homes of the city, that would help the soldiers overseas to pass their leisure time. Those having books are asked to get in touch with members of the Legion or take the books to the Hall on Coleman Street.

At the conclusion of the meeting a social hour was spent by the gathering.

Sparks Blamed For Damage To Bakelite Plant

Sparks from welding operations of the day before were blamed for a fire, which early today gutted a small frame building and damaged insulation covering on two large outdoor storage tanks at the Bakelite Company east of the city.

The tanks containing large quantities of highly inflammable phenol and formaldehyde used in plant operations and at one time there were fears of an explosion.

Plant workmen fought the blaze with fire hose until the arrival of firemen from Belleville who extinguished the fire. At the height of the blaze flames were reported to have leaped nearly 50 feet into the air.

It was reported that welding operations had been in progress near the storage tanks yesterday and it is believed bits of hot metal may have dropped against lumber and started the smoulder. The blaze was discovered shortly before seven o'clock today.

New Safety Record Established By Northern Electric

A new safety record has been established by the Northern Electric Company Limited of Belleville, Manager K. B. Booth announced today that employees had completed more than two million man hours without a lost time accident.

This figure is best in Ontario in companies employing more than 250 persons There are 67 firms in this group. Only four companies in the province in any category have bettered the Northern Electric record.

The present injury-less string started on October 18th, 1951. The previous record established by the company was one million man hour days and ended in June of this year.

Mr. Booth today paid credit to employees, supervisors, safety committees and the medical department for their work in contributing to the establishment of the mark. "Already", he said, "employees are aiming at a record of three million hours which could be reached in July, 1953."

Fire Department Stages Banquet For Civic Guests

Last evening Fire Chief Gerald Vance and members of his fire department, staged their annual Christmas banquet for members of the fire committee of city council, His Worship the Mayor, newly-elected aldermen and several invited guests, which included members of fire departments throughout the district also Chief Probert and Inspector McDougall. It was a most informal affair, there were only a few speeches and these were kept to a minimum.

As usual the boys of the department cooked, prepared and served the delightful chicken dinner with all the trimmings and were complimented on their endeavors by the mayor and the chairman of the fire committee, Angus B. Duffy. Each told of the fine co-operation that existed between the city council and the fire department. "Bud" Whitley, newly-elected mayor of Trenton, was on hand. Mr. Whitley expressed the wish that similar function could be instituted in his home town so that residents of the both places could get together to talk over civic and other questions.

Warden Welcomed

Warden Lee Grills thanked the department for the invitation and was glad to see the fine co-operation between the county and city "I trust we both have our problems, but with a little give and take all questions can be amicably settled and no bad friends made."

Chief Vance, acting as chairman of the evening, explained the evening was purely a social one and that he would only ask the guests to stand and be introduced.

Before the banquet was concluded, members of the Firefighting Association presented Alonzo Wilson, who is retiring at the end of the year after 25 years of service with the department, with a wallet and money, in the hope that he will enjoy his years of retirement. In order that he would not lose contact with the department an honorary membership in the association was presented.

Following the banquet, Harry Gourley presided at the piano and the boys enjoyed a sing-song, while in other places in the hall, little groups gathered to talk over old times or watch the TV programs in the lounge room. It was a most delightful evening and the fire department received many congratulations on the fine program provided.

IMPRESSIVE ARGUMENT

The smoking Canadian feels that he has a very valid squawk about the price he pays for his cigarets. The truth of the matter is, however, that the man with the real grievance in this matter is the tobacco producer.

The tobacco growers of Ontario have begun to take their case to the public in a series of meetings in the growing areas. It would appear that they have a pretty good case to set out.

The growers of the high retail price of cigarets and the volume of competition which has developed through the illegal sale of smuggled American cigarets the growers have considered the advisability of curtailing next year's crop by one-third. And more recently the situation has been made worse by the legal sale of low-grade American cigarets.

In Alliston the other night 200 growers met to discuss their present plight and promptly decided that in the face of the underlying causes crop curtailment would be uneconomical and unsound. Curiously enough the situation is that the only competitor the growers in Canada have is Finance Minister Abbott.

This was shown beyond any question when the astounding revelation was given that out of a $50,000,000 tobacco crop in Canada, the federal treasury extracted a revenue for itself of about $250,000,000. And there can be little doubt by the consternation and grave concern that taxation on this scale invokes the law of diminishing returns against the growers and the government as well.

The growers contend that a scale of taxation which would provide a figure for the revenue of $200 for 300 cents would result in increased sales to the point where the government would get more revenue, the grower would sell more tobacco, employment in the tobacco industry would be increased.

It all sounds fairly reasonable to us. How much Mr. Abbott will be impressed we would not hazard a guess. Mr. Abbott has been reminded many times of the law of diminishing returns in this same matter over the last few years and has not been impressed, but in 1953 he might be prompted to think that the tobacco returns from the industry could also apply to government majorities—in which case we rather imagine that he might be very much impressed with its significance.

START IS BEING MADE

The announcement by Highways Minister George Dougett that a complete revision of all highway and safety laws is underway, comes at the time when that motorists in this province set a new record for traffic accidents in October.

The fact that press has been giving increasing publicity to the staggering toll of death and injury has probably had much to do also with the Queen's Park decision to take drastic measures. The first step is to make a continuous-wide survey of traffic problems. The next will be to include all the best features of control laws in new legislation for the province.

For all that these realistic moves are to be commended, they are long overdue. For some time now there has been in use in this province a system of traffic accident analysis which shows that for years the most prevalent causes of accidents have been ignored. It is now known that sheer carelessness is far and away the leading cause of street and highway mishaps and that the great majority of them occur when conditions are normal.

The old drunken driver and the speeding drivers are always a menace but the offenders in these two groups are responsible for a small percentage of the traffic toll compared with that which is charged against the unthinking and careless drivers on the highways. The careless driver, giving little heed to the rights of others and to the normal hazards of driving at the best of conditions, has been shown to be the chief culprit.

With this in mind it is felt that there is need for drastic changes in the motoring habits of the people of Ontario. It will be sought in the first instance by changes in regulations which will bring many of the indifferent drivers to book, but it is realized that much more effective enforcement of the regulations must be achieved if our highways are to be made safer.

It is expected at least by traffic highway officers, that the current survey will reveal that the most effective control will be in the strict patrol of the highways by officers given the attention it deserves. Reports already in the hands of highway officials from the O.P.P. give some indication of the failure of authorities to realize the importance of enforcement. Police protection in one detachment of the O.P.P. has been cited as an example. There are seven cars in this district, and of them are on criminal work. There hadn't been a murder in the area for two years. But in the past year five people had been killed on the highways.

In our own Bay of Quinte region a parallel, if not a worse, record for the last two years could be presented. Whatever the changes which may be found desirable in traffic laws, it is now being recognized by authorities that no greater protection can be provided on our highways until enforcement is drastically carried out and offenders penalized in terms that will serve as deterrent to the most careless drivers.

ENJOY YOURSELF

Enjoy yourself! But how do that When you are told: "You're much too fat.
That weight of yours you must reduce.
'Til you can wear your waistcoat loose."

Enjoy yourself! Can that be done
When foods you like you're told to shun
And all temptations to resist,
Obedient to some diet list!

Enjoy yourself! I shake my head.
I could, with butter on my bread.
And happier I'm sure I'd be Allowed some sugar in my tea.

Enjoy yourself! I could if I Could now and then have cake or pie.
But seek enjoyment? It's no use
'Til I can wear my waistcoat
loose.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

EVERY PRESENT FAITH

There is no asset in this world so necessary and powerful as simple faith — faith in oneself, faith in the final triumph of right, and faith in God, whose eye is ever upon each one of us. Without faith we would be beset with fears, anxieties and troubles. Faith is the power that gives an uplift to every one of our activities. It is as essential as the air we breathe or the food we eat, for without it we would be but restless, without hope or life.

At the inception of each new day it is our faith that gives us hope and assurance, and at the close of each day it is faith that leaves closer to our consciousness as we lie down to rest, thankful for every blessing and guidance. Through faith we feel a oneness toward nature and our fellowmen. No one ever accomplished anything worth while without a feeling of faith in accomplishment, triumph or achievement.

Columbus had faith in his ideas and carried them to discovery. It Washington had faith in American independence, as did all the patriots who risked their all for its final fruition. Nothing great has ever been accomplished without individual faith in the enterprise. John Henry Newman wrote his beautiful song: "Lead Kindly Light," at the age of but thirty-two years, when he was under a cloud of trouble and decision." He lived to be nearly ninety.

The world today would never be the one of light that it is had not Thomas Edison been a man of great faith. Hundreds of experiments were necessary before he finally triumphed with his idea, and now the entire world owes to him its endless gratitude. Serenity of mind the heart is a result of inward faith.

Every time the filler of the soil has a seed that soil is fortified by his faith that it will result in a harvest. Sow can anyone refuse to believe in a Supreme Mind ever all when he looks into the star-studded heavens, or notes the endless examples of miracles evidenced all about him? Surrender of destinies nill'bf faith has ever been so beautifully expressed as in David's Twenty-Third Psalm.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOING UP!

In a department store there is a sign over an elevator which reads: For co-workers only." It means that only those who have business with the offices on the top floor, where administrative duties are originated, and are administered, are supposed to use that elevator.

This little sign points up the fact that the decisions involving the management of big business are not left in the hands of the business of a department store or the bigger business of individuals. They are made on the top floor and come down by definitely appointed channels. To listen to these sermons, one would get the idea that man is thoroughly adequate to handle his own affairs and that in a modern scientific age we are in the position to tell God what to do rather than the other way about.

There is a story in Genesis about those who built a tower which reached into the sky, and God came down and confused their tongues. It you are in the least doubt as to who is running this universe, get down on the matter of prayer, and do it too late. God is running things just as He has been from them, and not only favorites He has in the world are those who might be called His co-workers.

And remember this: the orders that come down from the top floor are what count in your life and what have counted in the life of the world from the beginning of time.

Form Changes, Not the Spirit

(Ottawa Journal)

Any day now somebody will be thinking a good deal of writing a letter to the newspapers deploring what will be the almost unburied under a landslide of commercialistic exploitation. But we wish we could turn back the page to the simple pious observance of Christmas that we remembers from 1897 or thereabouts.

Let it be known here and now that we do not hold with those who deplore the commercialism of, say for the children, as we are told so persistently by its critics, that we spoil them by making their lives in the same house as an aunt who lives in a flat and has to go to the theory that Christmas has been spoiled.

It is less than a day for the children—it's a grand season building up excitement to the glorious climax. They soon learn the lore of a good old fashioned Santa Claus coming down chimneys with a pack on his back, but they also learn the lesson of painful sense of disillusionment. Then comes the time when imagination carries on. And this grand season works through parades and colored windows to the illustrated trees, through greetings cards and shopping lists and mysterious packages, through fascinating advertising extravaganzas in the newspapers, through the exciting shop windows and the marvellous displays in the stores, to the magnificent climax of Christmas morning, the morning of a day that never seems quite like the other days of the year.

Certainly Christmas has not been spoiled for the children, and we have an idea that most all, the exchange of greetings, the giving and receiving of presents, the thought for others, the feasting that has become a traditional part of the day. Now we believe that with most people the secular celebration has obscured the deep and holy significance of Christmas. It is all there, but it is there in a confused day—only the forms have changed, not the reality.

Bargain in Cider

Twenty-four thousands gallons of cider, a record quantity, were more than £4,000, have been bought for £10 by Mr. W. Symonds, a cider cellar-publican of Stoke Lacy, Herefordshire. He was the only bidder for the cider at a closing-down sale of Messrs Boulstons of Hereford, one of the oldest cider-making firms in the country. He also bought 95 100-gallon casks of cider for £30; the usual price would be £2,000.

INSURANCE ON CATS

(Teresie Star)

The insurance rate on cats should be a very low one. Many die from lives.

But Still Fragrant

(Hamilton Spectator)

Word is received from New York that more than £70,000,000 worth of bootleg perfume will be smuggled into the United States this year. One would imagine that a flood of naughty French fragrance would stimulate romance throughout the land. Unfortunately this is not the case.

The trouble is that French perfume, like French wine, is temperamental and somewhat inconsiderate. It refuses to be hurried or it will raise an awful stink. Legal importers, therefore, go to considerable pains to see that their perfume is shipped at temperatures which will not become unduly and protected from strong light.

The smuggled perfume usually receives no such consideration. Most of it is transported into the United States by ships crews. Though the bottles which contain the perfume may be safe in the excellence of its quality, by the time it has stumbled around in the engine room ships' holds and has been left unprotected on deck it has usually changed color and assumed an air of righteous indignation. The bottles can be the otherwise appreciative countenance of the first young lady who puts it to use.

As a Christmas present, smuggled perfume can be used as an expensive practical joke or as a means of encouraging one's self from a stale romance.

Something In Common

(Windsor Star)

When Mayor Arthur J. Reaume completes his two-year term of office, he will have served Windsor for 14 years in that capacity. He he still is behind Mayor Aaron Rovitch of Cornwall. That Eastern Ontario municipality has presided 14 years, and has been re-elected for two more. Mayor Rovotch's record, however, hasn't been continuous, as he was first elected in 1930. He has had more than one series of years as mayor.

Mayor Reaume is a few and the same year he was elected as mayor of Windsor, Mr. Aaron Dahoy was elected mayor of Windsor. In that year two Ontario communities, which are now in the news, each demonstrated a freedom from antiquity.

Cornwall has something else in common with Windsor. It has a considerable population of French origin. And as Health and Welfare Minister Paul Martin represents part of Windsor and Essex County he is a leader those of French extraction, so Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier represents Stormont County in which Cornwall is situated.

Helicopter Bus Service

(New York Times)

The recent forecast that two decades hence helicopters would be flying more than 4,000,000 passengers annually into and out of the New York metropolitan area may have sounded fantastic to many people. It did. It is largely because the helicopter is still the greatest novelty in the family of manmade birds. People who never lift an eye when a jet plane whistles overhead stop cold to gawk at the ugly duckling of the aeronautical world.

But pioneer helicopter designers and builders who heard the forecast agreed. "It might be on the conservative side in point of time." Their experience and confidence that giant helicopters would one day link New York City to its outlying suburban areas, and to near-by cities and towns with "aerial bus service" as routine as today's surface travel. They agreed, too, that such service would change the pattern of m...r living habits as place of work and place of abode were shoved farther apart in space but pulled closer together in time.

Biggest Pie Old Tradition

(Manchester Guardian)

Coronation year will probably see the revival of many customs and traditions in their problem. The village has a tradition of mammoth pie making which goes back at least 164 years. During that time it is known that at least seven pies worthy of the name of mammoth pie have been baked. On the last occasion, in 1838, four oxen were baked in a pie which weighed five tons. The villagers have decided that for next year's coronation a pie must be baked which will not only be the largest Empire Day cake seen but the largest pie in the world.

Someone at the meeting which made this decision suggested that the pie should be large enough to feed 2,000 people. There is however, a difficulty not encountered by former mammoth pie-makers. It is the item mentioned by a committee of six, including two councillors, has to approach the ministry for the allocation of meat and fat. The village's large hoe he will have due regard for their tradition and honor.

WILL YOUR BABY HAVE EDUCATED PARENTS?

You and your wife have arranged for the pediatrician, you have read "Childbirth Without Fear" you have purchased infant clothing, but what do you know about being a parent? Whether you think so now, or not, you are in desperate need of training and education for the sacred task ahead.

But where can you go to get such training?

I suggest you approach the chairman of your local Adult Education (High-School or University Extension) School and politely demand that such a course be initiated in its program.

Graduate schools and Universities, Research foundations and institutes all over the country have for years been studying what it takes to make a good parent, what it takes to make a good home, how children should grow. But little effort is being made to give this knowledge to the prospective parents who need it most.

Parenthood is a profession, a skill, and an art. It is the most demanding of all the jobs one could undertake. Like all skills it is teacher, probably the most effective one, is that of the example.

How is it we feel qualified to face such a tremendous task with no preparation or training whatever? What ails us, that we leave the unqualified the most delicate of businesses?

A parent is a physician, a nurse, a religious adviser, a moral counselor, a judge, an expert in nutrition, a model for the virtues of good-sportsmanship, the home in which he lives the model of sanitation, and a friend.

A trained parent does not have to ask his doctor or his friends when to feed the baby, how long to leave it in the sun, how to bathe it, whether to play with it, what to give it to eat and drink, how long it should sleep.

A qualified parent will not use "spanking" as his "common sense" (what two persons will agree as to what is common sense!) regarding discipline. He will use his knowledge and his love, plus the methods and technique he has selected as useful from those he learned while he was in training.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Wielders of the Toothbrush

Teacher interviewed on the eve of her return to Siam from her studies in America said: "How any one with teeth can eat anything, I do not see." I thought at once of your enthusiasm for modern cooking (Mrs. H. R.)

Answer—Some one should tell the Siamese teacher that mashed potato is especially adapted for American use, as we have lost their teeth so thoroughly that we have to gum their food, or inhale it.

Anesthetic

Which is more commonly used for tooth extraction, laughing gas or cocaine? Which has the least after-effect? (Mrs. B. R.)

Answer—I'd prefer neither to either, if my dentist had the skill to use it.

Yes Take the Two Kegs

I can climb just as high and then I get a peculiar fright. I wonder what causes it when driving my car across a high bridge... (I. G. W.)

Answer—The chairman who conducts this column likewise. Please tell me know if you find a cure for it. All I know is that I like to stay on the ground.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Elderly men should not serve on traffic boards, town-planning organizations or other bodies designed to deal with the problems of modern cities. They are prejudiced.

They can remember the good old days when there were fields where now are the main streets, and every church had a dominion about it where now it is. They can recollect the time when motor cars were objects of public interest, and a city fell proud to have its streets lined with these newfangled things on show.

Each every darn one of them gets into a temper whenever he has to come down town in his car. Finding a place to park puts him into a sweat. It enrages him to have to drive round and round the block, finding not only no space along the curbs, but all the parking lots full up. Then when an elderly man gets to the meeting of the traffic board or the town planning commission, a few minutes late, he is in no condition to deal calmly with the problems of the new era.

Old men, and generally, and you might say everybody under thirty, has experienced no other solution than the one we have now, in all our larger towns and cities. It seems perfectly natural at to him or her that it should take a little while to find a place to park. The world, for as long as they known it, has always had too many motor cars for its size. Where an elderly man drives in traffic with decision and confidence, those under thirty drive in the worst possible jangles and tangles of traffic with complete unconcern. What appears to be pandemonium to those who stare at driving when they were young is one-eighth the number of motor cars there are today is merely normal to those who have known no other conditions.

Modern traffic is a situation that might best be left to the young to deal with, free of the recollections to prejudice them.

New Grace Is Offered

(Vancouver News-Herald)

Dean Cecil Swanson, saying grace at a Canadian Club luncheon, is the other day: It the way: "For what we are about to receive, Good God, and the boys in Korea, Amen."

A visitor from Toronto said it was the first time he'd heard it, and should be said three times a day in time to come in Canada.

Too often we forget there are Canadian sailors, soldiers and airmen taking part in fierce battles. They're engaged in unpleasant duties far from home, frequently cutting off from home, being wounded, sometimes dying. That's the case, as Dean Swanson says, so that we at home, and God's help, may realize, those under thirty drive in the worst possible jangles and

WEDDINGS

VANDERWATER-WACHHAUS

A lovely, candlelight wedding of wide interest was solemnized on Saturday, November 29, at 8:30 p.m., in the First Lutheran Church at Toronto, Ontario, when Lucia Grazina Johanna Wachhaus, of Kingsville, R.R. 1, Ontario, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Valdemar C. Wachhaus, became the bride of Douglas Kendal Vanderwater, of Toronto and Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Vanderwater, of Belleville. The Reverend W. D. Wenzel, pastor of the church, officiated at the double ring ceremony before a background of pastel tinted carnations, white chrysanthemums, and pink cyclamen, interspersed with candelabra with tall white candles.

Mrs. W. Hertzlaff rendered the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Elliot Stehli, of Windsor, who sang "Because" "The Lord's Prayer", and "I'll Walk Beside You".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her Victorian style bridal gown of white slipper satin, featuring a molded bodice having a square neckline outlined with French lace extending over the shoulders. The long sheath-like sleeves ended in lily-points over the wrists, while the full skirt fell in graceful folds. The double, fingertip veil of nylon illusion was held in place by a latticed coronet encrusted with seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses. A 100-year-old gold bracelet, worn by the bride's grandmother, completed her ensemble.

Miss Freda Rietsk, of Kingsville, Ontario, was maid of honor attired in a gown of pink marguisette and lace over taffeta, fashioned with strapless, fitted bodice, matching cape with Peter Pan collar, and full skirt accented by a narrow black velvet sash marking the waistline. She wore a half-hat of white petals and veiling, and carried a nosegay of yellow carnations.

Miss Virginia Zoonk, also of Kingsville, was bridesmaid, gowned in green net over taffeta with molded bodice having wide net straps extending into cape sleeves and skirt of double net over taffeta. She wore an accordion-pleated halo, studded with rhinestones and carried a nosegay of yellow carnations.

Mr. Ross Howat, of Toronto, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. John Moser, of Kingsville, and Mr. Walter Brockman, both of Toronto, Ontario, acted as ushers.

The bride's mother held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received, wearing navy crepe with matching accessories and corsage of carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was attired in black crepe with pink hat and gloves, and wearing a corsage of pink carnations.

During the reception a radiogram was received from the bridegroom's former employer and staff comrades of the Hitchon Studio Store, in Belleville, bearing the names, E. Hitchon, Harry Hitchon, William Connor, Rose Dryden and Harold Enright. Also a telegram from the Reverend Ernest Bailey, the bride's superintendent of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Sunday School, and pastor of the bridegroom's church. The alliance church choir, both of which conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. Vanderwater their congratulations and best wishes.

Following the reception, the young couple left for St. Thomas and London, the bride wearing a navy tailored suit with black accessories and corsage of red roses. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderwater will reside in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Belleville, Toronto, Windsor, and Foxboro.

ROGERS—McKENNA

St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, was the setting at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, November 29th, at 2:30 p.m., for the marriage of Nellie Jean McKenna, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McKenna, to Douglas Clayton Rogers, son of Mr and Mrs. Arthur Rogers, also of Belleville. Archdeacon Arthur Smith, rector of the church, officiated before a background of pastel carnations, chrysanthemums, and ferns.

The wedding music included "The Lord's Prayer," and "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in her broadtail bridal gown of white satin, fashioned in long torso style, having a ballet-length skirt of satin and net. She wore a white hat with small white veil dotted with rhinestones, and carried a shower bouquet of red roses.

She was attended by Miss Rita Butler, and Miss Ruby Soderberg, as bridesmaids. Both wore gowns of similar style, fashioned with fitted bodices and full skirts in ballerina length. The former in yellow taffeta and lace, with floral headdress in orchid, and carrying a shower bouquet of orchid 'mums, and the latter in pink taffeta and lace with bronze and yellow floral headdress and carrying a shower bouquet of bronze and yellow 'mums.

Mr. Graydon Rogers, of Belleville, was groomsman; Mr. Vern DesCote, and Mr Garfield Little, both of Belleville, and Mr. William Bland of St. Catharines, were ushers.

At the reception, which was held in St. Thomas' Church parish house, the bride's mother, received, wearing black crepe and lace with white accessories and corsage of pink roses, assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in black with matching accessories, with silver fox furs, and corsage of pink roses.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers left for a wedding trip to Toronto, and points west, the bride travelling in a navy blue knitted suit with red accessories, and wearing a chinstone necklace and earrings, the gift of the bridegroom. Upon their return, they will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from St. Catharines, Picton, Napanee and Brighton.

SHAW—ANTROBUS

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, December 6, at the bride's home in Maple, Ontario, when Rev. W. Lambert united in marriage Anna Antrobus, of Maple, and Nelson Shaw of Belleville.

The bride was attended by Miss Thelma Shaw, of Belleville, and the bridegroom by Mr. Bill Antrobus, of Toronto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Shannonville, Belleville, Picketing and Toronto.

The happy couple will reside at the bridegroom's home in Belleville.

CROSS—HILLS

A pretty November wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, 26th, at 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Hills, Halloway, Ontario, when their daughter Beth Doris Hills, became the bride of Donald Elmer Cross, of Roslin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross. The Rev. Ezward J. Kersey, of Plainfield, officiated beneath an arch of evergreens centred by a white wedding bell, white chrysanthemums and ferns, and potted cyclamens adorned the home for the occasion.

Miss Dorothy Sills, of Toronto, sister of the bride, provided the wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Jack Clarke, of Corbyville, who sang "I'll Walk Beside You", during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a charming street-length dress in cocoa brown trimmed with dark brown satin, having three-quarter length sleeves ending in points, and Queen Anne collar. She wore a corsage of yellow roses with matching headdress.

Miss Helena Cross, of Roslin, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid, gowned in a street-length dress of powder blue wool. She wore a corsage of pink roses with matching headband.

Mr. Douglas Sills of Gravenhurst, Ontario, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

The reception was held at the bride's home, where her mother received in a street-length dress of crepe in light brown with pink carnation corsage. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was attired in a street-length dress of rosewood taffeta with pink carnation corsage.

The bride's table was attractively appointed with white damask, and centred by a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom, and flanked by tall, white candles. Those who served at the buffet luncheon included the Misses Betty Cross, Connie Sills and Dorothy Sills.

For the wedding trip to Detroit and other western points, the bride chose her bridal dress, brown coat, with dark brown velvet accessories and corsage of yellow roses. They will residein Ottawa.

Guests were present from Toronto, Niagara Falls, Gravenhurst, Melrose, Corbyville, Thornsburg, Bellerville and Plainfield.

BURKE—BROWN

Before a background of lovely white chrysanthemums and ferns, a wedding was recently solemnized at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville, when Honor Florence Marie Brown, Belleville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown, became the bride of Michael John Lawrence Burke, also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Burke. The Rev. J. J. Buckley officiated.

The wedding music was rendered by the Rev. Sister Mary Wilhelmina, who accompanied the soloist, Mr. Robert Burke, brother of the bridegroom, who sang "On This Day, O Beautiful Mother," "To Jesus Heart All Burning" and "O Lord I Am Not Worthy", and "Ave Maria".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of white lace and net over white taffeta in ballerina length, with molded bodice having a sweetheart neckline, and long, sheath-like sleeves ending in lily points over the hands and gracefully full skirt. Her finger-tip veil of embroidered nylon net was held by a matching Juliet cap. She wore white, kid slippers, and carried a white Prayer Book, crested with yellow roses and satin streamers, the gift of her bridegroom.

Miss Jane McAvoy, of Rochester, N.Y., was maid of honor wearing a ballerina gown of gold net over matching taffeta. Her Juliet cap, gloves and slippers were of matching gold color, and she carried dark bronze chrysanthemums.

Miss Eileen McAvoy, of Madoc, and Miss Joan Power, of Read, Ontario, were bridesmaids. Both were gowned alike in dark green net over matching taffeta. They wore matching Juliet caps, and gloves, and carried light bronze chrysanthemums. Silver slippers completed their ensembles.

Mr. Louis Francis Scanlon, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Donald Joseph Brennan, of Read, and Mr. Norbert Donovan, of Belleville, acted as ushers.

The wedding breakfast was held at Lattimer's Town Room for the immediate family at 10:30 a.m., where the Rev. J. J. Buckley, proposed the toast to the bride.

Later, the reception was held at Club Commodore for 150 more friends and relatives where Mr. Louis Scanlon acted as toast master. The bride's mother received, wearing a street-length gown of striped silver grey and black taffeta, with black accessories and corsage of coral rosebuds. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was gowned in a street-length dress of navy sheer with navy accessories and coral rosebud corsage.

For the wedding trip to Toronto and northern points, the bride chose a navy suit with dark accessories, and corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guests were present from : Guelph, Rochester, Campbellford, Port Colborne, Erindale, Brockville, Toronto, Maynooth, Bancroft, and Read.

RARE BIRD

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP)—A "little gull," common in Europe but rare in Canada, was seen here recently. The bird, marked by dark underwings, was in a group of about 3,000 Bonaparte and herring gulls.

Kinettes Hold Annual Christmas Party

The regular meeting of the Kinette Club of Belleville, was held on Monday evening at St. Thomas' parish house, in the form of a Christmas dinner, with 26 per cent of the members in attendance and five guests.

President Ruth Follwell occupied the chair, and announced Marion Harden as first-at-Arms with Gertruda Gourley as song leader.

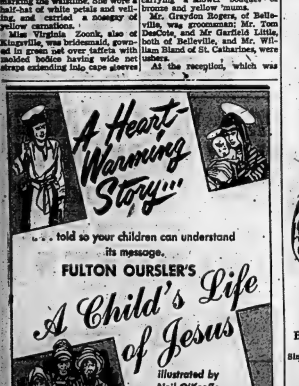
After a delicious turkey dinner, and lively trimmings, served by the ladies of the Parish Guild, Maude Rollins welcomed two members of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Mr. Timmins, Field Secretary for Belleville and Hastings County, and Mr. A. Sparks, supervisor of Field Service, Ontario Division, C.N.I.B., guest speaker for the evening.

Mr. Sparks, a most dynamic speaker, gave a brief outline of the work being carried on by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Canada, and all over the world. His talk was most heart stirring and brought home forcibly the work and funds that must be kept up in order that this most humanitarian work be carried on, and so that these unfortunate people can be educated and taught to overcome the handicap of their handicap.

Part Carol singing, brought greetings and deep appreciation from Col. Baker and Mr. McGill of the C.N.I.B. to the Kinette Club for being done in Belleville for the blind of this district. He also thanked the Kinette Club for providing refreshments to the White Cane Club at their monthly meetings.

Mr. Sparks announced that land has been purchased in Kingston as a new home for the blind, to serve Belleville and Hastings County, as well as Kingston and outlying areas, where the blind of the district can find a home surrounded by decent environment.

Maude Rollins graciously thanked Messrs. Timmins and Sparks.



A motion was made and unanimously carried that $25 be donated to the Tuberculosis Fund.

In response to an appeal made at the previous monthly Kinette meeting, for food, toys and used clothing, it was most gratifying to note the number of hampers that were filled with goods which will help to make some families a little happier this Christmas.

A sparkling debate took place called "Santa Claus is the Product of a Lively Imagination", which was most humorous and well done by the six Kinettes who participated.

The Kinette choir lustily sang "Here Comes Santa Claus", while Dorothy Cruil, portraying the jolly old gentleman, steamed in from the North Pole and distributed gifts from the Christmas tree to all Kinettes present. Gifts were also given to each of the ladies of the Parish House Guild, in appreciation for the delicious dinners served throughout the year.

Special-Purpose Menu

By Mary Moore

Want to save some money while you entertain?

Take your nerve in your hands and run your cooking bill to cheese your guests instead of ruining your budget.

For entertain you must and will this month for it is the month of celebration and rejoicing for a very important event—occurred that changed the course of history and made a better world for you and I to live in.

This meal has flavor plus, but you should heed each step carefully for there is a good epicurean zeath for each one.

There is a restaurant in The States where their Stuffed Cabbage Rolls are ordered oftener than any other single item on their menu—including Chicken Maryland.

GUEST MEAL ON A SHOESTRING

Stuffed Cabbage Rolls
Cheese Fan Tans
Fruit Cup of Chilled Pealed Pepper Cup of Grapefruit (see notes)
Crackers Cheese
Coffee

DIRECTIONS

STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

To serve six buy a medium-sized loose head of cabbage Cut it in halves and drop into kettle of boiling water, but do not cook. Let it stand until leaves are soft and can be gently separated from stalk—about 10 minutes. Be careful not to break leaves. While the cabbage is softening saute in 2 tablespoons olive oil or butter, 1-2 cup brown rice (you can use white rice but you know what a stickler I am for flever and health). When the rice has absorbed the fat add 1 small grated onion and cook gently for two minutes. Remove from heat and add 1 pound ground beef or hamburg which contains some fat, 1-2 teaspoon pepper (or less if you think this is too much for your taste), 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon fresh chopped parsley and if you can purchase it a pinch of oregano. Spread each cabbage leaf out and at stem end place a heaping dessertspoon of the meat mix. Fold left side of leaf over meat and roll them up tacking each leaf closed with a whole clove. Slice a large onion in bottom of heavy pot and place cabbage rolls over it, open side down. Pour over 1 or 1 1-2 cups tomato and another small onion sliced. Cover tightly and simmer over very low heat for 1 1-2 hours. Half-hour before time is up mix this sauce: Mix together 1 tablespoon each honey and flour, 1-2 cup lemon juice, 2 tablespoons sour cream, 1 cup water. Pour over cabbage rolls and cook slowly 1-2 hour longer This dish improves with standing, so when it is done if you want to keep it hot in warming oven or very low oven it will be better. Serve two rolls of cabbage to each plate.

CHEESE FAN TANS

(A cheese flavored hot roll)

Make Refrigerator Rolls—(fit before measuring 3 1-2 cups bread flour. Scald 1 cup milk. Stir into it until dissolved 4 tablespoons shortening and 2 tablespoons sugar and 1 1-2 teaspoons salt. Cool to lukewarm. Dissolve 1 package granular yeast in 1-2 cup lukewarm water with 1 teaspoon sugar, and let stand 10 minutes, stirring once. Beat 1 egg into it. Add the yeast and egg to the cooled milk mixture, then beat 1-2 of the flour into it, beating for 2 minutes. Add remaining flour and beat the dough until it bubbles and squeaks. Place in greased bowl, spread top lightly with butter or lard, cover and store in refrigerator for 24 hours. Cut down to make 3 ready for "Fan Tan" step. (Sounds as we're fancying!)

Cheese Spread—Combine, stir and heat in double boiler until cheese is melted 1 cup grated cheese, 3 tablespoons each butter and milk, 1-4 teaspoon paprika, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Roll 24-hour old refrigerator dough out into a thin sheet 1-4-inch thick. Spread half of it with the cheese mixture. Fold over the other half. Fold it over once more. You now have four thin layers of dough. Cut it into 1 1-2-inch strips, then cut the strips into squares—each 1-3 by 1-3 inches. Place the squares cut side up in greased muffin tins. Let rise in warm place until they have double in bulk. Bake these in hot oven of 400 deg F. for 20 to 25 minutes. These flaky morsels melt in your mouth.

Pealed and seeded grapes take patience to prepare but are worth the work for they are delicious with skinned grapefruit sections sweetened with honey.

Bethel-Zion Girls' Club Learn Making Of Various Seams

On the evening of November 22, and December 6, respectively, the P.J. Pals met in the Maple Leaf School and in the home of Mrs. Percy Ray for their second and third meetings, "Sleeping Garments" was the project at hand.

At the second meeting the girls placed their patterns and a few cut out their pyjamas.

Miss Ness was present at the third meeting, which opened when Eileen Ray welcomed her as the club's guest. Each member reported the progress on her project. It was decided to hold the fourth meeting at Mrs. Clifford Ray's.

Miss Ness demonstrated the proper way to make French seams, flat-felled seams and stay lining. French seams are used on fine garments, sewing along the seam on right side, trimming off to about one-eighth of an inch, turning to wrong side and enclosing raw edges in another seam.

Flat-felled seams are used for tailored garments, pyjamas, and sport clothes. These are begun on the right side so that two lines of stitching will be on the right side.

Stay lining is used to prevent material from pulling on machine if you do not baste. Stay lining is a line of stitching, going with grain of material, one-inch outside seam allowance.

The girls spent the rest of the evening practising these seams and working on their pyjamas.

The girls enjoyed television while refreshments were being served.

Successful Dance Held Club Commodore

A most successful dance was given by the Pioneers of the Bell Telephone and the Northern Electric Companies at the Club Commodore last Friday evening. The Commodore orchestra was in attendance and a number of spot dances added to the gaiety of the social evening. A varied program was given by the Quintones, who sang four numbers, while Ronnie Lessard of Tweed, entertained with two tap dancing numbers. Miss Sylvia Motley and Art Joby were heard in several arrangements by the orchestra.

A buffet lunch was served by Golden Arm Inn. The Master of Ceremonies for the evening was Norman Conniff while the committee in charge of the arrangements were Charles Coleman, chairman, Mrs. Ray Stortis, Charles Marriot, J. W. Bell, Robert Haverstock, Frank Grandame, Harold Fraser, Ab Atchison and J. Ritchie.

Menahem Pressler, Pianist Gives Splendid Concert at BCI Before Season's Largest Crowd

By EUGENE LANG

A new name in the pianistic world was introduced to the first time to lovers of keyboard music in Belleville and district in the person of Menahem Pressler, brilliant young Israeli pianist, who made his debut here last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium as the featured artist of the second concert of the 1952-53 series of the Belleville Community Concert Association.

Menahem and his family left there in 1938, when he was ten, and settled in Palestine. In this new adopted land he studied withtwo notable Israeli teachers and appeared in solo concerts and on the air. His big break came in 1946 when he flew all the way to San Francisco to compete against 65 other contestants in the Debussy Prize. After winning this coveted award he has appeared throughout the U.S.A. with leading symphony orchestras in schools, broadcasts and from coast to coast in recital engagements. In 1950-51 he began a European tour by playing three concertos in Brussels, following this up with appearances with the London Philharmonic and the Colonne Orchestra of Paris. In the field of recordings he has just recently made an album of Debussy works for M.G.M. Records.

Well-Known Compositions

The entire program chosen by Mr. Pressler for his initial engagement here last evening consisted of compositions, mostly well known and familiar to the audience, representing great German, French and Russian composers of the Nineteenth Century. His opening number was the beloved "Moonlight" Sonata of Beethoven, more correctly called the Sonata Quasi una Fantasia in C Sharp Minor, Op. 27, No. 2. Forgetting the silly and fanciful title that has been appended to it "Moonlight") incidentally, not by Beethoven, because had he known, he would have likely raged over this nonsensical appellation and speaking strictly of the music itself, Mr. Pressler caressed the opening Adagio with loving care in a pianissimo touch throughout. The second movement was subjected to more tempo rubato than is customary with Beethoven's three-part movements. The final Presto Agitato was given a very dashing and spontaneous rendition of power and animosity.

Two delightful little "Songs Without Words" ("Spring Song" and "Spinning Song") of Mendelssohn were played with lyrical tone and deftly agile fingers throughout.

For his Chopin, Mr. Pressler performed the four Impromptus and the scherzo in B flat minor. It was a decided treat to hear the 4 of these Impromptus played on one program, as they are not too often heard all at once, and do represent, perhaps in his more imaginative and wandering moods, tinged with that vagrant and restless composition of his fancy.

Mr. Pressler gave a polished and emotionalized interpretation of these varied and unrestrained works of the sensitive Polish by birth, French by sentiment, Poet of the Piano. The final Impromptu, with its middle section that "I'm Pan Alley tune a-speding from "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows" was perhaps the best known to the audience, but it fared equally well with its brother compositions in warmth and refinement under the lovely musings cast upon the keyboard by Mr. Pressler. The powerful and morbidly energetic scherzo in B flat minor gave Mr. Pressler a chance to let loose with his technical accomplishments, which, to say the least, are exceptional. Strength and rendition of tone numbers by Debussy that were chosen turned out to be the delight of the entire evening. Suffice it to say, Mr. Pressler gave sterling interpretations of all three numbers regardless of what their mood, be it the enchanting tenderness of "Reverie," the lilting motivations of the "First Arabesque" or the keyboard pellings of the technically different "Cardens in the Rain." One could tell when listening to Mr. Pressler's performances of Debussy, here was his favorite of all composers, as his thoughts translated through his fingers exemplified.

Rachmaninoff's well - known "Prelude in G Minor" Op. 23 was given a grotesquely macabre reading that perfectly fitted the music, it making a splendid contrast to Liadoff's tinkling mechanical "Music Box," always a favorite and performed with a deftly delicate plasticino befitting the 18th century invention that it extolled. Franz Liszt's "Rakoczy March" (Hungarian Rhapsody No. 15) concluded the scheduled program in a blaze of pyrotechnical display and dexterous agility on the part of Mr. Pressler. Pedal sustainings of lengthy durations during octave runs robbed this bombastic warhorse of some of its crystalline clarity usually associated with Liszt.

Three encores were given to the tumultuous applause of the delighted audience, Debussy's pensive "Clair de Lune," Tosti's dazzling "The Juggler" and Brahm's touching and idyllic "Weigenlied."

Following the concert a reception was held at the home of Miss Leona Riggs.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT

TORONTO (CP)—Two men were arrested Tuesday on charges of stealing a $5,000 truckload of rugs and other goods from the Canadian National Railways bonding house in downtown Toronto. Police said the men were arrested after a CNR investigator reported to them the licence number of a speeding truck. Charged with the theft were Albert Chodos, 30, and Norman Woodstock, 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cretney Will Be Guests of Honor at Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James Cretney, of Mountain View, who are celebrating Golden Anniversary today.

Residents of Prince Edward county for over 50 years, Mr. and Mrs. James Cretney, Mountain View are today celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. Tonight they will be guests of honor at a gathering being held for them by neighbors and the Mountain View Women's Institute.

Natives of England, Mr. and Mrs. Cretney have spent most of their married life in Canada where they have lived, worked and raised a family of five children. Next week in honor of the anniversary they are going on a vacation—the first in many years—and will spend the winter in Vancouver.

A blacksmith all his life, Mr. Cretney still earns his livelihood over the forge and anvil and every day sees him in his shop along the Belleville-Picton highway. He has operated the same shop for 31 years. In fact Mr. Cretney is widely known in Canada for his skill in the shod several King's Plate winners.

On December 10 back in 1902 the then young couple were married at Chesher Parish Church at Copphehill-Crewe in England. They continued to live in England until 1907 when they came to Canada and to Belleville where Mr. Cretney set up a blacksmith shop. He operated the shop on Coleman Street until the World War I when he enlisted with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles with which unit he served overseas until the end of the war. Following his return to Canada he moved his family to Prince Edward county where he set up the blacksmith shop he still operates.

They are members of Christ Church, Belleville, while Mrs. Cretney is a life member of the Women's Institute. Mr. Cretney is a member of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, and is a member of Lake Lodge, Amelianburg, No. F. and A. M.

They have five children, Mrs. P. (Phyllis) Garland, Bloomfield; Mrs. J. (Margaret) Vreeland, Belleville; George of Brockport, N. Y., and Dick and Syd, both of Vancouver. There are nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

This writer is energetic, imaginative and enthusiastic. These traits, combined with his keen intelligence, will make him quick-thinking and vital.

The writing seems to dart across the page in an effort to keep up with the mind, showing that he will be impatient to carry out his ideas. Despite his haste, all the "t's" are dotted and "i's" crossed, and there is clear spacing between the words and lines of writing, reflecting the writer's clarity of thought and accurate judgment.

The long dashes to the "t's" show his ardor and enterprise. He has a great deal of wit and humor, but it will be salted with irony.

COLONIAL COACH LINES

JAMES STEWART, PRESIDENT, addressing the Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce in Toronto, said in part:

THIS YEAR may well be marked by the widespread and favourable attention from many sources that has been directed to our industrial and commercial progress. Evidence of interest in our economic development by people outside the country is welcome not only for the relative strength of our currency but also in the increasing volume of foreign capital that is being invested in Canadian enterprise. Domestic confidence continues to be shown, for example, in the volume of investment in industry, in resource development and in research activities.

In the aggregate, the general business position continues to be satisfactory, yet the buoyancy that we have been experiencing is not uniformly reflected in all forms of industry and commerce or in all the economic regions that make up this country. For exporters, the rise in exchange rates has made selling overseas more difficult and credit is due them for their efforts in maintaining the high levels of export activity. The rise in exchange rates also has increased competition for the domestic markets.

In noting some of the vulnerable points in currently prosperous conditions, I wish to place due emphasis on the view that we are entering a period of instability in our business. Nevertheless there is no need for pessimism provided the utmost efficiency is exercised in the conduct of our affairs in this fast changing business world.

External Trade

The high level of Canadian incomes and our rapid rate of investment and development, accompanied by limited overseas markets for our products, have resulted since the war in an expansion of markets in the United States. The similarity of the two economics, however, limits the expansion of that market for many of our products; consequently, while we may in future find a ready demand for our natural resources, it could be that the marketability of the greater product of our industry will not expand at the rate established in recent years. Our attention, therefore, must be directed towards the widening and the diversification of our markets, perhaps initially at some cost to ourselves, for longer run advantages are of course obvious.

The balance of payments problems have been the most chronic and aggravating of our time. What seems essential is a strong and widely acceptable sterling currency. What seems equally necessary is that Britain should clarify the sterling position, for it is from that source that trade revival can most effectively spring. On our part, we need diverse markets. Hegce it is in our interest that the British position be clarified as quickly as possible.

Capital Investment

One of the chief ingredients of the continued high level of economic activity has been the relatively heavy volume of capital investment. We have had a longer period of sustained activity in this field than during any other period in our history.

Capital outlays have a tendency to generate a chain of expenditures and this makes investment an attractive factor both in the achievement and in the maintenance of high employment. In the long run, continued expansion of national production is essential and a steady flow of capital is a prerequisite. Steadiness of investment, rather than intensity, might well govern our future views.

Income cannot be redistributed for consumption and at the same time invested to expand productivity without some serious strains developing. If domestic capital investment is to form a considerable part of total capital formation in Canada, determent to such investment must be examined and, where consistent with domestic policies, be removed.

Fiscal Policy

Since the war years we have been giving increasing attention to social security and welfare measures. Much of this activity, while perhaps justified in its social and economic effects, has been based upon or has been aided by means of redistribution of incomes through the taxing power. There are, of course, obvious limits to this procedure. Onerous taxes can dampen incentive, can deter production, and can restrict consumption. To those who envisage a further widening of welfare services it cannot be too often emphasized that the possibilities of increasing welfare by the expansion of output far exceed the possibilities of increasing it by redistribution.

The Outlook

It is probable that the increased tempo of resource development will be maintained. The present high level of purchasing power is also likely to be maintained for the months ahead and on the basis of past performance we may anticipate a buoyant consumer market. The ability of overseas markets to maintain, let alone expand, their purchases continues to present difficulties and the vital interest we have in foreign trade prompts us to follow closely the results of conferences now taking place.

The aim of every responsible Western nation must be the securing of a sound basis as a preliminary to the maintenance of stable economies. Through our membership in international organizations, we have endeavoured to give our part towards this achievement. Our decision to support jointly-sponsored policies may require the postponement in Canada of some of the measures for which we otherwise might press.

We are in a period of increasing complexity both at home and abroad. We can no longer rely on the continuation of previously established economic patterns to support decisions for future business. Yet in spite of this condition of affairs, I hold the view that the essential soundness of our growth up to the present time, if reinforced by prudent management, both by government and business, can lead to further and favourable expansion.

NEIL J. McKINNON, GENERAL MANAGER, after reviewing the balance sheet, highlights of which are given below, said in part:

A YEAR AGO you were informed that for the previous nine months the banking system had been co-operating with the Government in a programme of credit restriction designed to counteract inflationary forces then prevailing. The programme as a whole exercised a moderating effect, but the influence on some areas was quite pronounced; consumer credit restraints, for example, contributed noticeably to a decline in sales of consumer durable goods. Beginning in the latter part of 1951 price levels and the cost-of-living index showed a decided decline and in May of this year the credit restrictions were withdrawn.

While it was natural to expect an upward surge in consumer credit because of a hungry market created by the period of restraint, the volume in the short period of time since elapsed has increased rapidly indeed and this has had quite a stimulating effect on retail sales. It has, of course, long been recognized that this form of credit is an integral part of a mass production economy. Experience in the past, however, has indicated that under less buoyant conditions of employment or confidence the servicing of consumer credit becomes more burdensome and business not only loses the stimulus of a rising credit volume but also, during the period during which people are preoccupied with reducing debts, may well suffer a temporary lessening in current business. It is perhaps appropriate at the present juncture to draw attention to this necessary although somewhat mercurial element in the credit structure.

Staff

While one may comment objectively on the balance sheet, the relationship between the management and staff is so personal that I cannot speak with detachment in paying tribute to members of the staff. I can say from first-hand knowledge that the Bank is represented through the branches and departments by a splendid body of men and women who work loyally and efficiently and with a fine spirit of co-operation in the interests of the institution. The enhancement in size and strength of the Bank during the past year could not have been achieved without the concerted efforts of our staff who, to customers and the public at large, are, in fact, the Bank. The shareholders would I am sure wish to join with me when I express to the members of the staff sincere appreciation and thanks for a job well done.

The minister said he is prepared to recommend to the city that the starting pay for guards be raised from $2,360 to the $2,360 plus cost of living bonus that is the standard in Ontario institutions run by the department.

Mayor Allan Lamport of Toronto said the report did not answer the important question of how the Boyd gang escaped.

TORONTO (CP) — Replacement of Thomas W. Brand as governor of Toronto's Don jail is suggested in a royal commission report on conditions at the jail.

The report, made public today by Attorney - General Porter, blamed Mr. Brand for circumstances which led to the escape of the Boyd gang last Sept. 2. It said neglect to keep the gang under constant supervision led to the escape.

Mr. Brand and several guards were suspended after the break.

The jail needs a governor of "sufficient executive ability, with full responsibility to clear up the present situation," the report said. The governor's salary, now $4,000 plus a house and utilities, "should be adequate to attract someone with the necessary qualifications."

Other Recommendations

Other recommendations: an increase in the number of guards, pay raises for the jail staff, construction of a new security wing for desperate prisoners, an administrative change to relieve the sheriff of all responsibilities connected with the jail, improvements in security measures, and a change in prison clothing from the present blue denims to a more distinctive garb.

Judge J. A. Macdonell appointed as the one-man commission to investigate conditions at the jail, said in a 2,000-word report that although Governor T. W. Brand tried to do the best he could "under trying conditions" he failed to keep the four prisoners under constant supervision "must rest on his shoulders."

The report said Mr. Brand "did not have the executive ability nor experience to cope with the difficult situation with which he was faced, and which to a considerable extent still exists." The report added that "one must have sympathy" for Mr. Brand for if he had been provided with an adequate staff the escape might not have occurred.

Judge Macdonell said the testimony of Governor Brand which placed the blame for the escape on Deputy Governor Alexander Noble and the conversations "in this to some extent" by Col. Hedley Basher, deputy minister of reforms and institutions, was not justified.

Instructions Ignored

The report said oral instructions issued by Col. Basher after three of the gang first escaped Nov. 4, 1951 had been disregarded, including an order to keep the prisoners under constant supervision.

Judge Macdonell, who heard evidence that totalled more than 3,350 pages in a 30-day hearing in October and November, said the reforms institution department decided the safest place in the jail for the gang was the No. 9 hospital wing. It contained four cells and had two doors which could be opened and locked.

The report said that if the door had been left open with a guard outside so the men could be under constant supervision, as Col. Basher had ordered, the escape would not have been possible.

"I cannot find that steps were taken by Mr. Brand to ensure this was done," said Judge Macdonell.

Judge Macdonell urged appointment of a governor with sufficient executive ability and with full responsibility to clear up the present situation and that the salary be adequate to attract the man with the necessary qualifications.

Blames Low Wages

He blamed low wages of guards as contributing to their poor morale and recommended an immediate review of salaries to raise them to those comparable with wage rates in the area and with persons doing similar duties and "earnest consideration" on the matter of pensions.

Other recommendations included:

1. Increasing the jail staff to approximately 85 custodial officers with 40 on the day shift, 28 on the afternoon shift, 22 on the night shift and five extra for emergencies. Present male staff totals 84, including 56 guards and four chief guards.

2. Establishing a system of training new guards.

3. Increasing inspection staff of the reforms institutions department to check on security measures.

4. Building without delay of a new security wing capable of accommodating 250 of the more dangerous type of prisoners, and containing safety cell blocks and other modern services. The report said the new wing could be added to from time to time until ultimately the old building is superseded.

5. Construction of a hospital, possibly in the new wing, if arrangements cannot be made to handle mental patients somewhere else.

6. Improvements in security in the present 60-year-old jail building since it cannot efficiently be modernized.

7. Provision of acequate handling facilities to look after the huge turnover of prisoners.

8. Marking of prisoners' clothing to make it easily recognizable in escape cases.

The trials of the four prisoners whose escape led to the investigation were held after their recapture following eight days of freedom. Steve Bochan and Leonard Jackson were sentenced to be hanged for the murder of a Toronto detective. Edwin Boyd and William Jackson were sentenced to long penalties in terms on bank robbery charges.

Judge Macdonell said that if Governor Brand had not been sufficiently guards to carry out the orders to keep the gang under constant supervision he should have informed Col. Basher.

SHOW OF

I decided to chance a question.

"If religion is free in China how do you explain the fact that thousands of missionaries have been thrown in prison and expelled in the most ignominious manner? My sister spent 33 years as a missionary in China and then was expelled in the most shocking manner."

My question was like an atomic bomb. Little Dr. Hou jumped to his feet.

"That's a very complicated question," he said. "It would take hours to make it clear. We will call you all here in a few days to discuss it at greater length."

And the meeting ended in general embarrassment. We were never called back by the ecclesiastical administrator.

Can you say that religion has completely disappeared in Communist China? That question cannot be answered after an 18-day stay. But I should say that on the following two Sundays I went to Mass at a little church not far from the Peace Hotel. This church was watched by a guard who wore a Red Star. I went there one Saturday morning and asked to see the parish priest, a Chinese. As the conversation took place before a third person, I asked only very ordinary questions, such as the hours of the Mass, the number of Catholics in the parish and the like.

I went to Mass there on two Sundays. The guard with the Red Star was at the door and seemed to be keeping a check on the people who went in and out. Each Sunday there were between 150 and 200 persons present. Confessions were held during Mass. And there was a fair number of people who took Communion; not only old people, but young children and adolescents. There seemed to be a very sincere piety among the people present.

There again, it isn't easy to know if this was a Catholic Church which was tolerated or a reformed church. But I must say that by all outward signs, it it seemed to be a Catholic Church, run by a Chinese priest who carried on through good or bad times, and under strict surveillance tried to maintain the Catholic faith.

You don't need the testimony of the hundreds of missionaries who have recently come out of China to realize that the situation of the church is not exactly rosy under Mao-Tse-Tung's regime. When you are there you have no difficulty in sensing it. But you also sense that religious feeling is far from dead.

N. Hastings Mass Chest X-ray Shows Marked Improvement

Bancroft — The worth of the North Hastings Community Mass Chest X-ray Survey held this summer was amply reflected in the figures received this week by E. G. Thomas, chairman of the T.B. Seals Committee.

A total of 1627 X-rays were taken during the survey, divided as follows: Bancroft 596; Maynooh 213, Coe Hill 157, Gilmour 140, Fort Stewart 179 and Whitney 280. These figures show a marked improvement over the last survey which was taken in 1948.

The survey detected four cases of pulmonary tuberculosis and one suspected case. Forty-two cases of other disease and abnormalities were detected. The balance of 1580 plates were negative. Treatment has been commenced in the cases of those affected.

Mr. Thomas and his committee have received congratulations from the Provincial Department of Health for their outstanding efforts.

The annual sale of T.B. Christmas seals, the proceeds of which support this highly valued service, is under way at the present time.

Mrs. Walter Robinson and daughter Shari returned to town recently, after visiting in Ottawa.

Mr. G. E. Towle spent the week-end in Toronto visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mather and family returned to town recently from a motor trip to Finch.

Mr. John Hutchinson was a delegate to the provincial council meeting of the Civil Service Association held in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat LaBarge and Mr. Thos. O'Shaugnessy have returned from a motor trip through Northern Ontario where they visited relatives at Oba.

Mr. Roy Robinson was a business visitor to Toronto on Tuesday.

Mr. George Lloyd visited Toronto on the week-end, where he attended the Grey Cup game.

Friends of Mrs. Elvin Reynolds, were pleased to learn that she successfully underwent major surgery at the Toronto General Hospital and is progressing favorably.

CORONATION SERVICE — Fifteen years ago Queen Elizabeth — then a solemn young princess — watched her father, King George VI, walk down this aisle in crowded Westminster Abbey following his coronation. Next June the young Queen herself will wear the Imperial purple velvet robes, trimmed with ermine, provided by Canada, and on her head she will wear St., Edward's crown, as did her regal predecessors and head of the commonwealth, Defender of the Faith, in an elaborate ceremony last several hours. (CP Photo).

Queen, With the Coronation In the Offing, One of World's Most Publicized Women

Queen Elizabeth II with the Coronation in the offing, is one of the world's most publicized women. What is she really like, this leader of the second Elizabethan era? This story, one of a series, describes her character and personality.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—From the thousands of words written about the character and personality of Queen Elizabeth, there emerges one consistent theme: She is a serious, almost old-fashioned person.

This was not always apparent. She used to be called the "question's darling." She had a happy childhood, and British crowds warmed to her youthful gaiety. They liked the way she waved inscuciantly as she drove about London in an open carriage, in the days before anyone thought she would be Queen.

But as she grew older her basic seriousness became apparent. Like her father, she possessed a strong sense of duty. Marion Crawford, the Scots woman who was her governess for 17 years, says Elizabeth was always more serious minded than her younger sister Margaret.

"Elizabeth," writes Miss Crawford, "seemed to have an inborn desire to do what was expected of her."

At Public Functions

Some who watch the Queen at public functions say they detect a restraint bordering sometimes on uncertainty. Others insist that she carries through her duties in a natural and charming manner, without self-consciousness.

Unquestionably she is more at home in public than her father, George VI, who was brought up in stricter tradition. The King often marvelled at the ease with which Elizabeth performed duties he found extremely difficult.

Whatever Elizabeth now feels, hardened as she is to the thought that thousands may note a crooked stocking seam or shiny nose, she certainly had to learn composure. She prepared for her first public ceremony at 13 by chewing barley sugar to calm her nerves.

Every day has to strike royalty's happy medium between chilly reserve and over-familiarity. In an age of high-pressure publicity, she must strive for a note of humanity while remaining faithful to the dignity demanded of the high office which she calls a "sacred trust."

Sticks To Rules

Although her courtiers stress her little temperamental inclination to spontaneous acts in public. She tends to stick more closely to the rules than Margaret, who once plucked a rose from a bouquet and handed it to the blushing young sailor who gave her the flowers.

On the other hand, few who heard her will forget Elizabeth's first broadcast. In an unrehearsed gesture which brought dozens of fan letters, she ended her address by saying "Come along, Margaret, and say goodnight" to her little sister.

The streak of seriousness was there even as a child. Elizabeth often refused to join Margaret and their young friends in pranks. She tut-tutted her dismay, for instance, on occasions when Margaret went about stuffing acorns in the shoes of court officials.

She is a determined person, with a will of her own. During the war when she succeeded in joining the Auxiliary Territorial Service, despite her father's ruling a year earlier that she should not. As a girl, she was capable of temper but did not nurse a grudge.

Likes The Theatre

She enjoys dancing, riding and the theatre. She is a film fan and had a movie theatre installed at her former home, Clarence House. Gary Cooper and David Niven were once among her favorites. She has recently expressed admiration for tap-dancing Gene Kelly.

She reads widely, has an excellent memory, and often surprises ambassadors with her knowledge of foreign affairs. She has never been good at needlework. She speaks good German and almost perfect French, which she used to polish in conversations with her father.

She uses light make-up. Sometimes she has dieted and—though no measurements are given—it is evident that, perhaps on the Duke of Edinburgh's suggestion, she has become more willowy of figure. At 26 she is poised young woman of considerable beauty, with a radiant smile.

Britons feel young Elizabeth has taken to heart the advice of her grandmother, Queen Mary:

"Remember that life is made up of loyalty—loyalty to your friends, loyalty to things beautiful and which you live; and, above all, for this holds all other loyalties together, loyalty to God."

HEAVY JAIL TERM

BUFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A dope peddler was sentenced Tuesday to serve 14 to 105 years in a state prison. Said County Judge Fallon A. Fisher to Barney Edmunds, 42: "You have been convicted of one of the most despicable crimes we have on the statute books—selling narcotics to young men. I'm going to stop this practice by doing everything I can to punish the guilty ones."

Firemen Rescue Dozen Employees Trapped by Fumes

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Trapped by sulphuric dioxide fumes, a dozen employees of Kelvinator Ltd. hung their heads out of second-floor windows until firemen reached them with gas masks.

Four or five were given oxygen by the fire department, while one man, Edward Walden, was taken to hospital.

The fumes developed Tuesday when a 75-pound tank sprang a leak. The firemen donned masks, then carried additional masks for the trapped men.

Walden was kept in hospital for observation after receiving oxygen.

About 17 persons were on the second floor when the leak occurred. A number got down the stairs without help but the rest were unable to make their way through the fumes.

Holy Name Society Re-elects 1952 Officers

Marmora — The annual meeting of the Holy Name Society was held in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall on Wednesday evening with the retiring president, Charles Lajoie in the chair.

The report of the president showed that the society had had a successful year, both spiritually, and materially.

Officers Re-elected

The election of officers ensued resulting in the entire re-election of the past year's executive as follow: Honorary president, Rev. J. A. O'Neill; president, Charles Lajoie; vice president, Carl Johnston; secretary, Michael Forestell; assistant secretary, Donald Shannon, jr.; treasurer, Morris Lynch; Marshal, H. A. McNally.

The Rev. Fathers O'Neill and Scanlon gave addresses of congratulation to the members. Later the Harmonicats, Marlin Nicholson, Omer Houle and Tommy Byrnes, gave several entertaining numbers after which the meeting adjourned.

Dominion Bank Property Improved

MARMORA—Further improvement is being made to the property of the local branch of the Dominion Bank at the rear of the building. The ground has been levelled and fenced. A wire fence has been placed on the north and east sides of the enclosure and a picket fence does duty on the south side, adjoining the north sidewalk of No. 7 Highway.

Two gates, one large and the other small, admit pedestrians and truckers, respectively, into the lot when required. The lot will be sodded and later shrubs and flowers planted there whereby it will be transformed into a beauty spot and also add to the general appearance of the property.

Court Asked to Declare That Jehovah's Witnesses Form Religious Denomination

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada has been asked to declare that Jehovah's Witnesses form a religious denomination, entitled to the same freedom as other denominations.

The request was made Tuesday by W. Glen How of Toronto, counsel for the Witnesses, while arguing against the validity of a Quebec City by-law under which members of the Witnesses have been prosecuted for distributing tracts.

The case deals specifically with Laurier Saumur of Quebec, a Jehovah's Witness evangelist arrested for distributing literature without a permit from the chief of police.

Lower courts have upheld the validity of the by-law. But Mr. How said he had been unsuccessful in attempts to get the courts to rule on the point of whether the Witnesses constitute a religious denomination.

Mr. How asked the nine-member Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, to declare:

1. Jehovah's Witnesses form a religious denomination.

2. Secretary, as a result of his training, was a minister.

3. His manner of preaching through the distribution of pamphlets was lawful.

The Quebec City attorney-general's department is opposing Mr. How. The case is to continue today.

Mr. How said about 200 other cases hinge on the Supreme Court's interpretation of the validity of the Quebec by-law, all in Quebec province. Several hundred prosecutions were pending in Montreal.

Under the challenged by-law, no literature may be distributed in Quebec City without the written permission of the chief of police.

Question Left To Wisdom Of Parliament

LONDON (AP)—The Queen has told Parliament she is willing to defer to its judgment in a proposal to create a new type of peer whose title would die with him.

Her message Tuesday, necessary to clear the decks before Parliament can debate an issue involving the royal prerogative, said she leaves the whole matter to the "wisdom of my Parliament."

Traditionally, all new peers are created by the Queen, so the House of Lords sought the Queen's permission before raising the topic.

Behind the proposal for this new one-generation-only aristocrat lies an old dispute about the House of Lords.

Conservative and Labor members long have said the system needs changing, but they never have been able to agree just what changes to make.

The trouble about the new creations is that each time a man with a son gets into the House of Lords for political, military or other services, there is an addition to Britain's privileged families. Normally the eldest son takes his place after he is dead.

In a private member's bill, Viscount Simon, former attorney-general and foreign secretary, proposes the government should be allowed to name 10 new peers each year whose titles would die with them.

This, he reckons, would allow distinguished new blood to mingle with old families in the House of Lords without increasing the total number of privileged British families.

Lone Gunman Robs Bank Of $5,000

MONTREAL (CP)—A lone gunman robbed a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal of $5,000, but 11 employees and six customers were unaware of the holdup until a female teller fainted from shock. The man escaped.

Mary Hunter, teller at the branch of the Bank of Montreal in the International Aviation Building on University street, collapsed Tuesday after handing the money to a short, dark gunman, who is believed to be responsible for a robbery several weeks ago at a branch of the Royal Bank here.

The thug, holding a half-hidden gun in his coat pocket, handed Miss Hunter a note which read: "This is a stick-up. I want $10,000."

Miss Hunter pushed a pile of bills across the counter, but he demanded more saying: "Ive shot before and I'll shoot again."

She handed him another pile of bills and fainted as he walked away.

10,000 Troops Patrol Streets In Casablanca

CASABLANCA, Morocco (Reuters) — A regiment of French Legionnaires arrived here today as Casablanca's stores schools, and offices closed for the funeral of eight European's killed in Monday's riots.

Officials estimated that more than 10,000 troops patrolled the city and its suburbs to prevent further anti-French outbreaks.

At least 1,000 Arabs are in custody following the savage rioting which killed more than 50 persons, police reported.

Bodies of three Europeans were so badly mutilated they were still unidentified.

Tribesmen staged a fresh riot Tuesday night at Beni Mellal, 156 miles southwest of this city of 600,000. The angry mob, demanding the release of a prisoner, closed and stabbed a Moroccan policeman to death. Police opened fire. Two were killed and seven were wounded.

Talking Horse Owner Does Not Claim to Understand All Things Lady Wonder Capable of Doing

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Mrs. Claudia Fonda, owner of an animal that has come to be known as a talking horse, doesn't claim to understand how "Lady Wonder" does the phenomenal things she is credited with doing.

But she is more than a little disturbed about the flood of questions that has descended on her household since the recent publicity resulting from the discovery of a missing Massachusetts youngster through a clue given by Lady.

"I've often wished I understood," she said, when asked if she could explain Lady's unusual abilities.

Mrs. Fonda, who has been allowing people to question Lady for more than 20 years, said "I'm convinced that there is a strange link between 'the human and the animal mind, at least in Lady's case."

Lady will answer questions by pecking out the answers on a "spelling board," a simple gadget made by Mrs. Fonda's husband, a machinist. When Lady pushes a lever with her chin, the appropriate letter pops up.

Mrs. Fonda says she has exhibited Lady briefly, in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Washington, among other places, but has never tried to make a "big thing" out of it.

She said she first suspected Lady was an unusual animal when she began to appear just before Mrs. Fonda could get the words out of her mouth, to call her.

Somebody suggested communicating with the animal by using spelling blocks, which worked fine. Then Fonda made the spelling board, which also worked fine.

Mrs. Fonda said Lady is no thoroughbred but the seller told her the colt was "seven-eighths thoroughbred and one-eighth broncho."

Lady was bought as a colt 23 years ago, for use at a farm animal, but she "never has had a harness on." Mrs. Fonda said she raised her on a bottle.

The recent deluge of inquiries from all over the country does not please Mrs. Fonda. "I think it's unfair to ask her to locate people through such clues as the ones they furnish," she said, "although I'm sure she'd do her best."

Mrs. Fonda said she thinks Lady does much better when the questioner stands beside Lady, and sayway, "how would these people know whether the answers were mine or the horse's if they weren't right here?"

Rural Hydro Rates Will be Increased 14.9 P.C. Jan. 1

TORONTO (CP)—Rural hydro rates in Ontario will be increased 14.9 per cent effective Jan. 1, Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, announces.

The increase affects 234,825 rural customers.

Mr. Saunders said in a broadcast Tuesday night that the standard farm customer will pay about 84 cents a month more for power under the new rate schedule.

A month ago he announced an increase of 14.8 per cent in the cost of power to municipalities and promised that the rural increase would be kept under 15 per cent.

Reasons for the rural increase are the higher costs of steam power and of construction, Mr. Saunders said increased use of electricity on the farm—the number of customers has more than doubled in the last seven years—has led to a demand for a higher grade of service. This meant a higher standard of maintenance and rehabilitation.

Britain, Egypt Reach Agreement On Some Points

CAIRO (Reuters)—Britain and Egypt have reached agreement on some points relating to the future of the Sudan. Settlement of the long-standing dispute between the two countries now is in sight, it was reported in diplomatic circles.

Premier Mohamed Naguib and ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson had a three-hour meeting Tuesday.

A joint statement issued afterwards said the session covered "questions relating to the Sudan with a view to concluding them as quickly as possible in order that elections may be held with the minimum of delay."

It said agreement has been reached on some points of difference and others are being considered. A further meeting will be held.

The Sudan, rich sand and jungle territory south of Egypt, was ruled jointly by Britain and Egypt under a treaty signed in 1899. Last year King Farouk scrapped the treaty and named himself King of the Sudan.

Wanted Gunman Shoots It Out With N.Y. Police

NEW YORK (AP)—A 37-year-old gunman—wanted by the federal bureau of investigation and sought on a homicide charge in Cleveland —was captured after a furious gun battle with three policemen, all of whom were severely wounded.

Police identified the gunman as Clarence C. Sims of Cleveland, a Negro.

Sims and three passersby also were wounded in the fight in the streets around Times Square.

The Ohioan was quoted by police as saying he was the head of the Cleveland "shotgun gang" but had been in this cit for some time.

Police quoted Sims as saying he and some members of his gang were in New York with the intention of "pulling some liquor store holdups."

He said his plans were snagged when he got in an argument in a tavern at 42nd street and Eighth avenue, a block from Times Square.

Authorities said Sims argued in the tavern with a white man and woman.

The argument continued after Sims and the couple left the tavern and went on the street. It was then that police intervened.

Sims was reported to have drawn a .45-calibre automatic from his belt and to have opened fire as soon as he saw the patrolmen.

He was finally brought down with a bullet in the back of the head, by a patrolman who was attracted to the scene by the earlier shots.

London Paper Says Windsor To Stay Away

LONDON (CP)—The Daily Express says today it understands the Duke of Windsor will not take any part in the Coronation ceremony next June.

It quotes "good sources" as saying the Duke has made up his ming not to be in England for the ceremony.

The Express report is in line with a Canadian Press dispatch last Thursday, which said the Duke probably will not attend the Coronation unless the Duchess of Windsor is invited. It is understoog the stumbling block is that the Duke insists on his wife being treated as a royal duchess.

Earlier, press speculation had suggested both the Windsors would be invited, thus completing a reconciliation between the royal family and the Duke and Duchess.

Second President Of Israel Takes Oath of Office

JERUSALEM (AP)—Itzhak Ben-Zvi, who spent a lifetime working for the establishment of Israel as a national home for the Jews, took the oath of office today as the second president of his youthful state in a solemn Parliament ceremony.

The 68-year-old leader of the Israeli Labor party was elected by the Knesset (parliament) Monday to a five-year term, succeeding the late Dr. Chaim Weizmann.

Members of the diplomatic corps and Israeli political and spiritual leaders attended the ceremony.

The new president came to the Holy Land in 1907 after pogroms in Russia spurred his ambition to work for a Jewish national state. For nearly 30 years, before independence was won, Ben-Zvi was a principal spokesman for Palestine Jewery on the spot while Weizmann appealed for support abroad.

PICTON

25,000 People Jam Streets To See Parade

Picton — More than twenty-five thousand people jammed the streets of Picton Saturday morning for the annual Santa Claus parade. Sponsored by Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, the parade included 47 floats, three bands, a piper and other musicians, as well as 25 walking characters.

Covering more than a mile the parade was the largest to date and all floats were exceptionally fine, many being very elaborate affairs. While the weather was mild and clear after a day of rain, the skies were overcast most of the time.

Floats Feature Scene

Several floats featured the scene of the Nativity; others included Snow White and the seven dwarfs, carol singers, three 1918 car models, the Bumsteads, Donald and Daisy Duck, three elephants, Goldilocks and Bears, the Three Pigs, many kinds of animals, Punchinello, Christmas scenes, a group of saddle horses, headed by Major McFarland, floats depicting work of various organizations, Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, Brownies, C.G.I.T. and many others.

Bands taking part were the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, Picton Public School and Picton Oddfellows.

Members of the R.C.S.A. lined most of the route and handled the tremendous crowd in fine style.

Rode In Red Cutter

Santa rode in a red cutter on a white float with Mrs. Ryley above tree tops.

At the Armouries, more than 2,000 children greeted Santa and each one received a bag containing oranges, cookies and candies. Balloons were distributed along the streets by the Business Girls' Club, adding to the color. Trees along the streets, lights and gaily decorated windows added to the festive season.

FLYING PHANTOMS

LONDON (CP)—Air Ministry officials received conflicting descriptions of "unearthly" objects said to have been seen over southern England. Isle of Wight residents reported "something like a tadpole with a flaming tail," while Bognor reported a "ball of flame" and Tonbridge saw "a brilliant bluish light."

JOHNSTOWN

W.A. Installs 1953 Officers

JOHNSTOWN — The Christmas meeting of the Johnstown W. A. was held on December 4th in the form of a Christmas party.

The president, Mrs. Ernest Bush, opened the meeting. The Scripture, Luke 2; 8-20 was read by Mrs. Clayton Curtis and the explanation and prayer was given by Mrs. Maurice Mallory. The dues were paid and the wash money was collected for the year.

Short readings were given by Mrs. J. Ferguson, Mrs. G. McLean, Mrs. N. Sickle, Mrs. Dickie. A trio was given by Mesdames Mallory, Smith and Sickle. A fine reading was also given by Mrs. E. Bush.

During the business session it was agreed to have a "Pack Shower" and give the articles to the Children's Aid Society of Belleville. A donation is to be sent to CARE.

Mrs. Puttenham was asked to install the officers for the coming year. They are as follows:

President — Mrs. Ernest Bush; 1st vice-president — Mrs. Jack Ferguson; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. Kenneth Sickle; secretary — Mrs. John McEwen, Jr.; treasurer, — Mrs. Clayton Curtis; pianist — Mrs. W. J. Harry; helper — Mrs. Alex Vandervoort; buying committee — Mrs. Earl Sickle, Mrs. E. Sickle; cards — Mrs. Brunt; visiting committee — Mrs. J. Ferguson, Mrs. C. Curtis; press reporter — Mrs. Alva Meyers; nominating committee — Mrs. M. Mallory, Mrs. G. McLean; Missionary superintendent — Mrs. Earl Sickle.

Presents were taken off the tree and distributed to the children first and to the adults next. Tasty refreshments were provided by the conveners, which closed an interesting year.

Mission Band

The Elsie Mission Band recently held its Christmas meeting. The Scripture reading—St. Luke 2, was read by Wayne Kirby.

The business part of the meeting was dealt with and it was decided that the Mission Band would pack a box for the Salvation Army to give to people needing it, and also agreed to send a donation to missions.

A reading entitled, "Making a Minister In Angola," was given by Wayne Brooks. The Juniors sang, "Grandfather's Clock." accompanied by Gill Lohnes. Mrs. Clayton Curtis read "Cheer the Weary Traveller ' The Juniors read a poem, "Christmas." A poem called "Bread," was read by Bobby Hamilton. A chapter of the Mission Band Book was read, "Nyanga's Two Villages," by Sheila Kirby.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

White's District — Little Kathryn Ellis, of Thurlow, spent a few days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jones, also Mr. and Mrs. John Reid, of Trenton, visited Mr. Ritchie Ketcheson in Kingston General Hospital on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sickels were Saturday callers of Mr. Ketcheson, also of Mr. Will Jones of Trenton, who was a patient there.

Mrs. Clare Miller, Stephen and David, of Belleville, were Thursday visitors of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush.

A few from White's W.A. attended the bazaar and tea at Wesley Church on Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Millar and family, of Trenton, were tea guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandercock.

Sunday School and church services were held at White's Church on Sunday afternoon with a good attendance. The children's story, "There are Others", taught the children to be considerate of others. The choir rendered an anthem, "In the Garden," with Miss Joan Shoemaker taking the solo part.

SALARIES IN DOUBT

SARNIA (CP) — Unless city council pays promptly the $25,000 lopped off the board of education appropriation last spring, teachers salaries will go unpaid at Christmas time, William Rogers, director of education, said Monday night. Mayor W. C. Nelson replied the city could assure $30,000, but wanted the board to try and take care of the remaining $5,000 themselves.

GOVT. PREPARING

He also posed the question of supervision of television programs, asking whether films shown on television should be subject to provincial supervision.

The throne speech debate began Nov. 24, and appears to be tapering toward a conclusion. The government has said the House won't take a Christmas recess until this traditional debate—which ends with votes on non-confidence motions offered by opposition parties—is finished.

Asked To Cut Taxes

A Liberal member, C. A. Cannon, a Quebec City lawyer who represents the fishing constituency of Iles de la Madeleine in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, called on the government to cut taxes. He said recent federal surpluses had been satisfactorily explained, but he suggested the expansion in national production now justified tax reductions.

The throne speech debate began Nov. 24, and appears to be tapering toward a conclusion. The government has said the House won't take a Christmas recess until this traditional debate—which ends with votes on non-confidence motions offered by opposition parties—is finished.

Lt.-Col. Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary East) said the government is stockpiling unimportant items while demuding Canada of essential arms. He said "serious deficiencies" have developed in tanks and guns while stocks of neckties, carpets and serving forks have been stockpiled.

Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East) suggested immediate action on a national health insurance plan. Just because all provinces were not ready was no reason to deny it to others.

All Favored Plan

George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley) said all Liberals favored health insurance, but any plan must be introduced in an orderly manner. However, this was not the time for that step.

Rodney Adamson (PC — York West) urged a free world market for gold. He believed it would help Canadian gold producers and be of some assistance in solving trade problems if the present fixed price of $35 an ounce was abolished.

Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South) said Canada's parliamentarians and newspapers should do a better job of telling the people of the necessity of defence pro-

Ancestor Boom Hits Britain; Cherished Family Trees Wither At Cold Touch of Researchers

LONDON- (AP)—Tourists are helping swell a boom in ancestor hunting which is stirring up the dust on thousands of yellowed British files.

The trouble is many cherished family traditions are blown to bits in the process.

Most families pass on their history orally from one generation to the next—and the facts often get garbled on the way. Now trained investigators are available to sort out fact and fancy from exhaustive records gathered in the last 40 years.

Hence many families who fondly believe they were descended from some high-land chieftain who can trace their chagrin that their earliest recorded ancestor guarded the village pigs a scant three or four centuries back.

Blue Bloods Shocked

The heaviest of such shocks were dealt recently to some 50 of Britain's blueblooded families—men who claimed descent from Norman kings or even earlier Saxon monarchs.

Most such claims are just hooey, according to L. G. Pine, editor of Burke's Peerage, the recognized chronicle of British nobility.

He and 17 researchers have put their blue pencils through some of Britain's most cherished family trees. Only pedigrees substantiated by a study of documentary evidence will be included in the 1953 issue of Burke now being prepared.

But one documentary check worked the other way. It added 500-year-old roots to the family tree of the Queen.

Queen's Descent

Old genealogical files show the Queen is descended from a fourth century Teutonic tribal duke. They say. Previously the British royal line had been followed back only as far as the ninth century Saxon King Egbert, often called the first king of England. Since then, the line of descent has wandered considerably. The royal family now reigning came to Britain from German in 1714.

At the society of genealogists headquarters there is a card index of 5,500,000 items—records of old families and centuries-old births.

Other equipment in the search for a family tree includes the records of more than 6,000,000 English marriages, copies of old parish registers and thousands of manuscript and printed family histories.

Lose Centuries

Lady Harriet Thompson, who believed she was descended from a sister of William the Conqueror, was told her family dates back only to a member of Parliament for Tipperary, Ireland, in 1559.

Viscount St. Davids, a young socialist nobleman, was shown in previous editions of Burke as being descended from Maximus, king of Britain and Roman emperor who died in the year 388. Some 700 years of that pedigree will be rubbed out in the next edition—the researchers can trace it back only to 1088.

New Freight Rate Increase Will Be Fought by Govts.

"OTTAWA (CP)—A new freight rate increase sought by the railways to meet increased labour costs will be opposed by a group of provincial governments on two main grounds.

These are:

1. That the railways' application to the board of transport commissioners for a nine-per-cent rate boost is premature.

2. That any increase should not be on a flat percentage basis across the board but should allow exceptions for certain types of traffic.

All provinces except Ontario and Quebec—the group generally associated in rate cases—will oppose the increase, which the railways applied for Nov. 28 on accepting the majority report of a conciliation board recommending a 15-cents-an-hour wage increase for their 144,000 non-operating employees.

The provinces will open fire on the $62,000,000-a-year rate application when hearings start before the transport board next Monday.

Preliminary submissions filed by some of them indicate that their "premature" argument will be based on the fact that the railways and their unions have not yet signed a wage agreement to replace the one that expired last Sept. 1.

Do Bees Buzz Brooklynese?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Do the bees buzz in Brooklynese?

The answer, it seems, is up to Karl von Frisch, a scientist who has applied for a Rockefeller Foundation grant to find out if possible whether bees talk to each other in "dialect."

The project was described briefly yesterday by Dean Rusk, president of the foundation, in testimony before a House of Representatives subcommittee. The Congressmen are studying the activities of foundations.

It may seem amusing to study "a honey bee with a southern accent," Rusk said, but you will never tell where it will lead in the great pattern of communications research.

Sunday Sport By-Law Defeated By 102 Votes

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Commercialized Sunday sport was defeated by 102 votes in Port Arthur's civic election Monday.

Final tabulation early today showed 5,360 voters in favor of the proposal and 5,602 opposed. The balloting followed 1¼ weeks of intensive campaigning.

The final count for the mayoralty gave Fred. G. Robinson a margin of more than 1,700 votes over Mayor Charles W. Cox. Mr. Robinson polled 5,363 votes to Mr. Cox's 3,866 and 2,248 for Alderman Mrs. Eunice M. Wishart.

TRIED FOR BANK THEFT

HAMILTON (CP)—Twelve witnesses testified for the crown Monday at the trial of Franklin Brewer, 22, charged with robbing the Freelton branch of the Bank of Toronto of $1,500 Oct. 24. He pleaded innocent. Police charged that Brewer, with two other men, entered the bank, jumped on a counter and brandished a revolver. The bandits escaped in a car with the money from the bank. Freelton is 12 miles northwest of here. The trial is expected to end today.

W.M.S. Presents Slate of Officers

The monthly meeting of the W. M. S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of the president, Mrs. L. Scott on Wednesday with 17 ladies in attendance.

The meeting opened with a Christmas hymn. An invitation to meet with Gilead W. M. S. on Friday evening was read by Mrs. Gerald Swan. A letter from Mrs. Townsend of Redgerville, secretary of Christian Stewardship was also read, followed by a discussion on helping along good causes by buying tickets on articles raffled. Some churches are condemning this way of raising money.

The treasurer, Mrs. Everett Stratton, reported $182.15 raised so far this year. The secretary was requested to send a letter of thanks to the president for her faithful and efficient service and a hearty handclap showed the appreciation of those present.

Mrs. Scott thanked all those who had helped carry on, especially the treasurer and the secretary who were present to do their work at every meeting. Mrs. Scott also read about one of the missionaries, Dr. Florence Murray, a native of Nova Scotia, who has recently been honored by the King of Denmark for her outstanding work among the wounded in Korea.

Pictures in the Globe and Mail were passed around, showing women at work in a United Church on Dundas Street, Toronto, sorting, mending and packing the many tons of clothing for overseas relief.

The supply secretary, Mrs. D. Hinchey, read an interesting article concerning this work.

Mrs. Saul McFarlane, group leader, took charge. The Scripture lesson from Luke 2, was read by Mrs. C. Clarke, while Miss Sara Stickney, Mrs Orval Stratton and Mrs. Everett Stratton also read passages of Scripture.

Mrs. D. Hinchey favored with a lovely Christmas solo, which was enjoyed by all present, with Mrs. Scott as accompanist.

The group leader tendered a vote of thanks to the hostess for opening her home for the meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Scott and her assistants, and a social time spent.

The next meeting will be held on January 8.

1953 Officers

The officers for 1953 are as follows: president, Mrs. L. W. Scott; first vice-president, Mrs. C. Wood; second vice-president, Mrs. F. Doxtator; recording and corresponding secretary, press and literature secretary, Mrs. W. D. Robertson; treasurer and secretary of Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Everett Stratton; pianist and supply secretary, Mrs. Damon Hinchey; Missionary Monthly secretary, Milk Sara Stickney; associate helper, Mrs. Sam Elliott; community friendship, Mrs. Frank Doxtator; temperance secretary, Mrs. Arthur Houston; flower committee, Mrs. K. Vivian, Mrs. Russel Wescott; Mission Band leaders, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, Mrs. Damon Hinchey, Mrs. Archie Greatrix; Baby Band leader, Mrs. Jim Hinchey; group leaders, Mrs. B. Woods, Mrs. Gammon, Mrs. K. H. Vivian, Mrs. G. Stratton and Mrs. F. Doxtator.

WORKMAN'S FALL FATAL

OAKVILLE (CP)—Charles E. Thompson, 47, of Victoria Harbor was killed Monday when he fell 20 feet from a scaffolding at the new Ford of Canada assembly plant here. Thompson, an employee of the Canadian Bridge Company, was found unconscious on the ground. No one saw him fall.

PROFITABLE KICK

CAPETOWN (CP)—A native railway porter walking in the veldt near Victoria playfully kicked a rusty tin half-buried in the ground. Out of the tin rolled 21 golden sovereigns dated from 1853 to 1877.

Memo to MenHow to Manage Women Advanced by Research Institute

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK (AP)—Memo to men on how to manage women—helpless women, that is—comes—complete with notes on what to do about gossip, rumors and talk—from the Research Institute of America. The institute is a private research organization that analyzes and interprets developments affecting business for a membership of 30,000 business executives and others.

Both men and women members of its staff worked on the memo about women after consultation with psychiatrists and psychologists.

Here is the 'gist of it:

If you are faced with a flood of tears, give her girl an opportunity to recover her self-control. The tears are generally due to a combination of-on-the-job and personal problems. Let the girl know you are available to discuss anything she wants to bring up, but don't pry.

Above all, don't dismiss a tearful girl with an offhand "go wash your face; you'll feel better." Finally, keep in mind that some women use tears as a deliberate weapon. Don't yield. Whatever happens, you have to maintain your standards.

When criticizing a woman's work, remember that women take things personally. Ask a man: "Where did you get that steak?" He will answer: "At Green's meat market." Ask his wife the same question and she'll answer with some emotion: "Why? What's wrong with it?"

In the business world such reactions are due partly to the fact that women are on the defensive; not only because they feel as a group that they have to prove themselves, but also because a woman tends to see almost everything in terms of herself.

In dealing with women, criticism should always be linked closely with encouragement and appreciation. Never take a woman for granted. Your failure to comment favorably is likely to be interpreted as disapproval. Women expect praise in greater quantities than men do.

Women, if not as logical as men, are sometimes one jump ahead in their thinking. Women are extra-sensitive to other human beings, observe them more carefully than most men do and feel their moods. Women generally are more interested in people than things. Women's gossip stems from this intense interest in people. But the time spent talking in the powder room is out of all proportion to the importance of the subjects discussed. This kind of absenteeism during the day is contagious. If you don't control it, expect it to spread.

IS 'PEACE' DELEGATE

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mural painter Diego Rivera, Mexico's in-and-out Communist, said today he would leave shortly for the Communist "peace conference" which opens Dec. 13 in Vienna. Rivera has been expelled from the communist party but his application for re-admission is pending.

Slays Spouse For Freedom In Own Home

GREENVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Cecil R. Rhodd, 41, who claims he was a prisoner in his own home, pleaded guilty yesterday of fatally stabbing his wife, Ardee, 40, last Sept. 13. Rhodd told Judge George H. Rowley: "I killed my wife deliberately because I felt I was a prisoner in my own home and couldn't do anything I wanted to do." Judge Rowley delayed sentence.

STIRLING

Volunteer Labor Helps Contractors In Renovation

STIRLING (Special) — Volunteer labor in the form of a series of "bees" has greatly assisted contractors in the renovation of St. Paul's United Church here. These bees have been held frequently since mid-November.

George Stoneman, of Toronto, who recently decorated several churches in Belleville, was employed to paint and redecorate the church auditorium. The ceiling has been done in sky blue with gold borders and golden crosses in the panel corners.

The quaint old organ has been done in a three-tone blend to match the mushroom-rose effect of the walls, while the chancel arch and Gothic windows have been bordered with a stone design.

The cluster lighting which has served since the church was first wired for electricity has been replaced with memorial lanterns which are the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Elliott in memory of their parents. The entrance hall lanterns have been provided by Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Patterson.

A hardwood floor has been laid in the Sunday School hall under the direction of Hector Eggleton of Stirling. This work involved ventilating ducts and the reinforcing of several of the main pillars with cement footings.

Special services will be conducted on Quarter Day, December 14th, to mark the reconditioning program. Rev. C. D. McLellan of Nanaee, former president of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and Rev. George A. Pattenden, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, will be guests of the congregation.

The entire project has been under the direction of Dr. William Cornett, chairman, Mrs. W. T. Elliott, Mrs. C. E. Mackin, F. J. Wood and Carleton Wright.

POW KILLED

PUSAN, Korea (AP) — A North Korean prisoner of war was shot and killed and another was critically wounded by UN guards on Koje Island Sunday, the prisoner-of-war command said today. The command's announcement said the prisoner killed was trying to escape. The other POW was shot when he ignored orders to get out of a restricted area.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

SHOULD BE EASY!

Clonk Dewey, syndicate of the cloistered halls and ivied towers of Michigan State University, embeaten in 39 starts on canvas in the noble art of hook-hauling, mocks Fitzie Fryden, Canadian mitster in Cleveland's 26th annual Christmas Fund show tonight. Which is approximately the same as seven-year-old Peter mixing it with the old man on the regular Sunday morning bedroom jamboree. And if the best you more than three or four rounds, then the Korean incident is a phoney.

Davey, whose hard left hook has earned him more folding money than his Master's degree apparently hasn't lost much sleep worrying about the outcome and why should he? Fryden, formerly of St. Catharines, has fought four bouts this year, has been floored in the ring twice and lost the other pair.

With Davey a top-heavy favorite, a sell-out crowd of 13,000 is expected to attend the brawl. The clever, hard-hitting southpaw, is gunning for a welterweight title match with Kid Gavilan, and the scrap will likely take place in Chicago next February.

The New York boxing experts have looked askance at the best figuring Fryden will be a pushover for the two-fisted Davey. He was originally scheduled to meet Red Cochrane, hard-punching welter, but the bout was called off at the last minute while boxing writers held fingers to nose. Some of them figured Flanagan might upset Davey's long string of victories, and that would never do with the welterweight championship fight on the horizon.

Davey, in fact, protested that Flanagan's style was too similar to his own and the bout would not be a crowd-pleaser. You can take that one any style you like. The bout is being televised, so you better sit in with Them guys be a whodunit on the screen if you picture-in five-minutes after fight time.

ERENT VALLEY LOOP

Twelve teams will go to the wire when the bugles blow "They're Off" in the Trent Valley Hockey League, says President Arthur Duncan. Included are Point Anne, Wellington, Lakefield, Norwood, Havelock, Hastings, Campbellford, Marmora, Stirling, Frankford, Trenton Town and No. 6 Repair Depot, RCAF.

At a league meeting held over the week-end officials declared Belleville and Trenton "open territory" as far as players are concerned. Either team is limited to seven players of senior calibre. The executive, however, has reserved the right to pass judgment on these players. Each team must submit a list for league approval.

COURT GAME TONIGHT

Bill Spafford's up-and-coming Moiras, Belleville entry in the Ontario Senior Basketball League, meet Trenton senior in the Collegiate gymnasium in a scheduled loop fixture. The Moiras at present lead the loop and have yet to meet defeat. The Trenton crew is said to be one of the best turned out by the neighboring town in a decade and the Moiras will have to go all out if they want to cop the nod. Game starts at 8.30. It's in a fine type of the court game and basketball enthusiasts should not miss it up.

NEW SYSTEM

Frank Buckland, OHA vice-president and convener of the senior "B" and junior "B" groups of this district sends along official confirmation of the new point system to be used in the junior "B" group. A proposed percentage system met with much opposition from some of the clubs and the 4-point idea was adopted. It amounts to this. All the games in which Cobourg and Oshawa participate in the second series, in other words, the last twenty games of the schedule, starting January 13, 1953, will be four-pointers. This is in line with the clubs which opposed the percentage system.

RICHARD SCORED 17 HAT TRICKS

Maurice Richard, hockey's highest scoring performer, has scored three goals in one game on 17 occasions. Besides chalking up 17 Hat Tricks, the fiery Montreal Canadiens' right winger has scored both four goals in one game and five goals in one game. He notched his four goals against the New York Rangers and his five-goal effort was against the Detroit Red Wings.

Ottawa Player Has Best Earned-Run Mark

NEW YORK (CP)—Mario Fricano, obtained by Ottawa Athletics for a song, posted the best earned-run average in the 1952 International League season.

Final official statistics released Tuesday show Fricano wound up with a 2.25 earned-run average. To qualify a pitcher had to take part in 154 or more innings.

Fricano was obtained from St. Paul of the American Association by Ottawa on a "real beaut." Ottawa completed the deal shortly after the season began. He moved up to the parent Philadelphia Athletics late in the season.

Fricano won 17 games and lost only eight for the seventh-place Ottawa club. He allowed 48 earned runs in 181 innings, walked 64 and fanned 68.

Bob Keegan of Syracuse Chiefs, purchased by Chicago White Sox at the end of the season, captured the majority of the remaining honors.

The veteran righthander was the league's only 20-game winner. Keegan also topped the circuit in innings pitched, 273; complete games 27 and shutouts, seven. Keegan placed seventh in the earned run race with a 2.64 mark.

Quebec Member Says Article 'Odious Calumny'

QUEBEC (CP)—Francis Boudreau (UN—St. Sauveur) in the Quebec legislature described as "an odious calumny" an article published in a Montreal weekly newspaper which said Quebec hockey fans are "bandits."

Rising on a question of privilege Tuesday, he said he had been informed the article in the French-language Samedi-Dimanche was written by a man hit identified as Paul de St. George and not by Maurice Richard, Montreal Canadiens hockey star under whose name it appeared.

In Montreal, Richard couldn't be reached before he was due to leave with the team for Toronto where the Canadiens meet the Leafs tonight.

Managing Director Frank Selke of the Canadiens had no comment.

"Quebec sporting' spirit has too often manifested itself to be the object of such low and vulgar attacks on the part of this unscrupulous journalist," said Boudreau,

Canadiens Buy Gaye Stewart In Effort to Bolster Attack; Bruins Unbeaten in Six Games

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs will try out youth, Montreal Canadiens experience, when the National Hockey League rivals meet in Toronto tonight.

Youth is 18-year-old Dave Reid, Toronto Marlboro centre, who is going to help fill the breach caused by the loss of forwards Rudy Migay and Max Bentley. Both players are out for about a month.

Experience is in the form of 29-year-old Gaye Stewart, a 10-year veteran of the NHL, who has been purchased by the Canadiens from the New York Rangers for the $7,500 waiver price.

Coach Dick Irvin thinks Stewart can inject some life into the Habs' production department now suffering from an acute attack of ineptitis.

The Canadiens need a win badly. They're now in the unfamiliar fifth spot, 10 points more than the cellar-dwelling Rangers, and three points behind Boston Bruins and the Leafs.

The Leafs wouldn't turn down a win either. A victory, plus a loss by the Bruins at New York tonight, would send Conn Smythe's boys into solo possession of third place, one point behind the league-leading Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Red Wings.

But on the surface a Boston loss seems pretty unlikely. The Bruins currently are the hottest crew in the NHL, unbeaten in their last six games. They won five straight before holding the Red Wings to a tie in Detroit last Sunday.

Cobourg Jays Here Tonight

Cobourg Jays, unknown quantity in the junior "B" group of the district, will be the guests of the flying Black Hawks at Memorial Arena tonight. The Jays, with the Oshawa Boss, are post-entries in the loop and, up to the moment have defeated Lindsay and bowed to the strong Oshawa squad.

The Black Hawks, who are hitting full stride and will be out to notch up their seventh victory and fifth in a row. Coach Don Barrett said yesterday the team is in fine shape and rarin' to show their wares against the Cobourg clan. They are out in front of the pack with twelve points, five in front of the second-place Shamrock Tigers.

It is reported that the Jays are a fast-skating clever squad that should give any team in the group a hard battle. Game gets under way at 8.30.

TORONTO (CP)—Royal Pointer, owned by Mrs. Robert Menard of St. Edwidge, Que., and driven by Albert Bourbeau and Fortitude, owned by Adelard Dumas of Sherbrooke, Que., and guided by Jimmy Larexte, each captured a heat in the featured sixth event, a pace, on Tuesday's harness program at Dufferin Park.

Dandy Hanover, owned by E. Webb of Portland, Me., and Irish Lullaby, owned by the H. and L. Blake of Norwich, were heat winners in the fifth and secondary feature.

Canucks Blanked

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks were blanked 3-0 by Saskatoon Quakers for their third straight loss of the Western Hockey League campaign. Doug Bentley tallied both goals.

Tacoma Rockets defeated New Westminster Royals 3-1 in Tuesday night's other game.

Buck Jones, Wayne Brown and Doug Adam fired the Tacoma scores. Stacy Bayco counted for the Royals.

Rocky Marciano 'Fighter-of-Year'

NEW YORK (AP)—Heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano has been named winner of the Edward J. Neil memorial plaque, awarded annually by the Boxing Writers Association to the fighter of the year.

The first heavyweight ever to attain the title without even a draw to blemish his record, the 29-year-old Brockton, Mass., master was chosen by acclamation. Not one other boxer was mentioned seriously as the writers paid tribute to the sport's most dynamic figure.

His dramatic come-from-behind knockout of Jersey Joe Walcott in the 13th round at Philadelphia last Sept. 23 was the most thrilling event of the year in boxing.

No Permission For Tour Team

SUDBURY (CP)—Max Silverman, president and coach of Sudbury Wolves of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group, says he has not yet received permission from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to take a team to Japan for an exhibition series in January.

The Japanese Ice Skating Federation reported that a Sudbury Wolves team would visit Japan Jan. 7 to play 14 games.

Silverman said Tuesday that if the CAHA say yes the team will be coached by Charlie Taylor of Flin Flon and will make the trip. Silverman said he will be too busy to go.

Maple Leafs Sign Sandlot Hurler

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League Tuesday signed Frank Repchik, left-handed pitcher from the Toronto sandlot ranks, to a professional contract.

Repchik played both senior and junior baseball last season with Milwaukee Sports of the West Toronto League. He was second top man in both divisions, winning five and losing two as a junior and winning six and losing one as a senior. He recorded two no-hitters.

Spitfires Start Up-Ladder Climb, Defeat Top-Slot Barrie Flyers 4-1

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

To quote an old saw from the boxing world: "It was a hard fight maw, but we won."

That's what Windsor Spitfires said Tuesday night after they pulled out of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A basement.

The Spits, trailing since the beginning of the game, started up those long stairs a couple of weeks ago and climaxed the struggle with a 4-1 victory Tuesday night over Barrie Flyers. The victory gave them 16 points, two ahead of Kitchener — Waterloo Greenshirts and two behind Oshawa Generals.

The game was played before a crowd of 2,250 fans in Windsor, the largest in two seasons. They watched the Spits break a 1-1 second period deadlock by firing home three goals in the third.

St. Mike's Win

Kitchener-Waterloo fought desperately to avoid the cellar position, but an overtime goal gave Toronto St. Michael's a 6-5 win. St. Mikes now are solidly in second spot.

Oshawa strengthened their seventh-place position by downing the fifth-place St. Catharines Teepees 7-4.

Toronto Marlboros opened the tour of the Ambler Cup by downing Montreal Canadiens 4-3 and in another junior hockey Association play the cellar-dwelling Montreal Royals took a 3-3 tie from the third-place Three Rivers Reds.

In Windsor Joe Zorica ended the 1-1 tie with a sizzler past Barrie goalie Gil Bolsvert. Ross Graham and Bob Brown added the insurance. Don Cherry scored Barrie's only goal in the second period. Ed Loutiti tied it up.

Ted Toppazzini gave the Mikes their win in overtime. Mike Hatchford, Paul Knox, Jim Logan, Bill Dineen and Bill Lee scored the others.

Leader paced the Greenshirt's attack with two goals. Others were tallied by John Ford, Gary Collins and Bert Youngberg.

Oshawa was leading 7-6 in the last two minutes of play at St. Catharines when goalie Marv Edwards was taken out of the Teepees' nets. The move paid off with one goal but St. Kitts was denied the tying marker.

Roger Maisonneuve scored three for the Generals, Bob Armstrong two and Bert Hillman and Bob Attersley one each.

Billy Hess accounted for two for the Teeps. The others went to Hugh Harley, Ken Schinkel, Wimpy Roberts and Ron Murphy.

The Marlboros, trailing 3-1 at the end of the second, rebounded with a three-goal splurge for their win in Montreal.

Ronnie Ingram, Louis Bendo, Bill Harris and Tom McCarthy shared Toronto's goals. Gerald Hollingworth and Claude Provost scored for the Canadiens.

Three Rivers scored their three goals in the first period, then held off a furious Royal attack.

Gerard Bergeron, Jean-Guy Gendron and Louis Desrosiers scored for the Reds. Eddy Swartzack and Bill McGillivray counted for the Oshawa and Guelph Biltmores play Barrie in OHA action.

Quebec Citadelles will journey to Three Rivers.

Sport in Brief

KITCHENER (CP) — Major changes are imminent in the line-up of Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League as a result of a meeting of club shareholders.

The group Tuesday upheld a recommendation of the directors to negotiate the sale of players Bill Harrington, goalie; Ory Tessier, left winger; Red Hovak, defence man; and Graham Joyce, winger.

Club President Walter Weber announced that Curly Davis, recently-appointed coach of the team, will also take over the duties of team manager. He replaces H. M. Crosby.

SEATTLE (CP) — Lethwinger George Senick of Saskatoon Quakers boasted his Western Hockey League scoring lead to three points last week, league statistics show. For games up to and including Sunday, Senick has 40 points. Teammate Alex Kaleta holds down second spot with 37. Emile Francis still leads the goalkeepers with an average of 2.80 goals against per game.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Fred Walker, "Dixie" as he is better known in baseball circles, is joining St. Louis Cardinals as a coach.

The former Dodger outfielder fills the spot left by the going of Terry Moore, one-time Cardinal great who didn't see eye-to-eye with manager Eddie Stanky. Moore joined Philadelphia Phillies as a scout.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Andy Galpert, a husky Pittsburgh golf pro, shot a five-under-par 65 Tuesday to capture medal honors in the $10,000 Miami Open. His performance included a string of four straight birdies on the front nine of the 7,010-yard Miami Springs municipal course.

Haney Will Be Bucs' Manager

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Pittsburgh fans will give you odds today that Fred Haney will be the next Pirate manager. General Manager Rickey called Haney here for a talk tomorrow.

Haney, manager of Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League for the last four years, has been considered a strong contender for the post since. Meyer resigned at the end of last season.

"I can't honestly tell whether I will name him manager or not," Rickey said. "There are several things dependent on the decision, the main one being if he really wants to become the Pirate manager.

"Another factor concerns his health. He must decide whether he is well enough to tangle with a difficult job."

The fans and Rickey alike agree that taking over the Pirates will have its dark days. The National League club finished seventh in 1951 and last this year.

Rickey has been recruiting young inexperienced ballplayers, but has promised the Pittsburgh fans a pennant contender within a few years. The fans will inspect the new manager to come through on that promise.

Haney has piloted the Stars to two Pacific Coast League pennants—1949 and 1952. He headed St. Louis Browns from 1939 to mid-1941.

MANPOWER BODY TO MEET

OTTAWA (CP)—The national advisory manpower council will meet here Wednesday and Thursday. The council was appointed by the government early last year to advise on manpower problems and meets periodically. Transport Minister Chevrier will address the council on the opening day on the St. Lawrence seaway.

Beliveau Drops To Fourth Place

MONTREAL (CP)—Tod Campbell of Sherbrooke Saints, who tops the Eastern Senior Hockey League's assist department with 22, heads the loop's individual scoring race with 31 points.

Statistics released by league show nr hicni eCoch mantWi (SheGi's Saguenems and Andre Corriveau (Valleyfield Braves tied for 1571 and place with 30 points apiece. White's total included 11 goals and Corriveau's nine.

Jean Beliveau, Army centre for Montreal Navy, dropped to fourth place after leading the scoring column last week. He has 28 points, including a league-leading 15 goals.

Montreal, with five straight wins, pace the teams with 31 points, three more than the second-place Ottawa Senators. Chicoutimi and Valleyfield are tied for third with 25 points each. Next is Sherbrooke with 24. The sixth-place Aces have 21 and the cellar-dwelling Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 12.

Belleville Service Darts League

The runner-up Big "A" team rampaged through the 10-1 win over the 18th Anti Tank Regt. needle-losers in the Belleville Service Darts League last night. But the loop-leading Hasty Pees met them doit-or-quit in a 10-1 win over the Mail Carriers.

Result was the Hasty Pees' foot-slogger maintained the league lead by a margin of five points.

In other games the ANAF's defeated the Brewers by a 6-5 score while Corbins took the measure of the CNE by a 7-4 count.

The standing as of last night: Hasty Pees 53; Big "A" 77; 9th Anti Tank 52; ANAF 52; Brickers 45; Mail Carriers 43, CNE 36 and Corbins 28.

Highlights of last night's games were the three-dart score of Norm. Mills, who toured a 160 while Bill Storms heaved a 168.

Davis Cup Picture Has New Color, Since Seixas' Resounding Victories

By GAYLE TALBOT

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—The entire Davis Cup picture has taken on a decidedly different hue today following Vic Seixas's resounding victories over Ken McGregor and Frank Sedgman in the Victorian championships in Melbourne.

Members of the American team, including Seixas, were brimming with confidence as they all got together for the first time in a lengthy practice session at the White City courts here.

They now consider they have a much better than even chance of defeating the Aussies in the challenge round at Adelaide on the last three days of the month. The Australians on the other hand appeared to have awakened suddenly to the realization that they will have a fight on their hands to retain the trophy.

No Alibis

Newspaper accounts of Seixas' four-set trouncing of Sedgman in Monday's final offered no alibis, but said the American captain simply beat the socks off their number-one star. Aussie captain Harry Hopman said glumly he was "known for some time" that the American challenge was a serious one.

One of this country's leading tennis figures said today he feared the worst had happened and that both Sedgman and McGregor were developing a bit "mixed jumps."

This is a malady which afflicts leading amateur players between the time they decide to turn pro and the official announcements of their intentions. Aussie officials are resigned to losing both of their top men to promoter Jack Kramer immediately after the challenge round. Kramer, it is well known, is the pressure Sedgman and McGregor are under.

He had a terrible time beating anybody in the 1947 Nations at Forest Hills just before he joined Bobby Riggs' touring show. Every time he knocked one over the baseline he could see a thousand-dollar bill going out of the window.

While the two Aussies are being subjected to this form of torture, their prospective opponents are carefree as angels and know that anything they do will be much better than was augured for them by critics back home.

No Contract Says Jap Manager

TOKYO (AP)—The manager of the world flyweight boxing champion, Yoshio Shirai, today denied reports that a contract had been signed for a title fight between Shirai and former champion Terry Allen of London.

Allen lost the championship to Dado Marino of Honolulu, who lost it to Shirai.

"There is no truth whatsoever in the report that a contract has been signed for the champion to meet Allen," manager Alvin Cahn said.

Keeney Teran 19-Year-Old Bantam Makes Valiant Comeback in Ring

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Little Keeny Teran has avenged two conquerors—Tommy Umeda, who beat him into a bloody knockout last summer, and the hypodermic needle.

Before 8,500 spectators, most of them pulling for the 19-year-old comeback kid, Teran won a unanimous verdict Tuesday night from Umeda.

Both Los Angeles boxers weighed 118.

Teran's last fight was June 24. He had won 16 of 17 pro bouts when he faced Umeda that night for the California bantamweight championship. Tommy beat him into submission and scored a seventh-round knockout.

That seemed to be the end for Teran. In a series of signed newspaper articles Keeny admitted he was a slave to heroin and his dreams of being a world champion gave way to his craving for the drug after his loss to Umeda.

But the youth has been making a valiant comeback, under constant care of friends and a physician, and in the last six weeks worked himself back into peak physical condition.

The Los Angeles Mirror in a copyright story said a reporter had found Teran 12 weeks ago pawning his wedding ring for $7.

"You don't want to help me," the Mirror quoted Teran. "I'm bad off. I'm a dope addict. I'm letting my mother, who is the most wonderful woman in the world, support me, my wife and baby. I'll never fight again.

"It would be better for everyone if I died. The fans don't want me anymore and I hate myself."

The Mirror said its reporter spent 10 weeks with the fighter and arranged counselling conferences with noted lawyer Jerry Giesler and others. Then the fighter went to a ranch for rehabilitation.

Tuesday night the baby-faced Teran was most convincing master of the hard-hitting Umeda. Keeny had won seven bouts. Umeda floored him in the sixth. That was the only round Umeda won.

AT THE McCARTHY—Rory Calhoun takes lovely Gene Tierney in his arms in a romantic scene from Twentieth Century-Fox's Technicolor spectacle of the Argentine, "Way of a Gaucho," which opens Thursday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. Based on the popular Herbert Childs' novel, the film was photographed in its entirety.

Brantford's Kennedy Scores 5 Goals In Red Sox 7-3 Win Over Chatham

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was Sam Kennedy's game at Brantford as the sharp forward paced the Redmen to a 7-3 win over Chatham Maroons by contributing five of the goals.

The victory Tuesday night moved the Sox into fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A loop, one point over the sixth-place Sarnia Sailors, and one point behind the Maroons.

In the Senior A action Sudbury Wolves roared from behind to defeat the last-place Sault Ste. Marie Nichols, Indians 5-4. The Wolves are two points behind the second-place North Bay Trappers.

Arn Dugan and Jack Taylor scored the other Redmen goals. Ernie Dick accounted for all three of Chatham's.

Brantford pulled with five goals in the first seven minutes of play, three of them by Kennedy. They added another in the second to Chatham's one.

In Sudbury Maxime Kauppi and Yacker Flynn each came through with a goal and two assists for the Wolves. Tatter Hutchinson sank two markers and George Defelice added the other.

Vip Palladino notched the Indians' lone goal.

Tonight the league-leading Stratford Indians meet the second-place Owen Sound Mercurys while Brantford faces Sarnia Sailors.

The Sault Indians play North Bay in the only northern action.

Jimmy Carter Dunks Whitewater

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Lightweight champion Jimmy Carter of New York won a unanimous decision over Archie Whitewater, Eureka, Calif., Tuesday night in a 10-round non-title bout. The champion dropped Whitewater for a count of eight in the eighth round. Carter weighed 136½, Whitewater 141.

WINS CONFIDENCE VOTE

PARIS (AP)—Premier Antoine Pinay's strong personal appeal for a vote of confidence staved off his defeat in Parliament Tuesday by a thin margin of nine votes. With Communists, Socialists and de Gaullists solidly in opposition, Pinay's rightist government emerged victorious on a balanced budget-tax reform test 300-291.

Aussies Win

BRISBANE (AP)—Australia beat South Africa by 96 runs today in the first test cricket match between the two Commonwealth countries. Australia scored 280 and 277 in two innings while South Africa made 221 and 240.

Jack McGlew with 69 was the top scorer for South Africa's second innings. Australia's Ray Lindwall took five wickets in 69 overs.

AT THE BELLE

Great Cast in Carol Reed's New Romantic Adventure "Outcast of the Islands"

If it is tempestuous drama and romantic adventure that you are seeking just pay a visit to the Belle Theatre where Carol Reed's eagerly-awaited picture, "Outcast of the Islands" is now showing.

Starring such magnificent actors as Sir Ralph Richardson, Trevor Howard, Robert Morley, George Coulouris and Wendy Hiller, Reed also introduces a young Algerian girl, Kerima, who exhibits a spectacular brand of beauty.

Adapted from Joseph Conrad's turbulent novel of the same title, producer-director Reed filmed the picture on location in Malaya.

Trevor Howard, cast in an entirely different role from his usual hero-stuff, brilliantly plays a weakling who repays the kindness and generosity of his benefactor, Captain Lingard, with ruthless treachery. The role of Lingard, one of Conrad's favorites, is faultlessly played by Richardson. At the beginning of the fascinating story, Willems, branded as a thief in a Far East port, is taken by Captain Lingard to his own trading post in the islands reached by a secret river entrance. The post is in charge of Almayer, expertly played by Robert Morley, whose wife is Lingard's adopted daughter, Wendy Hiller. Antagonism springs up quickly between Almayer and Willems, and when the latter falls completely in love with an old chieftain's daughter, the exotic Aissa, played by Kerima, he is easy prey in selling the old Captain's secrets to the conniving native politician, George Coulouris in order to retain her love.

When Captain Lingard learns of Willems' vicious act of treachery, he decides upon a fitting and terrible punishment.

A program of four entertaining short treats, blending cartoon, melody, adventure and novelty, are announced for exhibition on the same program.

FIND WRECKED PLANE

VANCOUVER (CP)—The body of Capt. Bruce Wilson, 41, was found Tuesday pinned in the wreckage of a Queen Charlotte Airlines plane which crashed last Friday into a mountainside near Hadmoon Bay, 40 miles northwest of here. Wilson was the only person aboard when the two-engined Anson when it disappeared on a flight to Conor, Vancouver Island, from here,

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

BY FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 11, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Kind of colorful, challenging day you. Aries natives should enjoy, use for solid advancement. If by chance you get a slow start, don't be discouraged.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Today will be a boon to your intelligent mind, so work for gains. Others will be tempted to delay, argue, hamper progress. Don't heed such.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Be on guard, ready to act but not determined beyond reason, or moody stubbornness. But be firm, too, where you should.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Sort of day in which you will have to draw a close line between confidence and cockiness. Be frank but not cutting. Have tact with truthfulness.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Good planetary indication for you keen, awake Leoites. However, take extra care to avoid wrong choice in matters affecting important results.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Auspicious period for favored ideas connected with your work, professional activities. Discuss them well before deciding course.

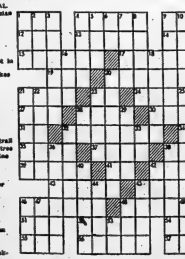
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Willfully tempting fortune or chance is foolhardy. Use Libra's good sense. Devote time to careful planning. Be calm always.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—May have to grant concessions, give way to more progressive ideas. Don't be adamant. Your original ideas will find listeners.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—On the brink of fine period. See that you are in on what's doing. Stay "in line," both in personal and business matters.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Prudent handling of affairs should bring satisfying returns. Don't be impressed by flowery talkers.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—If alert to whatever's afoot around you there should be some new success awaiting you soon. But check carefully before you make plunges.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—May have to ponder legal and property contracts until more thoroughly analyzed. Be careful between noon and 4 p.m. not to overforce issues. Must be firm about principles.

YOU BORN TODAY: Active, ambitious, clever but may be inclined at times to be gloomy, combative. Guard against giving way to ill temper, "moods". Be genuine, sincere and your innately cheerful self and others will like you. Pray always for guidance. Birthdate: His Holiness, Pope Leo X, patron of learning; Hector Berlioz, Fr. composer.

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

RAWDON

River Valley W.I. Holds Christmas Party

Rawdon—The Christmas meeting of River Valley Women's Institute was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Bob Philp, with 31 members, three visitors and seventeen children in attendance. Mrs. Edward Heasman opened the meeting with the usual exercises. Mrs. Ralph Utman presided at the piano throughout the service. Mrs. L. Donohoe gave a full financial report.

It was decided to allocate $100 to "Purchase chairs" and card tables. Mrs. Roy Irvine donated $5 to be used for prizes for a card party.

Thanks were read from Mrs. H. Morgan and the Hanna family also from Mrs. D. Donohoe.

Mrs. John Kane gave a detailed account of her work in connection with the first aid kit at the school.

Letter Read

Mrs. Percy Utman, Food Parcel secretary, has received a descriptive and interesting letter from Mrs. Mollie Mallard, Abbot's Leigh, Bristol, England, and this letter which was read gave the members a glimpse of the work there. Just recently a parcel of Jello powders was forwarded for their Christmas. Mrs. Mallard said while tea is now unrationed, the prices are very high.

The president extended thanks to Mr. Gilbert Finkle for repairing tables and chairs and Mrs. Harold Morgan gave her Blue Cross report.

The Christmas program was arranged by Mrs. Earl Morrow and several carols were interspersed between the other items, opening with "Silent Night."

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a humorous Christmas selection entitled "How Ma Saved a Few Cents Less Than $100."

Little Cheryl Utman sang "Frosty Snowman." The following children each gave a brief selection: Sharon Scott, Maria Heasman, Donnie Carr, Myles McDonnell, Jean Donohoe and Ross McIntosh. Mrs. John Seger read a humorous poem requesting the general public not to place pennies in the rural mail box.

Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh read a humorous poem and then a most appropriate selection entitled, "There will always be a Christmas as long as the middle aged folk go quietly on in the service of God."

Mrs. Earl Morrow read a timely paper dealing with "the advent season," which told the real meaning of Christmas when the Babe came to Bethlehem. This stressed the point of having children learn the joy of sharing with others and that a white gift does not mean that the giver receives another in return, but rather that this particular gift is for less fortunate persons.

Mrs. Morrow closed her program with "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear."

Christmas Pie

The Christmas pie was then served when a decorated tub was placed in the centre of the room and each child drew a gift as his name was called. Baby Donnie Donohoe headed the list and the children were delighted with coloring books, bells, harmonicas and other articles.

The roll call of members and visitors followed when each one plucked their gift from a beautifully decorated lighted Christmas tree. Gifts were varied, both useful and ornamental and all enjoyed a delightful half hour in this precincture.

All of the ladies furnished something for the tasty Christmas luncheon which was convened by Mrs. Percy Utman. The refreshments consisted of attractive sandwiches, cookies, tarts, celery, pickles, frulled jellos homemade candy, grapes and nuts topped off with a treat by the president, Mrs. Edward Heasman, of peppermint and chocolate patties.

Mrs. Alex Bell voiced thanks for hospitality, program, and extra treat.

The next meeting will be held on January 8, one week later owing to New Year's falling on a Thursday. The conveners will be Mrs. Ernest Carr and Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh with Mrs. Percy Utman as hostess.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!
TABLE TENNIS SHOTS

1 The Smash: Usually taken on the forehand, close to the table, intercept ball at top of its bounce and hit forward and downward with hard swing. Follow-through brings arm across body. Always keep eye on the ball.
3 The Drop Shot: Played close to the table, intercept ball forehand or backhand, just after it bounces on table, taking it with blade of bat slightly laid back. Stroke ball easily, laying it just over net in opponent's court. The shot must be controlled for effectiveness.
Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in table tennis as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

OUTBREAK OF EVER

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—An outbreak of a mild type of scarlet fever in the John Campbell school district has affected 30 children since mid-October, Dr. John Howie, medical officer of health, said Tuesday. He said it is not an epidemic although there has been a higher concentration of illness in the John Campbell school district than in any other area.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

So many things were going on around him now, that Curly Brown never knew from day to day what next was to expect. Yet he was not to be caught by surprise. For instance, there was the night when Hazel told him that Peter had been expelled from school for blacking the eye of a boy named Ferguson who lived beyond Foster Hill. According to the teacher's story told to the accompaniment of copious tears—she had caught Peter in the act and she dared not shield him.

"So, our boy's been fighting," he mused, "now I wonder where he got that! Surely not from his father's side of the family." At the moment Peter was purposely absenting himself in the stable.

"Curly Brown!" Hazel stamped her feet, cheeks flushed. "Don't sit there and make light of it! This is no laughing matter. I want you to give Peter a good talking-to!"

"Hazel," Curly said soberly, "boys will be boys and they'll fight, and they'll blacken each other's eyes. That's something that has been going on since the dawn of time. But since it's your wish, I will talk to Peter —and I'll tell him plenty."

But out of the experience of his own boyhood, Curly Brown knew he could not be very severe with Peter. After all, Peter might have been justified in doing what he did. He had seen the Ferguson boy and he was older than Peter, bigger and probably stronger. And if his own son could get the better of a lad that size . . .

"Well, Peter," he said, when he came into the stable and found his son playing lofty with a piece of rope, "I understand you've been fighting—that you've been expelled from school."

Peter's face reddened.

"Aw, darn!" he snapped, "Mother's been telling you. She tells you everything."

"Yes, I guess she does, Peter," Curly agreed, "but isn't that what mothers are for? Now what's the story?"

Curly hesitated before speaking.

"Well, dad, it was like this. Noddy Ferguson has been running on me for a long, long time, see! Trying to pick a fight, see! But when he slapped me, jumped on my feet, hurt me, I just lost my head, I guess, I just flew away, and he tried to hit me in the face—"

"Go on, Peter, go on!—what happened next?"

"Well, I did like you said, like what I saw you do with Bill Frost, I ducked, then I hit him in the side of the jaw with my left like this, and I drove my right into his face and the next thing I knew he was on his back-side, rubbing his eyes and crying, and then Miss Wood came around the corner of the school and told me to go home."

"That's that!" Curly summarized. Peter had done no wrong. Peter had shown that he had the makings of a good fighter; a lightweight perhaps, but never a heavy. Quick to learn and quick to act, he figured. But this must never be. The boy must be told that no matter how good he thought he was, he would most assuredly meet someone who was just that much better. And so he wrapped an arm around his son's waist and they sat down on the hay in a nearby stall.

"Peter," he said, "fighting is not for you. In this instance you did only what I would expect you to do, but don't let this initial success spoil you—run away with your common sense. If you do, you'll be going around hitting people just for the fun of it. I want you to promise me something. I want you to promise that never again will you lift your hand to anybody unless you have to. Then fight if you must, and put all you have into it.

You'll promise that, won't you, Peter?"

"Yes, dad, I will," Peter said. And insofar as the Depot and Hard Acres and the district was concerned, Peter kept that promise. But when he returned from the war some years later, Curly knew that the scars on his face, his cauliflower ears, all added up to what he had suspected from reading in the newspapers that "Soldier" Brown, champion of the army at his weight, had never forgotten his boxing lessons in the log stable at Hard Acres.

Next morning Curly was driving into the village when Bellhff Sweet came out of his house to stop him.

"One of these days, Curly," he said, "I'll be asking you to drive me out to the Lawson Settlement to serve some papers on your friend, Bill Frost. I've been ordered to seize his effects and sell 'em."

"Bill must be in a bad way financially," Curly observed.

"It's the booze, Curly. Booze is bad stuff if it's not handled right, and I'm not saying that as a temperance man, for I'm not. That big red nose of mine was not a presentation, I'd have you know."

"The wages of sin is debit," Curly mused and Sweet laughed.

"That's pretty good, Curly, that's pretty good! Read it somewhere or did you make it up?"

"My tongue slipped," Curly said truthfully, "but—look—what's this coming?"

The two men centred their eyes on the road to the west. A heavy horse hitched to a buggy was coming at a slow gallop. It reached them, and passed them. They recognized the driver as John McGrath, a Lawson Settlement farmer. The blooded figure he was holding on the seat was Peter Hayes, an old bachelor, a familiar figure in the village. The buggy continued to Dr. Baird's office, Dr. Baird came out to help McGrath to carry the injured man inside.

"Jump in, Aaron!" Curly said, "we may as well go down and see what's happened."

Workers, Police Clash at Louiseville, 5 Persons Injured

Quebec Textile Plant Has Been Strikebound 10 Months

LOUISEVILLE, Que. (CP) — At least five persons were injured, one seriously, when striking textile workers and police clashed today in battles marked by tear gas and bullets and reading of the Riot Act.

Twenty-five persons were reported arrested, all whisked away to undisclosed destinations in provincial police cars.

Two outbreaks occurred. The first came when 300 strikers and sympathizers, including 50 who came from Granby, marched to the plant of the Associated Textile of Canada, which for 10 months has been in effect 10 months.

The second, during which the more serious injuries were reported, broke out at the headquarters of the union, the Louiseville Textile Syndicate (CCCL). The headquarters are in the same building as the provincial police station.

Police cleaned out the union headquarters, and strikers were told the Riot Act had been proclaimed by civic authorities.

Scores of provincial police from Montreal and Quebec swarmed about this town of 2,500, and the situation was under control. The outbreaks still appeared tense. Most residents remained in their homes.

Reading of the riot act is a formality, a step to restore order and guard against mob violence and property damage.

It prohibits groups of more than 12 persons from gathering on streets or sidewalks. Thirty minutes after the act has been read anyone found on the street is liable to be arrested by police. Heavy prison terms are provided for violation of the act.

Mounting Tension

It was not immediately known how the trouble broke out but tension had been mounting in the industrial centre 15 miles northeast of Montreal.

The unorganized bus was dynamited Tuesday but it was not known whether this act was related to the strike.

There is no hospital and it was reported the injured were treated by doctors at the scene.

Approximately 900 employees of Associated Textiles of Canada, Ltd have been on strike for higher wages and improved working conditions for several months. They are members of the Louiseville Textile Syndicate (CCCL).

There was no immediate comment from union sources.

Damage Heavy

Heavy damage, estimated at $4,000, was caused when one bus was blown up. It was estimated that 300 windows in the plant were broken by the force of the blast. There were no injuries reported from the blast.

The riot act last was used in this province in 1946, when a strike at Asbestos erupted into bloody violence. Violence has been sporadic, cars and buses halted and the town virtually cut off from the outside world. Barricades of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and of Canada," and so on.

Other Commonwealth countries might make similar changes.

Any such alteration would have to be approved by the Parliament of the country concerned.

The alteration may be made in the Coronation service which is now being prepared. It is that the words "United Kingdom of Great Britain, Ireland the the Dominions thereto belonging" would be recast to omit the suggestion of "belonging."

Man and Woman Found Dead In Stalled Car

ST. CATHARINES-(CP)—A man and woman were found dead today in a stalled automobile, on a road about five miles southwest of St. Catharines.

The two, identified as Judson Findley, 46, St. Catharines and Mrs. Pearl Beckett, 50, Fenwick, apparently had been asphyxiated. A third occupant of the car, Harry Beckett, was brought to hospital here for treatment.

Police said the car is owned by Gene Robert of Niagara Falls, that the car's exhaust pipe became blocked and it shut down the vehicle backed into the bank of a ditch while being turned around.

South Koreans Cling Desperately To 'Little Hill'

By GEORGE McARTHUR

SEOUL (AP)—South Korean troops clung desperately to Little Nori Hill on the western front today as a severe cold snap cracked amid a screaming artillery duel.

Earlier, the Chinese Communists had captured Little Nori in the biggest assault of battle in a month —involving 1,400 Red troops—but the South Koreans stormed back to the slope in fierce counter-attacks despite a barrage of 2,000 Red shells.

Some 200 Allied planes hurled heavy blows at Red positions on the western front.

Reports from the front said the Communists wrested the eastern slope of nearby Big Nori Hill from the South Koreans, who were making the effort to straighten their lines. The Reds already held the north slope.

An estimated 3,000 rounds of Communist artillery and mortar fire pounded the South Koreans since the Red attacks jumped off. Front-line reports said Allied and Chinese big guns engaged in thunderous duel late Thursday.

On InsFai River

Both Big and Little Nori are located along the Imjin river.

The Chinese Reds hurled three main assaults in the area early Thursday, with the Nori heights the principal targets.

AP correspondent Milo Farcott reported from the western front that Recorded of Korea "would were digging in on Little Nori late today after troops had lost ground in bloody counter thrusts.

Allied tanks supported the ROK assault.

The bodies of 40 Chinese littered the battlefield. Sixty more Chinese were wounded, the South Koreans reported.

The Red push on the smaller slope apparently spilled over to Big Nori in the western, close-range fighting that raged before dawn.

Allied aircraft marauding behind Red lines reported destruction of 11 Red supply vehicles caught in the open, 13-28 buildings destroyed 75 others Wednesday night.

APPLY NAMED

DARWIN, Australia (CP)—Smashed by poor go on hundred station 200 miles south of here, has a reputation as a boxer. Recently a visiting cricketer's glove proved an attraction and with hooves flailing he smashed two holes in the fuselage.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: — Cooler air and a few light snow flurries in the extreme east today or Wednesday over most of Ontario this morning. Rain still continues in the extreme eastern regions along the leading edge of the cooler air which is now entering Quebec.

Skies will be much brighter today and Friday although as general clearing is expected.

A new storm centre is moving rapidly southeastward through North Dakota this morning and this will bring several hours of snow to the southwestern sections of Ontario during the early part of Friday. Elsewhere there will be a few very light snow flurries with temperatures in the low thirties.

ISRAELI SKIPPER BROUGHT ASHORE UNDER SECRECY

Said to Have Threatened To Scuttle His Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — A young Israeli skipper brought to shore from the ship he threatened to scuttle was hidden under strict secrecy wraps today by port officials who termed him "mentally ill."

Capt. Adam Graetz, 24-year-old skipper of the Abraham Graetz, was landed here from a tug which picked him off the freighter outside Halifax harbor at the request of the ship's owners and her agents here.

The landing ended one phase of the strange sea story but left another still unresolved: What had aboard the 5,686-ton ship from the time Graetz threatened to sink her until he was aboard the tug?

Wharfbouts of the freighter, named after the skipper's grandfather, were unknown today but she was ordered headed for Saint John, N. B.

Details Skimpy

Details of the entire story were skimpy and reporters trying to piece together an accurate account were hampered by a ban which everyone connected with it to talk.

Graetz's reported threats and actions as how Graetz was overpowered or otherwise convinced that he should not scuttle the ship, outward bound from New York to Haifa, Israel, with a cargo at Saint John and Halifax.

Officials in Tel Aviv reported radio traffic in which Graetz said he would sink the ship unless her owner would turn over Israeli cabinet.

"Either you appoint my father minister of communications or else I sink the ship," the newspaper Maariv quoted him as saying in his first message last week-end.

A communications ministry reply to the ship's radio officer said: "Disobey captain, follow orders first."

Word 'Canada' May Appear In Official Title

LONDON (CP) — The word "Canada" may be added to the "Queen's official title as a result of discussions among Commonwealth prime ministers.

It is understood delegates to the coronation Commonwealth conference have tentatively and informally agreed that different Commonwealth countries might adapt the Queen's title as it now stands to suit their individual needs.

Thus, while in the United Kingdom the Queen would be referred to as "Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other realms and territories, head of the Commonwealth," she could be called in Canada she might be "Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and of Canada," and so on.

Truman Rejects Suggestion Of Meeting With Eisenhower, MacArthur Over Korean War

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Truman today rejected suggestion that he hold a White House conference with Generals Eisenhower and MacArthur — and he blasted both of them.

Truman called President - elect Eisenhower's campaign announcement that he would go to Korea a piece of unwarranted meddling.

And he told his press conference Gen. Douglas MacArthur should have reported to him after he returned from Japan following MacArthur's ouster last year. Truman said that is what any decent man would have done.

Truman spoke up in response to questions arising from MacArthur's speech to the National Association of Manufacturers in New York last Friday, when he said that "there is a clear and definite solution" to the Korean conflict.

Eisenhower said during his campaign that he would go to Korea in his efforts to bring about a speedy and honorable end to the Korean war.

Earlier this week, Eisenhower sent a message to Republicans that he would be happy to meet with him to discuss any plans he might have for ending the Korean war.

Eisenhower sent his telegram to MacArthur from his headquarters which he is returning from the Korean trip he undertook to carry out his campaign pledge.

Truman then challenged MacArthur to tell him any ideas he may have for ending the war. He said it was MacArthur's duty.

And some newsmen suggested that Truman meet with both the president-elect and MacArthur to try to achieve a program for peace.

Truman came to his press conference obviously ready to do battle with the two generals. To dramatize the conference, he permitted still photographers and television and newsreel cameramen to make pictures before the actual questioning started.

The TV films were made for later showing. There was no live telecast of the conference.

Truman said he travelled more than 14,000 miles to see MacArthur at Wake Island. About all he got for that was a lot of misinformation.

Asked what this misinformation was, Truman said MacArthur told him at their historic meeting at Wake Island, Oct. 14, 1950.

1. The Chinese would not move into Korea.

2. It would be possible to send a division of the regular United States Army from Korea to Germany for occupation purposes to reinforce another division by January 1951.

3. MacArthur was sure the war was over.

MacArthur gave no details of any Korean peace plan in his speech to York speech last Friday. He did say it would not lead to unduly severe sacrifices.

The press conference came after Senator V. Watkins (Rep., Utah) had urged that Truman "get aside rancor" and confer with Eisenhower and MacArthur to a strategy meeting in Korea.

The Senator said he could not see that any good purpose would be served by such a conference, but he said either man would be welcome if he had something he wanted to discuss.

Then, referring to a statement Eisenhower made after completing his visit to Korea last week that he had no panacea or trick solution for ending the Korean war Truman said that was a quotation from Harry S. Truman (Truman's) campaign speeches.

Sumptuous Food, Monster Parade Mark Anniversary Of Mao's Ascent to Power

By Gerard Filion

October 1st. is the national holiday of the New Urn. It is called the day of liberation in Chinese. Last October 1st. was the third anniversary of the Communist rule. Delegates to the peace conference, therefore, were invited to take part in the celebrations. The show was well worth seeing. In fact it made both the peace congress worthwhile.

On the eve of the holiday there was a banquet for 2,000 in the hall of the Winter Palace where the meetings were taking place. Mao-tse-tung presided at the head table and proposed numerous toasts. Around him were his intimates and the guests of honor, mostly accredited diplomats from the People's Democracies.

The hall was jam-packed with representatives of all the provinces and all the associations in China. Delegates from national minorities were given good seats. In China there are more than 100 million people who are not Chinese. Some of the minorities, the Tibetans, the Turks, the Mongols and the Manchurians plus the 50-odd semi-barbarian tribes who live in the mountains where they have been driven by the Chinese over the course of the centuries. I met a chieftain of the Lolos, a friend of my sister's who spent 30 years as a missionary sister in the Sze-Tchouan region.

The tables were groaning with sumptuous food and with the magnificent wines of China. We drank an uncountable number of toasts to Mao-tse-tung, to the New China, to peace, to the People's Democracies and to many other things. It was extraordinary. There were no speeches. We had to get to bed early for the celebrations the following day.

A CITY HAS A HOLIDAY

The noise in the streets woke me up before five A.M. Groups of young people and workers were heading for the assembly point to get ready for the parade. From the windows of my room I could see the torches and the flags and I could hear the shouting and the songs.

It was 9:45 A.M. when we arrived at the grandstand reserved for foreigners. At 10 A.M., Mao-tse-tung appeared. Loudspeakers blared the national anthem and guns fired a salute. The parade started opposite the Winter Palace.

For more than an hour we watched a parade of foot soldiers, aviators, sailors, parachutists, cavalrymen, Mongols on ponies, motorized regiments, anti-aircraft batteries, artillery, motorized infantry, machine guns mounted on motor bikes, rapid-fire artillery, light and heavy tanks, bombers, fighters and light infantry.

Then the civilians took over. For more than two hours we watched half a million Chinese march past in fine form, 50 in a row. There was a tremendous profusion of portraits, photographs, banners, flags and torches. Marx, Lenin, Stalin, Engels, Mao-tse-tung, Chou-en-lai and Chou-Teh, repeated over and over again, reminded us of the parade's purpose. The young Chinese stayed in tune when they sang and the girls held bouquets of flowers in their arms. Others released hundreds of doves in front of the main grandstand. The doves had red ribbons attached to their tail feathers.

A regiment of little Chinese girls passed by with clenched fists flaced. A whole corps of cymbals and Chinese drums, nearly 2,000 in all, raised such a row that the atmosphere became positively hysterical.

GOVT. WINS CONFIDENCE VOTE ON HEALTH PLAN

CCF Motion to Have Plan, Defeated 185-21

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government has won its first vote of confidence in the new session of Parliament. The issue: national health insurance.

The Commons, in the first vote of the session which began Nov. 20, Wednesday defeated by a vote of 185 to 21 a CCF motion of nonconfidence in the government.

The motion accused the Liberals for "failure" to establish health insurance or to implement proposals for fiscal and financial reform set out at the federal-provincial conference of 1945. Only the CCF and Social Credit parties voted for the motion.

First Vote in Debate

The vote was the first break in the 4-day-old debate on the government's policy-setting speech from the throne. But the debate may go on for some time yet.

Tomorrow (Friday) the Social Credit party introduced another want-of-confidence motion. Moved by John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge), it charged the government "failed" to sponsor a realistic financial policy guaranteeing adequate markets and a just share of the country's wealth to every Canadian.

The Social Credit motion opened a new opportunity for speakers in the debate in the House to talk on any subject they wish.

Tuesday's CCF motion said in part that the government's Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence. This criticizes the government for "inaction and extravagance, overtaxation and for "failure" to call a federal-provincial conference on health insurance."

The conference will vote later on these motions.

Urged to Reconsider

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, again urged the government to reconsider its policy on television. Only privately owned stations will not be considered for television licences, he said, by the CBC.

Mr. Drew said his party wants health insurance, but it should be given most of the tax revenues and the municipalities at present were in no position to handle the financial obligations a national health plan would involve. He appealed for the government to let his party's motion for a new health insurance conference to include the medical profession.

Woman Given Year

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Leona Phillipon of suburban Riverside Wednesday was sentenced to one year and two Sarnia men were given two years suspended sentences for administering drugs in an attempt to procure a miscarriage.

John A. Phillipon, a brother of the woman, and Jack Farentaus were arrested in Sarnia after a complaint was laid before the father of an 18-year-old Windsor girl.

Evidence was that Farentaus, the girl's boy friend, and Phillipon had taken her to Leona Phillipon who administered the drugs.

Magistrate J. Arthur Hanrahan said the actions of the two men were "unspeakable" by way of discount on volume purchases and distribution of effective laws because legislation which will prevent stores using milk as a sales-builder for other products.

Hamilton Police Holding Two Men In Buffalo Murder

Canadians Are Suspects In Jeweller's Holdup-Killing

HAMILTON (CP) — Two men were under arrest here today charged with murder in the holdup of a Buffalo, N. Y. jeweller.

Police identified them as Maurice O'Dell, 27, of Hamilton, and Walter Griffins, 26, formerly of Toronto. A third man is sought in the case.

O'Dell and Griffins will be held for extradition to the United States. O'Dell has indicated he will fight extradition.

The two men were remanded one week by Magistrate Hunter W. Hopkins this morning.

The arrests followed the arrival here of Police Commissioner Michael C. Noeppel of Buffalo. He was accompanied by Lieut. Harry Klenk, chief of Buffalo's homicide squad and Detective William T. Fitzgibbon.

Positively Connected Claim

Noeppel was quoted earlier as saying "We've got two of the three men positively connected with the murder and robbery" of Donald Mack, 59, Buffalo jeweller.

Hamilton police accompanied the three United States officers in a raid last night on a residence where they found O'Dell in bed. Griffins was arrested without resistance. Another raid early today on the Griffins' home also led to a surrender without a fight.

Police here said they believed O'Dell and Griffins intended to Hamilton last night with another man in a car.

Estimates of diamonds stolen from Hurd's shop after he was killed by a revolver bullet ranged from $10,000 to more than $40,000. It was not known immediately whether any of the loot was recovered.

The slain jeweller was born in Launceston, Ont., and lived there and in nearby Kingston until he was about 15 years old. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hurd, now live in Buffalo.

Delivery of Milk, Bread by Same Man Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Delivery of milk and bread by the same man is recommended by an American sales expert as a means of cutting costs for the consumer.

Dr. Paul Nystrom of Cincinnati, Ohio, told the Ontario Milk Distributors Association Wednesday that a survey of American housewives indicated that 80 per cent of them would prefer to have a single agent handling both products. Joint delivery has been tried in many United States centres.

Mr. Nystrom, executive secretary of the National Dairy Council, said competition from other beverages and packaged foods now threatens not only the dairy industry but its consumer health.

He urged increased efficiency and productivity on the part of dairies, including such devices as provision for monetary incentives for employees to be paid by the number of calls made.

He said although no abortion had resulted, the man was liable to life imprisonment for the offence.

King Gustaf Adolf Distributes 1952 Nobel Prizes

STOCKHOLM (AP)—King Gustaf Adolf has distributed the 1952 nobel prizes.

Three scientists from the United States and the British Isles and a French novelist received the coveted awards and a royal handshake in Stockholm's concert hall Wednesday night.

Gold medals, diplomas and cheques totalling more than 654,000 kroner (about $132,000) were shared in this 49th festival of the Nobel Foundation by the winners in four fields:

Medicine—Dr. Selman A. Waksman, 64, born in Russia, American scientist of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N.J., named for his work in discovery of streptomycin as a weapon against tuberculosis.

Physics—Dr. Felix Bloch, 47, a Swiss-born professor of Stanford University, and Edward M. Purcell, 40, of Harvard University, named jointly for their independent development of a new method of measuring magnetic fields in atomic nuclei.

Chemistry—Dr. Archer Martin, 41, of the National Institute for Medical Research, London, and Dr. Richard Synge, 38, of the Rowett Research Institute, Aberdeen, Scotland, named jointly for their discovery of partition chromatography, a new method for separating compounds.

Literature—Francois Mauriac, 67 French Catholic author of such books as "Thirst for Happiness" and "The Lover and the Unloved" who was honored for his "penetrating psychology and artistic intensity with which he, in the form of his novels, has interpreted the drama of human life."

Reward Posted

WELLAND (CP)—A $200 reward has been posted for information leading to the arrest of Harry Jallep, 25, of Niagara Falls, Ont., in connection with the robbery of the Caisse Populaire (Credit Union) here Dec. 3. Some $7,000 was stolen.

U.S., Political Security Screening For Crews of All Foreign Ships

WASHINGTON (CP) — Crew members of Canadian, British and other foreign ships must be cleared by United States security before they may step ashore in United States ports, a spokesmen for the U. S. justice department said today.

The U. S. government has started work on a new immigration policy under which foreign sailors docking here must answer questions about their political leanings before they may go ashore.

Crew members of all foreign vessels come under the new law.

A department spokesman said in reply to an inquiry that crew members of Canadian vessels must also be cleared. He said, though, that there is no intention of sending United States investigators to quiz Canadian sailors during voyages — a system which will be used with foreign seamen, he added.

The Walters-McCarran immigration law, passed over President Truman's veto, authorizes the screening of foreign seamen.

A Canadian spokesman said Wednesday that Great Lakes seamen have for some time been screened for security loyalty by Canada and the U. S.

HOWARD FRALICK NAMED PRESIDENT OF RADIO CLUB

Members of the Quinte Amateur Radio Club held their monthly meeting Wednesday evening at the RCMP depot on South Pinnacle Street. After considerable discussion a constitution was adopted and the club will formulate with the American Radio Relay League.

Howard Fralick was named president of the club for the new year with Albert Bakyta as vice-president; Harry Pitt as secretary and Miss Williams as treasurer. A film on security measures will be shown through the courtesy of the RCAF at Trenton.

CARELESS DRIVING CHARGE IS LAID AFTER COLLISION

Mrs. Mabel Hart, R. R. 2 Belleville, reported suffering abrasions to her knee and forehead when the car which she was driving was in collision with another vehicle at William and Bridge Streets.

Mrs. Hart was westbound on Bridge when a truck driven by James A. Cranston, Shannonville, was southbound on William. Police said Cranston stopped for the "stop" street, entered the intersection where his truck collided with the Hart vehicle. The left side of the Hart car was badly damaged and it was forced to the curb where it struck and broke a hydro pole. Damages to the Hart car amounted to over $500. Cranston has been charged with careless driving.

LITTLE GIRL RUNS IN FRONT OF CAR

Knocked to the pavement as she darted out from the curb in front of a passing car, five-year-old Brenda Joyce Cole, 152A Station street, was injured yesterday. Two stitches were required to close a cut on her head and the little girl suffered abrasions to both knees. Police said the car, driven by Marion Hamilton, of Halloran Bros., Cannifton Road, was proceeding up Station street when the little girl darted out in front of his car.

VANDAL USES AX ON DECORATIVE TREE

Somehow, the evergreen trees wred to standards along Front street outshine the appearance of the city. They lend to it the impression of Christmas even though its snow is lacking. However, there appears to be a character who doesn't appreciate the trees.

Some one took an ax and chopped one of these trees down, at least as "down" as they may be chopped. The marks of the tool can be found on the wood of the severed tree. The upper half of the tree still stands the right, being tied to the lamp post.

Obituary

ITHEL PAYNE (Stirling)

Ithel Payne of Stirling died at his home on Wednesday following a 10 month illness. He was in his 58th year.

Born at Brighton, he was the son of the late George Payne and Mary Graham. A resident of the locality for the past five years, he had previously resided in Tweed, where he lived for 25 years.

Mr. Payne was predeceased by his wife, Lela Fisher and is survived by four brothers, James of Camrose, Alberta; Richard and William of Edmonton, Alberta, and Fred of Trenton.

A retired farmer, Mr. Payne was a member of the United Church.

A funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

ARTHUR CROSSLEY

The funeral of Arthur Crossley, 31 Emily Street, Belleville, took place yesterday from the chapel of the Belleville Funeral Home.

Canon J. R. Croegran, rector of Christ Church, officiated at the service in the chapel and at the committal service.

The pall-bearers were Ross Cummings, Thomas Burley, Clayton Cummings, Allan Brand, Lloyd Morris and William Pepper.

Interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

MRS. MARGARET HILL (Shannonville)

Mrs. Margaret Hill of Shannonville, 'ill for some time, died at her home on Thursday. She was in her 71st year.

Born on the Tyendinaga Reserve and a life-long resident of the area, the deceased was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Brant. She was a member of All Saints Anglican Church.

Mrs. Hill is predeceased by her husband, Joseph Hill, and is survived by two sons, Wilson of Mrs. Frank (Josfina) Martin of Belleville; and Mrs. Charles (Mabel) Wilson of Fruitland, Ontario. Also surviving are two sons, William and George Brant of Belleville and Fruitland respectively. There are four grandchildren living as well.

A funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

PETER JOSEPH HART

The funeral of Peter Joseph Hart, 11-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hart, Point Anne, was held from the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home on Tuesday morning. The committal prayers at the graveside in St. James Cemetery were said by Rev. A. Brown.

The bearers were Edward Smith, Terry Smith, David Roseberry and Louis Roseberry.

SUSPENDED ONE DAY

PICKERING (CP)—Sgt. Fred White is to return to duty with the Pickering township police department today after a one-day suspension by Chief Jack Ellis on Wednesday night, Neither Sgt. White nor Police Chief Lockhart Trinnell will comment, but it is believed a disagreement between them has been solved.

Switchboard Blaze of Lights As Santa Answers 160 Calls From Children of the City

Santa Claus' vocal chords got a thorough workout last night, and it is doubtful if he felt any old self could whesze say reasonable facsimile of his traditional "Ho, ho, ho" this morning.

He dropped in at the city hall last night to make his first appearance to keep the telephone dates with the city kiddies.

And by the time the hour and a half session was completed, Old Saint Nick only was threatened with laryngitis, but telephone operators were arm-weary and eye-misty from gazing at a switchboard that was lighted up like a Christmas tree for the entire thirty minutes, and for at least twenty minutes overtime.

But he'll be back tonight and every night until December 20th.

But he reminds the children, that he will not be on hand after 9 p.m. and if not in bed at that time. Also long distance calls will not be accepted until next week, when, it is expected that the "rush" of city callers will be somewhat relieved.

For it seems telephone operators everywhere in both Trenton and Stirling and other outside points as anxious youngsters from the outlying district attempted to get in touch with the old fellow.

Recreational director Lloyd "Red" Doran estimated that nearly 160 calls were received and nearly twice that number were told the line was busy.

The calls came in at a steady stream starting on the dot at six-thirty. A Bell telephone official said the switchboard in the exchange was a blaze of light as calls poured in from all parts of the city.

Just before he left, Santa seized a favor of the youngsters who were fortunate enough to contact him last night. "Please, kiddies," he said, "do not call again if I have spoken to you once. There are a lot of little fellows and girls who want to speak with me, and if you call again, it will deprive some youngster of the privilege."

"I'll be back again tonight and every night except Sunday until December 20th. But remember, please do not call before seven o'clock because by that time I shall be miles away. And you little kiddies don't forget your prayers."

One of Accused Released on Bail Is Re-arrested

Released on bail of $20,000 following committal on charges of breaking and entering and theft and of being in possession of stolen goods, Walter Johnston, 36, of Toronto, yesterday was re-arrested before he could reach the street.

Johnston faces the above charges in connection with Mickey Mettunita, 40, of Suiton, and Robert Knudsen, 23, of Toronto. The trio were arrested on Lindsay after a break-in at the Trinidad Leaseholds office here on Nov. 17.

Police said that Johnston had been on bail of $5,000 from Toronto when he was charged in connection with the Belleville break-in.

Knudsen was released on $10,000 bail following committal on two charges here last week but Metzunita is still in custody, his bail of $20,000 not having been met.

News of Trenton Parts of Weather Balloon From States Found

TRENTON — (Special) — Remnants of a United States Government "radio-sonde" weather balloon were discovered yesterday in a field between second and third concessions of Sidney township.

Farmer brothers, Arnold and Everett Harry, who reside in the district, noticed the object. What was a parachute in a field as they were returning from a neighborhood pea-shooter.

Strips of rubber, presumably from the balloon were attached to the parachute. Radio equipment and other scientific devices were intact. Tags on the equipment revealed the balloon was one of those which are released daily by the United States government at various points across the country. This one was released at Buffalo, New York.

Meterological officials at the RCAF Station, Trenton, said the balloons are released daily and are used for recording temperatures, moisture and the atmosphere and atmospheric pressures at heights ranging up to 50,000 feet. Even they reach that point, the balloons burst, and fall to earth.

The equipment also registers windspeed at various levels.

The equipment and mechanical gadgets were forwarded today to officials at the Buffalo Air Port in accordance with instructions on a tag attached to the balloon, by the Harry brothers.

GETS SIX MONTHS

BRANTFORD (CP)—Leon M. Healey, 30, of Windsor Wednesday was sentenced to six months for stealing a truck and for driving while intoxicated. He was fined another $100 or 30 days for leaving the scene of an accident. Evidence was that the truck Healey was driving struck a bicyclist and damaged the bike several hundred yards.

District Foremen Elect 'Interim' Committee

Thirty foremen and supervisors from nine of the major industries in the Belleville area recently attended a second organizational meeting of the Community Foremen's Club, at the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Lloyd Skeaff, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. explained the purpose and program and outlined the duties and functions of a Community Foremen's Club. Mr. H. S. Jones and Mr. R. W. Harden explained in detail the benefits to the community, industry and to foremen and supervisors which are gained by the existence of such a group.

In outlining the steps necessary to organize the club, Mr. Skeaff stressed the fact that while the financial backing of management is necessary, a Community Foremen's Club must have the full support and acceptance of management and the majority of the major industries have indicated that they are in favor of a club in the area" stated Mr. Skeaff, "However, that does not mean that the management will take an active part in the organization of it, nor should it do so. Since it is a club for foremen and men on comparable supervisory level, it must be organized and run by those men in meeting. It should be further understood that this is not a Y.M.C.A. sponsored project, but the Belleville Y is anxious to co-operate and assist you in any way possible."

Following a discussion period, an interim steering committee of six men were elected. The committee is composed of Mr. R. W. Harden (Bakelite Co.), H. S. Jones (Northern Electric), John Hart (Canada Cement), Maurice Button (C.N.R.), Maurice Bradden (Avon Jewellery) and S. G. Reynolds (H. E.P.C.) This group was charged with organizing a dinner meeting in January designed to illustrate the type of program common to a Community Foremen's Club.

The remaining 24 men present formally accepted the responsibility of acting as "Contact" men in their respective companies. Their task is to invite many additional members as possible and to determine how many will attend the January dinner meeting.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils continued to gain in early afternoon stock market trading today but most other sections were weak.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 827,000 shares.

Western oil gains outnumbered losses more than three to one as Cal. and Ed., Canadian Atlantic, Home, Calmont and Kroy traded higher. Canada Southern, Central Explorers and Pacific slipped.

Ascot led the declins in base metals, trading 34,000 shares for the loss of four cents. Nesbitt-Labine also slipped in active trading. Western Tungsten added pennies and Ankeno gained 29 cents at the end of the third hour.

Senior golds held firm but junior producers continued weak as East Malartic and Hallnor slipped. Prospects slipped although Gunnar added pennies in active trading. Holding companies weakened.

Papers and utilities led the industrials advance and foods also showed strength. Refining oils and banks slipped.

ASK CIGARET PRICE CUT

TILLSONBURG (CP) — District tobacco growers will meet here Dec. 12 to ask the federal government to reduce the price of cigarets from 39 to 30 cents for 20. Growers claim a reduction in the current tax of more than 22 cents a package will not reduce the government's revenue.

Santa Will Visit Younger Children In City Schools

The children of the kindergartens and grades one, two and three in the seven grade schools scattered throughout the city, are going to have a white bearded, red-coated visitor with a hearty laugh drop into their class rooms Friday afternoon. This jolly individual who is in the habit of making personal appearances around this time of year, will carry across his shoulders a pack of gifts to be distributed in the schools to the children of the grades mentioned. Following his visit, the gentleman, who by the way, is Santa Claus, will parade along Front Street at 4:00 p.m. on the same day so that the children who do not go to school may have an opportunity to see him.

All this planning, including the evergreen trees set out along some of the city's major thoroughfares and the colored lights strung across several intersections, is a product of the local Retail Merchants' Committee, headed by H. G. Farrow in an effort to prepare the city for the Yuletide.

Guest Artist Will Assist Lecturer

Guest artist at the Friday evening lecture by Mrs. Robert Lee Morford on "The Jew Spirit in Music and Art" will be Vera Gullanoff, (Princess of the Piano,) noted radio and recording artist, known throughout Canada and the United States and on B.B.C. London broadcasts as "Canada's Melody Girl." As guest of the Belleville Baha'i community, Miss Gullanoff will assist the lecturer with musical offerings expressing the trends in the music of tomorrow. William G. Jones, local pianist, will contribute to the program.

On exhibit at this time will be a collection of paintings by Belleville artists with illustrations of art appreciation by Mrs. Moffett.

This concert evening at the Y is presented by the Bahai of the city as a community service without fee or collection.

Y.M.C.A. Will Sponsor Public Speaking Course

Plans were formulated at last night's meeting of the program committee of the Y. M. C. A. to sponsor a twelve-week course in public speaking. The decision of the committee arose out of the conviction that there are many persons in the community and surrounding district who want to improve their speaking ability and develop self confidence amongst a group of friends or strangers.

Classes will be conducted weekly every Thursday evening for twelve consecutive weeks. The course will be arranged so as to allow the maximum amount of time for participation and a minimum of formal lecturing.

Starting date of the course will be announced in the near future, when a meeting space has been arranged. Similarly the fees will be determined after the program committee has studied the costs involved in preparing the mimeographed material for each participant and other expenses incidental to conducting the course.

Christmas Seal Campaign Well Under Way

Canada's 26th nation-wide Christmas seal campaign, to obtain funds for tuberculosis prevention, is well under way. From the outposts of Newfoundland to the inlets of Vancouver Island people are opening letters and discovering sheets of Christmas Seals, which this year, feature the double-barred cross, emblem for 50 years of tuberculosis workers the world over. Locally, Norm Garbutt, chairman of the Hastings County Tuberculosis and Health Association, reports the sales in this are progressing favorably for this time of year.

There is still a big job to be done in which everyone who opens the Christmas seal letter can share. More than 3,400 Canadians die of tuberculosis every year and another 30,000 are ill. Preventing that waste is a big job, but if it is attacked in the spirit of those who choose the double-barred cross for a symbol, the 100th anniversary should see tuberculosis beaten, or at least on the way out.

To accomplish the work of TB prevention and TB healing, it is like everything else, the main requirement is money. Money is needed to fight the onslaught, the treatment and the rehabilitation, and this money is obtained through public donations, through the medium of the Christmas seals. Norman Garbutt, chairman of the campaign, urges everyone to support this campaign to their utmost and to place that cheque in the mail today.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police yesterday were asked to be on the lookout for a suspected shoplifter who was believed to have stolen several articles at a local variety store.

A description of the man was given police but they were unable to locate anyone answering to his description.

A broken window was reported at the Regent Gasoline station and also at 74 Cedar street, but no entry to the service station or to the house was believed effected.

Officer of Trust Company Is Moved to City

The Victoria and Grey Trust Company announces the transfer of Keith M. Day from its Owen Sound office to its Belleville office, where he will assume the duties of Trust Officer. Mr. Day has had ten years' experience in estates administration.

Since the opening of the Belleville office, slightly over three years ago, the estates department has grown steadily and the company is pleased to place at the disposal of their clients in this area a man of Mr. Day's experience. Mr. Day is married and since coming to Belleville has purchased a home in the city.

Mrs. Clayton Price Wins Election By One Vote

Mr. Clayton Price, clerk of Dungannon township in North Hastings, is no longer 'on the spot' His wife, Dorothy, is now a member of the township area public school board without him having to cast the deciding vote.

A week ago at the municipal election the clerk's wife and Donald Littlepoud were tied for the second position on the school board with 108 votes each. Two ballots, declared spoiled by returning officer, were thrown out.

A recount was ordered by County Judge J. C. Anderson and today the judge held the recount. The vote was still tied but one of the ballots declared spoiled was allowed by Judge Anderson and Mrs. Price won the position on the school board by this vote.

According to election regulations had the vote still remained tied after the recount the clerk would have had to cast the deciding vote either for his wife or for Mr. Littlepoud.

TO SETTLE UNPAID BILL

KITCHENER (CP)—A $4,000 unpaid bill for fees claimed owing the crown attorney's department will be settled by the city Monday night "one way or another," Mayor Bruce Weber said Wednesday. The fees cover liquor cases and summary convictions handled by Crown Attorney Harold Daudman who went on strike 10 days ago until the bill was paid. Police Chief John Patrick has acted as public prosecutor since then.

THE DON JAIL REPORT

It is not to be gainsaid that in Canadian public life royal commissions of inquiry have become notorious as symbols of futility. At one time or another over the years, just about every aspect of our national life has come under the searching light of investigation. But recently, the findings and recommendations of the commissions given more than scant attention by the authorities who had ordered them earlier, with, in most cases, much political flourish and fanfare. Usually they are promptly consigned to a pigeon-hole and forgotten.

No such fate, however, is likely for the report of Judge Macdonnell, who was appointed as a one-man commission to investigate conditions at the Don Jail in Toronto following the sensational escape of the Boyd gang in September. His report was released on Wednesday.

Before the public had had a chance to read the judge's findings, Reforms Minister Foote had broken into print with a statement to the effect that the learned commissioner didn't know what he was talking about in placing the blame for the jail break on Governor Brand.

On other findings and recommendations of the report Mr. Foote was apparently in more agreement with Judge Macdonnell, but he made it clear that in his opinion it fell short of the scope of investigation contemplated. At least we must presume that is so in view of his announcement that there should be an immediate inquiry into the whole jail set-up.

For all that the Reforms Minister feels that "Brand is no more to blame than I am," and that he is the one who should decide whether the governorship is to be replaced, it seems to us that Mr. Foote's difference of opinion with the commissioner might have been expressed more discreetly and with more becoming courtesy.

After all Judge Macdonnell did not recommend that Governor Brand be fired. He stressed that the governor did not have adequate staff but he pointed out that if the instructions which had been issued by Col. Hedly Basher, deputy minister of reforms institutions, were to be carried out the escape of the Boyd gang would have not been possible. His view was that although the Governor had tried to do the best he could under the circumstances, it was his duty to keep the four prisoners under constant supervision "must rest on his shoulders."

That also adds up to a lot of common sense. Boyd's known reputation as a jail-breaker of unusual audacity and ingenuity should have suggested to any prison official that a constant guard would be a minimum of protection against the possibility of escape. And when we recall that even though two of the gang faced murder charges the four of them were permitted the extraordinary liberty of spending their days in the same cell block in one cell, it would appear that laxity in supervision to this degree could hardly be the fault of alternately turnkeys on duty. These duties were honestly performed as they were trained with less close supervision than is directed to the minor, day-to-day law-breakers in custody.

So there would seem to be no question but that the chief executive officer of the jail it would be interesting to know just what the governor's responsibilities might be.

Without recommending the governor's dismissal, Judge Macdonnell made it clear that he does not feel Mr. Brand possesses the executive ability for the job. And Mr. Foote appears to take the attitude that in not absolving the governor completely the royal commissioner has cast some personal reflection upon the Reforms Minister. Certainly he indicates as much when he insists that the governor was "in no way responsible for the jail break."

Perhaps Judge Macdonnell was being consciously courteous and considerate in not exploring that aspect of the Don Jail situation.

THE "NEIGHS" HAVE IT

Lady Wonder, the wondrous and incredible "talking" horse of Richmond, Virginia, has a lot of people wondering.

Although Lady just broke into the news with a splash this week which must be the envy of even Kentucky's equine aristocracy, she has a nine-day wonder. She has been on excellent speaking terms with Virginians for years.

Only recently, however, was it learned that she had played the role of a "private eye," or consulting "shamus", to the State of Massachusetts and provided the tip which led to the discovery of the body of a four-year-old child missing for a week in Richmond. Confronted with the fact, the State Attorney confessed that the whole thing had been kept quiet because he and his associates did not enjoy the thought of being branded as "crazy."

But the story finally broke, and it really became page one news when an Associated Press reporter went to Richmond to see for himself the incredible equine but nevertheless convinced that Lady Wonder was a genuine phenomena. This opinion is also held by some prominent psychologists who have also put her to the "talking" test.

In the face of the apparent validity of this evidence, we too, were almost convinced. When the AP man reported that Lady had spelled out his name, his birthplace and the exact dollars and cents of his weekly salary, that had all the marks of horse sense to us.

Then the conclusion of the interview went like this:

"I asked most of what I like to be a human."

"Yes," came the answer.

Up to that point we were prepared to go along with our incredulous human cousins. But we balk you see, talking horse or not — does that make horse sense to you?

THE "MILLY-BOX"

Carolling Yorkshire children still carry a "milly box", lined with sugar and oranges and containing two small figures. This custom dates back to ancient times when figures of Our Lady and the Holy Child were carried in procession by carol-singers in the Northern Counties of England. The word "milly" is a corruption of My Lady. In some parts of Yorkshire the box is called a "bessel cup" and the children "go-a-wassailing."

California normally produces more citrus fruits and fresh vegetables than any other state in the U.S.

The Virgin Islands in the Panama Canal zone were acquired by the United States from Denmark in 1917.

TATTLE-TALE

Who is the tattle-tale round here?
Unless somebody tells him so,
And whispers in old Santa's ear
What I've been bad, how does he know?
When sister rings the neighbor's bell
And doesn't wait, but runs away,
If I come home to you and tell,
"Don't be a tattle-tale," you say.

Somebody's telling tales of me
Or if to bed I'm slow to go
You say that sassy I will be
Since Santa Claus will surely know.

And if I have a tantrum spell,
Like that which yesterday I had,
Unless somebody wrote to tell
How could he know that I've been bad?

I don't believe it is my Ma.
She's always sticking up for me.
And I am very sure my Pa
A tattle-tale would never be.
But some one here is telling tales
I'm sure of that cor Ma and Dad
Say wise old Santa never fails
To know when little boys are bad.

'On Little Cat Feet'

(Montreal Gazette)

Fog creeps "on little cat feet" wrote Sandburg. Houses, streets, whole landscapes disappear in the silent, formless mist. Sounds muffle sound as well as sight and clothe the world in gray shroud. There is something eerie, other-worldly, softly evil about fog. An innocent pedestrian suddenly takes shape where nothing was before—like a demon appearing in a cloud of smoke.

It is not only romantic imaginative writers who see in fog connotations. Under its dark cloak, criminals can forge undetected and escape sightlessly, soundlessly.

Said a London bobbie this week: "I'm afraid we shall find some bodies floating around the docks when this lot lifts."

There has been no report of how many bodies have turned up, or how many are missing, but the list of unusual burglaries carried out in the days of darkness is a long one. Police cars, ambulances and fire-reels were immobilized. In emergency cases, they could go only a few yards on footpace, behind walking guides carrying flaming torches.

The full story of London's travail this week is still to be told. But it is certain that the world's largest city living for four days under a pall of fog can exerts a fascination on the mind. How easy it becomes to understand why Charles Dickens worshipped the sun!

As in London so in the whole world. London knows the powers of this evil spirit. Edgar Allen Poe, Little wonder its novelists have used it so extensively. More than a few detectives have had their fog which sheltering Sherlock Holmes and his underworld. They appeared out of it, they disappeared into it.

It is safe to believe that Holmes was about in London's eerie days this week, his presence was not reported, of course, but what of the constable who feared what might be lurking in the docks?

We can't take asked him his name. It could be—in the fog.

Mistake In Address

(Winnipeg Free Press)

Instead of worrying the School Board about Charles Dickens being anti-Semitic, why does not Communist Alderman Jacobs file his complaints to Moscow? Russia has now added the weapon of anti-Semitism to its armory of persecution and is engaged at the moment in spreading murders among the Jews in the puppet state of Czechoslovakia and in familiar Jewish race is a whole and, in general, showing that communism is closely allied to racial and religious persecution.

His Light Still Glows

(Christian Science Monitor)

Even great ideas require the warmth and wisdom of devoted men to bring them to fruition. Cecil Rhodes' vision of scholarships to build better understanding among the English-speaking peoples could not have fulfilled its promise without the splendid men who carried it into operation. Not least among these was Sir Francis James Wylie, first and second father as financial backer, sage, counselor and discerning friend. Rhodes was the tedious negotiation required from an admittance for one of his charges to Oxford or college or quick action to ease a boys' homesickness or the lack of shirt studs at the dinner table, but the resources of Wylie's mind and sympathy are always equal to the problem.

He and his gracious American wife made their home a haven not as hospitality, but as "a true parents' affection, theirs' was enduring; it did not cease when Rhodes' scholars went down" from Oxford. At least the guiding hand and influence reached over the globe received not mere formal reports or birthday cards, but personal, newsy handwritten notes from the Wylies. These they frequently attach the Rhodes idea that men can be loyal to their country and friendly to each will never be able to destroy that idea, or quench the light cast on it by lives that so well exemplify brotherhood.

Refuge In Turkey

(Winnipeg Free Press)

The first of 34,000 Russian and Kazak refugees recently arrived in Istanbul. In 1936 the semi-autonomous province of Sinkiang was made a state of the U.S.S.R. and, persecuted by the Communists, several thousand Kazaks, fiercly independent nomads of the Steppes, fled in Russian Turkestan in pathetic surroundings. Their number is now in fighting both the Russian and the Chinese Communists. They found a temporary refuge in Tibet, but the conquest of Tibet by the Peking forces drove them with their herds of sheep which became scattered through India, Pakistan, Persia and Kurdistan.

Now the Turkish government-is taking steps to settle the Kazaks in Asia Turkey and the refugees hope to be reunited in peace once more.

This is the first time that the Kazaks have come westward. In the thirteenth century they joined up with Genghis Khan's "Golden Hordes" which, among other things were instrumental in subjugating the Russian princes.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SO YOU ARE MISUNDERSTOOD?

Misunderstood? Of course you are. Most of us experience just this. We don't even understand ourself a great deal of the time. That shouldn't worry us, however. The most perfect man who ever lived was misunderstood — and later on crucified.

Parents and their children do not understand them and children say parents don't understand them. There is a great deal of truth on both sides, but it has always been this way and always will be. The best that any of us can do is so meet on as many common grounds as possible — trying to be fair, just and tolerant of others.

We owe to everyone, with whom we come in contact, an honest hearing, and then in kindly manner, to leave a seed behind which, when planted in the heart, may later give spiritual nourishment to that one. We never know how far, or deep, our influence may take its way. It is enough to have left something treasurable behind.

Most of us misunderstand more than we should, for if we were we would all be in the same boat! The greater you are in character the more apt you are to be misunderstood. The big man with the big ways is misjudged by the little snappers at his heels, is misunderstood, but it makes no difference. The truth about it is he is a concern of us, if we are misunderstood behind which, when planted in the heart, may later give spiritual nourishment to that

EVERYTHING and EVERYWHERE

"In everything by prayer and thanksgiving let your supplication be made known unto God."

"In everything" — not just a few things or in moments of great crisis or when the earth starts to quake or the torrential floods start rolling down the gulch. These are times that will drive any man to his knees. It is no sign of piety that a man begins to pray when circumstances have pressed a gun against his temple. True dedication to God is characterized by continual prayer. We must pray at all times and about all things.

There is something very striking about that statement: "in all things." It means in the midst of all things. Praying in the sanctuary is very acceptable to God and is proper and necessary but the closed door of daily devotion. But the prayer that we utter as we walk by the side of the torrent it ever so humble is a prayer that God will surely be moved by. Prayer is communion, prayer also is petition. We ask in order that we may get something.

We are to pray in the midst of everything and for everything —firm in our belief and never wavering.

"In everything by prayer and thanksgiving let your supplication be made known unto God."

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

IS YOUR BOY HERO OR BEST?

School boy sustained what was called concussion in a football game a year ago. His parents feared that the boy had been injured. He was an ambitious boy and didn't want to be called "sissy" so for too long the boy kept to himself the fact that he had a constant headache until he couldn't stand it any longer.

By the time the parents learned of the injury and the headache, the boy's vision was getting blurry. When the boy finally had the benefit of medical attention he was immediately sent to the hospital and kept in bed for about a month.

The boy's uncle gives these facts and asks whether in my judgment the boy now 17, should play football again, if the doctor who attended him can give his consent. The boy has played a few games and some of his friends think he is having the headache again, but won't admit it, lest he be called "sissy."

In my judgment no high school boy should play football. Especially not interscholastic or "varsity" football, and certainly not under the guidance, training or influence of an outside coach.

This boy's fear of being called a "sissy" if he doesn't submit to whatever the town sport of football may be, is without regard for the boy's welfare or advice or approval of the physician or physical training department — is the ruling spirit of high school football.

It is a simple matter for the coach to select as the nucleus for his picket a squad of overgrown 17 year-olds and youths, and impart to them the idea that the boy who never doesn't go out for football is a "sissy." Automatically the more precocious and bright girls in the school compete for roles in the chorus or cheering section. Parents willy-nilly follow along. The school's physical education instructors, if any, hold their tongues if they want to hold their jobs. The town's service or luncheon clubs perhaps don't commend backward part to support and advertise the team. And we, the people who patronize the show, do the rest.

From this boy's uncle's statement that the boy had concussion I can only infer that there was some sort of injury to the head. Concussion has no more specific significance, than that

That whether the injury was of trifling or serious nature, the fact that his parents were unaware of it is another count in the indictment against high school football.

Even if you believe this man's game is suitable for growing boys, and how can you wink at the practice of the football promoters holding out titles to schools to seek contributions of $2 to $5 from each pupil, to spend for football equipment — I say that football should not be in every ten boys in the school! This is 10 to 1 people in many high schools where there is little or no physical training provided for boys who may prefer such physical training as boxing, wrestling, fencing or tennis.

Why must we get high blood pressure when we are past middle age? How can it be accomplished on the causes and treatment of high blood pressure? (Mrs. E. F. W.)

Most of high blood pressure is none of your business, Ma'am. Low, high or gang, you'll be happier if you'd leave such technical matters to the judgment of your doctor. Let your doctor worry for the doctor who pretends to diagnose or treat you for high blood pressure" in any circumstance.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

On the hand of a young woman the other evening I noted a ring of extraordinary beauty. The stone was a curious cream color, not a pearl, or any of the oriental sapphires. I asked her husband what it was.

"A yellow diamond," he replied. And when I followed up my enquiries he revealed to me a most interesting story. The woman owned both he and his wife are shy and retiring personalities, but they have been blessed with a great deal of this world's goods. There are few things they have not been able to buy, so happens neither of them wants much. They live in a modest house, drive a small car and dress quite simply, live frugally, and give not only of money but of their time generously to a carefully chosen list of unpecuatous social services and charities.

As for diamons, this young woman had been to Africa and knew if she wanted them.

In their contacts with other well-to-do people, this young couple are often irked by the display of diamonds and other gems the well-known folk put on. What are diamonds but a display, an assertion, a declaration of certain financial competence? A competence to be measured by the number and size of the diamonds displayed.

So as a quiet little joke between themselves they searched the diamond markets for a diamond that would be unique in size and diamond. There are, various off-color diamonds, but they are usually the most beautiful. A perfect yellow is every bit as precious as, and sometimes a little more precious than, the perfect blue-white of the same weight.

This yellow one's perfect, and large. It is extremely beautiful. But it cost them a hundred people seeing it take it for a bauble, a gift of enormous price, because it does not look like a conventional diamond. In the meantime a humerous young people have left it to a hospital, for more beds like that would have been given if it which doubtless excuses their little joke in the meantime.

A Bit Ridiculous

(Calgary Albertan)

Saskatchewan's Premier Douglas recently appointed two more cabinet ministers, bringing the total strength of the Cabinet to nineteen. One of the two will be minister of telephones and also in charge of two or three government offices. The other will be provincial secretary, a job with practically no duties, and also in charge of the publicity and parks branches. The size of the Cabinet is becoming just a little bit too ridiculous.

Overpopulation Cure

(Sault Daily Star)

Maybe the overpopulation of some of the much-discussed backward areas could be cured by a few more automobiles.

BEAUTY VS. UTILITY

Reports of Direct Shell Hit On 'Little Grey Home' in Korea Chills Vet's Desire to Return

By GEORGE H. CARVER

There is no housing shortage in the Far holes of Korea.

In fact, you can move in today and move out tomorrow.

You don't have to worry about having the water running in the bathtub or plotting off the power on the refrigerator.

Don't worry about the garage. There isn't one anyway and even if you had a car . . .

But there's wisdom in this daily hedge-hopping from fox hole to fox hole. If you're a good Canadian soldier you'll have a dugout. Just push the brass aside.

Glad that reminds us of the day in La Zasard near ehrez (1915) when we were a buck gunner (rear rank without pay). We were pushed unceremoniously out of a choice basement apartment (one room, no chairs) demolished, selfseated and unthanked by a chiselling German fire-pot-chief (remember?) which exploded atop us.

Firewater Germans

We crawled out from under three officers and we came face to face with a snooty "Holman." He was attired, talkadive and correct as an obliety we were to be his guests. There was no argument. In his hand he held a wicked-looking Luger.

But he made one mistake. When he waved the Luger aloft to beckon the rest of the Heinies, Bill Colton, Canadian Field Artillery lieutenant, dropped him on the goal line with a beautiful flying tackle. C.F.A. Lieutenant Jack Kitchen held the half, and the gunner without pay made the convert. The ball was a Mills bomb and it was boosted squarely between the posts. The Heinie hasn't walked since.

But that's digressing from this story.

George Cole, Korean veteran, and a member of the Ontario Intelligencer staff, had a cozy room apartment on a Korean hill. He lived happily from day to day.

Knotted Up Tight

The nights were different. He decided to stay at home because the nights were cold. But he didn't lack for excitement. In fact, uninvited guests occasionally put in an appearance and George extended the glad hand of welcome. Not there was always a bomb in it.

It was a cozy, chummy little fox hole in the Korean pimples. Nobody called for the rent. Nobody bothered about income tax. But help was short. There were no towels in the bathroom, there being no bathroom.

Then came the day he was ordered to the rear area. He, with other Canucks, was going home to Canada.

Not For Him

In the natural order of human events and emotions, the call should have evoked cheers at whatever from George and his pals. But not George. His little cozy home in the west, or is it east, was to be vacated. Gad, in these days of terrific rentals, high taxes, cost of foodstuffs, it wrenched George's cardiac region.

Where else could one get an apartment with no Korean deal. No wife, no in-laws; just a wartime romance.

But rules is rules and regs is rules.

Sorrowfully, George packed his clothes. He left behind his dinner jacket and tails as well as a silk lounging robe. He disconnected the telephone and called Seoul to cut off the hydro. He left his little "black bork" just in case the next occupant could speak English.

Ever So Sensible

After all, a guy gets attached to his surroundings and although every day and night might be a Fourth of July celebration with the teeth for Chinese rockers, it was still home.

Heck, what was the idea of this leave? Who wanted to be back in Canada? After all, George had lived in the place all his life. Then the opportunity to see the world had presented itself. You grabbed the chance, then came along the glider-kicker or brass and the first thing you know you're back home. But then, home is a nice place to come back to provided you've been away long enough to appreciate it.

The clincher of this story is, however, that George is still unhappy now that he's back in Canada. After all, 300 days in the line, coming home to a cozy little apartment in the hallowed of a small Gibraltar to a nice cold dinner of "C" rations is not a situation to be snorted at.

This small Gibraltar, in case you're curious, is one of the Korean hills that are jealously coveted by the Red rats garbed in North Korean uniforms.

Cordial, In A Way

It seems too bad that George had cultivated a little lair there with toe-mines. And a hedge of machine gun bullets. He held open house in the afternoon and evening. Sometimes guests came unannounced. George didn't care, merely brushed them off—with a Tommy gun.

Now comes the sad news and the point of the story. After nearly 300 days spent in the front line or thereabouts, George got word yesterday from a returning pal of the P.P.C.L.I. that his little grey home in the Korean west has disappeared.

Shortly after he vacated it, a Commie heavy explosive shell landed squarley on the Cheer Cole. It ain't no mo'.

DENOUNCES TIPPING

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Tipping is "unworthy of labor in the 20th century," a state industrial commissioner Edward Corsi said Tuesday. "Tipping makes a servant out of the worker. It is a disgraceful thing that the worker has to depend on tipping for a living." Corsi testified at a public hearing on a proposed minimum wage order for the 250,000 persons in the state's restaurant industry.

RIOTS FOLLOW LABOR CHIEF'S ASSASSINATION

The assassination of Farhat Hached, above, nationalist party leader last week, had bloody repercussions in Casablanca when 51 persons were killed and scores wounded in savage Arab riots against the French. Rioting began when Moroccan extremists attacked a circus caravan or a Frenchman, wounding his wife, and then turned their fury on a police station. Two policemen were killed. Troops came to the aid of the police and opened fire on the attackers. Armored cars and tanks now patrol the jittery city.

SEEK THREE THUGS

YORK, Pa. (AP) — A 12-state police alarm went out Wednesday for three youths who held up a bank branch and got away with $11,820 in cash. The bandits walked into a branch of the York Trust Company just before closing time Tuesday and while one pushed two employees into a closet the others stuffed the money into a paper bag.

Skating Club Holds Meeting

The directors of the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club held their regular monthly meeting last night at the club house at Queen and Dufferin.

Directors Dickens, Brown, Wilkes, Miles, Sherry, Smith, Dewell, O'Connor, Digby, Davies and Woodcock were present together with Mrs. Miller, president of the ladies auxiliary and Bill VanTassel, chairman of the Belleville Recreation Committee.

President Jack Dickens outlined the duties of directors for the winter season as follows: Sherry, rink; Morgan, membership; Digby, publicity; Dickens, advertising; Smith, supervision; Beard, building and grounds; Davies, figure skating; Woodcock, out of town shows; Black, boxing; Wilkes, finance and projects; with Mrs. Davis and Mrs. O'Connor acting as liaison between the directors and the ladies auxiliary.

It was decided that club membership fees should be the same as last year but that a nominal charge should be made for special instruction in order to help defray expenses of instruction.

Bill VanTassel advised the board that the Recreation Committee had applied for the Belleville Arena for free figure skating for very Sunday afternoon in January and February and he requested that the club arrange to provide supervision and instruction during these periods. President Dickens assured the chairman of the Recreation Committee that the club would cooperate in every way possible as was done last year.

MARRIAGE NOTICE

JENKINS — CLARE—On Wednesday, December 10, 1952, Barbara Lillian Clark, daughter of Rev. W. E. Clark, (formerly of Belleville), to Robert Hume, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Jenkins, Belleville, Ontario.

Dr. Ruth Whitfield returned to Hartford, Conn., today after spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Whitfield, Rose Corners.

Mrs. Glad Wale, North Front Street, is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Archdeacon F.A. Smith Addresses H-S Assoc.

Queen Victoria Home and School Association held its regular monthly meeting at the school on Monday evening, with president, Mrs. G. A. Bradford in charge.

Attendance prize was won by Miss Burley's class.

The entertainment was provided by Miss Burley's class in three sections, followed by a running square dance, by the children, which was much enjoyed.

Mr. R. Brettingham led in the singing of a number of Christmas carols.

Mr. H. Murray introduced Archdeacon Arthur Smith of St. Thomas Anglican Church, who gave an inspiring message of the Christmas season.

Mrs. J. Punchard tendered a vote of thanks to Archdeacon Smith for his message.

PICTON

Mrs. C.B. Allison Celebrates 98th Birthday

PICTON. — Mrs. Charles B. Allison, well known Picton resident, marked her 98th birthday on Monday, December 8th. She enjoys good health and a favorite pastime is reading. Mrs. Allison can recall many interesting events of bygone days.

Mrs. Allison will long be remembered for her contribution she made to the community and to the war effort throughout World War I, when, as regent of Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E., she carried the responsibilities of that splendid organization's activities as capably.

A small party was held Monday afternoon to mark this auspicious occasion. Refreshments included a lovely birthday cake inscribed with "98 years". Chrysanthemums further adorned the tea table, where Mrs. H. W. Bedell poured tea. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Vera Ostrander, Mrs. Fraser and Mrs. F. Lord.

Mrs. Allison has one son, Dr. Gerald Allison, Picton and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph B. Bolton, of Montreal

Tabernacle United Church W.M.S. Installs New Executive

The Christmas meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Tabernacle United Church was held in the church parlors on Tuesday, Mrs. Archibald presided.

The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. Hall, who presided over the reading by Mrs. Frost, Mrs. Robb, Mrs. Paul and Mrs. Lent of the various Archibald versions of the Christmas story. Suitable commentaries were made by Mrs. Fisher. Familiar Christmas carols were sung by the group.

The chapter dealing with "Education", from the study book "Along African Trails", was reviewed by Mrs. Campbell. A resume of the means by which the United Church educates the African natives in Angola was presented.

The treasurer, Miss Johns, presented a gratifying report. It was announced that the objective for the year had been met. The secretary, Mrs. Robb, reported that a box of infants' wear had been donated by the Society as part of its year's project.

The retiring president, Mrs. Archibald, was the recipient of a vote of thanks from the society for her faithful and efficient service during her tenure of office.

The incoming executive for 1953 was appointed as follows: honorary presidents, Mrs. R. Bowley and Mrs. Adamson; past president, Mrs. Archibald; president, Mrs. W. R. Kerr; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Isard; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Archibald; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Brickman; recording secretary, Mrs. Frost; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Paul; treasurer, Miss Johns; secretary Christian stewardship, Mrs. Fisher; secretary, Associate Members, Mrs. Hogle; secretary Community Friendship, Mrs. Lent; secretary Supply, Mrs. Robb; secretary Literature, Mrs. Baird; secretary Temperance and Citizenship, Mrs. Nelson; secretary Missionary Monthly, Mrs. Isard; press, Mrs. Frost; pianist, Mrs. Duff and assistant pianist, Mrs. Lent.

Club Activities

BAYSIDE W.M.S.

White's District—Mrs. Floyd Dudley opened her home for the recent Christmas meeting of the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. Walter Hinchcliffe, All joined in singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Scripture reading Luke 2:8-20, Mathew 2:1-12, Luke 2:25-32 and Luke 2:33-40 were given by Mrs. Frank Sandercock, Mrs. Floyd Dudley, Mrs. A. Lesch and Mrs. George Hillman.

Mrs. Clifton Rush took charge of the meditation followed by responsive reading and silent prayer. She gave a fine Christmas talk illustrating her main points with concrete examples vividly understood by the members. Mrs. Dudley was pianist for the service.

The Misses Jean and Doreen Rush contributed a piano duet,

Mrs. John Craig Heads St. Andrew's W.M.S.

The December meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. met on Tuesday with Mrs. Mantle in the chair. A hymn was sung and sung and Mrs. Lamsden read the Scripture. All the various secretaries gave their annual reports.

Mrs. Mills, treasurer, informed the W.M.S. that by the end of the year it would be well over the top with the allocation, which was most gratifying.

Miss M. Mackintosh reported an increase of ten in Girls' Teachings; Mrs. Fleming that there were 23 home helpers; Mrs. Kennedy of many timely and helpful visits made by the Welcome and Welfare.

The Library secretary gave a concise report. Also the supply convenor, Mrs. Pigeon.

New Hedger

Mrs. V. Weir spoke for the C.G.I.T. girls and was delighted to have a new helper in Mrs. Mabel Richardson along with herself and Barbara Thompson.

The Press secretary reported printed accounts of last meeting in the local paper.

Cards and plants were arranged to be sent to shut-ins and old members.

Rev. J. C. Hornsby installed the new officers for 1953, and praised Mrs. Mantle for her four years of devoted and faithful service in office as president. Mrs. Mantle has been reliable and gracious in her work and it has been appreciated by all.

Mrs. John Craig was elected new president and after a few gracious words, the meeting was closed and tea was served.

"O Come All You Faithful," which was much enjoyed.

Christmas Parcels

Christmas parcels were exchanged and white gifts to be sent to Erikdale Hospital, Manitoulin Island, and to Mrs. were also contributed. Donations of money were made for several lassies. The systematic givings were handed in by Mrs. Fitz. Reports were given by the Baby Band leader, Mrs. Frank Sandercock, and the Junior Band leaders, Mrs. Leonard Young for Sunbeam Mission Band and Mrs. Fra.k Leach for Bayside Mission Band. All showed an active interest by the leaders and fine cooperation of the children, their teachers and their parents.

The treasurer, Mrs. Lorne Hunt, gave an itemized report which showed a busy year. Mrs. Leonard Young, Christian Stewardship secretary, gave a reading "Time and Talents for the Master."

The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton closed the meeting. Mrs. Dudley served Christmas refreshments assisted by Mrs. Lesch and Miss Jean Rush.

MODERN SCHOOL OPENED

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Prince Charles School, described as one of the most modern in Ontario, was officially opened Wednesday by Premier Frost. Built of pre-cast insulated concrete slabs, the $785,-000 school has 17 regular class-rooms.

Walker Hardware Company Sponsors Christmas Party

Last Wednesday the staff of the Walker Hardware Co. Ltd., of the Belleville and Napanee stores, with their families and friends met at the Kiwanis Centre for their annual Christmas party.

Over 75 sat down to a splendid dinner served under the direction of Mrs. Jerry Yorke and Miss Dorothy Reid.

The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the long tables gleaming with tinselled decorations and centred by one of the Christmas place mats, the gift of the Frigidaire Company. A tall lighted Christmas tree with a number of attractively wrapped gifts portrayed Christmas with all its charm. The decorating was under the direction of Harry Worth, assisted by Bob Moore, Harold McNish and Frank Hall.

Following the dinner, Jack Ellis as chairman for the evening, presented an entertaining program of music and humorous readings.

Mr. Herbert Fox, president of the company, welcomed those present, and introduced the families, of the newer members, who have joined the staff, since the last party.

Newest Place For Jewelry Is At Nape of Neck

LONDON (CP)—Gemstone embroidery lends a glitter to London's latest millinery fashions. In the case of formal hats jewelled clips or brooches are used as brightners.

The newest place for jewelry is at the nape of the neck to give a point to the new hat depth at the back. Close head-hugging little caps of velvet, satin or net gathers softly grouped to the nape of the neck are where they are adorned with a jewelled bow brooch. Another idea is twin jewelled pins placed side by side on the neck.

Draped bonnets which conceal the ears have jewelled earclips set in the sides in lieu of the clips fitted by the leaders and fine cooperation of the children, their teachers and their parents.

The treasurer, Mrs. Lorne Hunt, gave an itemized report which showed a busy year. Mrs. Leonard Young, Christian Stewardship secretary, gave a reading "Time and Talents for the Master."

The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton closed the meeting. Mrs. Dudley served Christmas refreshments assisted by Mrs. Lesch and Miss Jean Rush.

Snappy Cookie Wins $25,000 For Housewife

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Peter S. Harih, brunette wife of a Chicago policeman, yesterday won the $25,000 and title of cook-of-the-year, 1952, for a "snappy turtle cookie" with a chocolate shell.

Mrs. Richard Nixon, wife of the vice-president-elect, handed out the prizes at an annual home making awards at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. The contest is sponsored by the Pillsbury Flour Co.

Mrs. Harih got the idea for the cookie from one of her twin 11-year-old sons who rolled her cookie dough onto turtle legs improvised of pecans when she was talking on the phone one day.

Second prize of $7,500 and a food fund received $2,500 had an automatic cosfres washer for her "bake-off" frosting cake.

Janet Esther Winquest, 16, of Holdrege, Neb., won the junior section top prize of $5,000 and a dishwasher with a "banana split pie."

MONTREAL PORT CLOSES

MONTREAL (CP)—The navigation season here was officially closed Wednesday with the sailing of the Canadian freighter, Seaboard Trader. The vessel is en route to Europe with a cargo of flour, wheat and military equipment. Last year the port closed Dec. 13.

Lesser Noblemen and Wives Get Break in Cost of Dress

By JOSH DUDMAN

Mitch Eshler

LONDON (Reuters)" — Britain's lesser noblemen, trying to figure out how to achieve traditional elegance for the Coronation next June and still balance the castle budget, have got another break.

The court announced Tuesday that their wives may attend in a simpler garb, less expensive by about $600, than was required for previous functions.

The first break for their pocketbooks came a week ago. The government announced the peers themselves, if under the rank of earl, could cut down on many of the imperial frills in their Coronation costumes.

Tuesday's announcement suggests that peeresses may wear a tasseled velvet headpiece instead of the customary coronet. Cap of state $10; coronet $100 and up.

Published in the London Gazette, the official court circular, the announcement brought relief to many noblemen who are no longer able to keep up their stately homes or hide to broads.

Elizabeth herself approved the decree, which presents the noblewomen with a choice. They may wear the old-style formal rich robes of state, at a cost of more than $1,000, or they may invest about $400 in the new fashion—"a sleeveless crimson velvet robe, trimmed with minver pure two inches wide."

Any viscountess or baroness—the two lower orders of nobility—talented with a sewing machine can save another $100 or so by obtaining one of the official patterns to be issued and running up her own outfit.

Many Have Problems

But a countess, a marchioness or a duchess will have to attend in the full regalia, which many already possess.

The Duke of Norfolk, the Earl Marshal, also made another regulation for commoners—wives of commonwealth ministers attending the coronation. "They must all wear some form of head covering. This must not cover the face but should be in the form of a veil, falling from the crown or the back. Hats are forbidden to ladies, but not lower than the waist."

WOMAN SCULPTOR DIES

TORONTO (CP)—Dora Harris Wechsler, 55, noted Canadian sculptor, died in hospital Wednesday. She was well-known for her sculptured caricatures. Born in Ottawa, Mrs. Wechsler was a graduate of Macdonald College and McGill University.

CHRISTMAS SWIM

LONDON (CP)—The annual 198-yard race for the Peter Pan Swimming Cup is to be held Christmas Day in the Serpentine lake in London's Hyde Park. If the lake is frozen, the race will be broken to enable the swimmers to take part.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He's tongue-tied with his girl—What to do?

There are few things in life more painful than to be in your opinion, or the girl who—temporarily, perhaps, but very definitely—is queen of your heart, and then, when you've been so lucky as to wangle a date with her, to find yourself stricken dumb through self-consciousness.

Here's a sad story of this kind:

"I'm 16 years old, and several months ago met a girl I thought was tops. I took her out on two dates, and was so shy with her that I am sure I did not make a good impression. I've always been self-conscious and afraid of saying the wrong thing, which keeps me from talking naturally just when I want to be at my best. And I felt as though she must have been bored.

"People have told me that this girl has said she liked me, but I have felt so awkward ever since our dates that I haven't even tried to see her to go out again. All I've done is to say hello to her when I see her, as I'm afraid to ask her for another date because she might turn me down.

"How can I get this girl interested in me again?"

Well, now, here's a teen-ager who apparently has never heard that old proverb: "Faint heart never won fair lady!" So he goes along, worrying for fear he might be turned down if he asks for another date, instead of going boldly up to the girl and letting her know he's eager to have one.

Besides, which, he's taking a lot for granted, when he assumes that he bored her, just because he has no sweet feeling that he mystified things. For all he knows, the girl may be thinking that she was the one who mystified their date, since she hasn't been asked for a date again.

What this chap should do is to gather up just enough to take a chance and, invite the girl to some event in which both of them are interested, and which, because of their mutual interest, would automatically provide them with something to talk about together. If they attend the same school, there ought to be plenty of such events; if they don't, she'd probably be flattered to be asked to some special occasion at his own school.

Another idea, if there is some sport he knows particularly well, say bowling or basketball, would be to take her to a good game which would give him the opportunity to explain plays to her. Here he would have a topic of conversation right to hand, without having to hunt for one, and his eagerness to make things understandable and interesting to her would make him forget himself.

Again, if both of them like skating, he might take her to an ice show, if there's one around, or to a place where there is exhibition skating. If there is a movie star they both admire, he should write for a picture, in which that star plays, and invite her to go.

The whole trick is to find some common ground that would provide material for conversation, so that he would not be thrown entirely on his own conversational resources. He should also make a special effort to find out what the girl's particular enthusiasms are, then hunt up some place or event to which some one of her enthusiasms is related. Almost all young people have hobbies. He should ask about these and give her an opportunity to tell him about it. The more interest he shows in the things in which she is already interested, the easier it will be to make conversation—and the better she will like him!

Preparations for A Gala Christmas Dinner

By Mary Moore

Serious—and even the not-so-serious-devotees of this column are expected to clip today's ideas, and keep them in them in the Christmas dinner season which will appear here on the same day next week.

These are a collection of recipes and instructions that you have asked for and that I want to give you. They are traditional Christmas fare that turns up only once a year, so you may not be able to find them in your cookbooks.

Clip this if you need or want a guide when you come to these important last-minute details.

STUFFING FOR THE TURKEY

(Chestnut and variations)

(I will give you turkey roasting instructions next week.)

This is the first time I have given you more than enough to take care of you are timid about using French chestnuts you have given you an alternative for them. Don't be timid though—remember what variety is the spice of life.

Bread Stuffing

1 cup finely chopped celery or mushrooms instead of chestnuts if desired.

Prepare 12 cups day-old bread. Use the quickest method of crumbling the bread is to shred it on your medium-size grater—this permits you to use the crusts—but please don't snap your fingers at me. Melt but do not brown 3-4 cup butter or margarine and add to it 3-4 cup ground or very finely chopped onion, cooking gently until they are just yellow. Stir 1 cup of the breadcrumbs into them and turn them into a large bowl with all of the breadcrumbs. Add 1-2 cup finely chopped celery, 2 or 3 1-3 cups chopped boiled French chestnuts (see below), 2 tablespoons (or less) salt, 1 teaspoon crumbled dried herbs such as sage or thyme or basil, (or use up to 1 tablespoon if you wish) and 1 teaspoon pepper. Mix well. It is now ready for stuffing the turkey.

To prepare Chestnuts: Cover 1 or 2 lbs. French chestnuts with boiling water and boil for 25 minutes. Drain and remove shells and inner skins. Cover again with boiling water and cook until tender—about 15 minutes. They should be tender enough to form into purée or riczr.

CRANBERRY JELLY

I gave you recipe for Cranberry Sauce last year. I like individual jellies for their decorative appearance. Maybe you will too. Wash and pick over 1 lb. cranberries, cover with 2 cups boiling water, boil for 5 minutes or until skins burst, then through strainer. Add 2 cups sugar. Place over heat and boil five minutes—very stir berries remove a few minutes longer. Pour into moistened small molds and chill.

Spiced Cranberry Jelly may be made by adding 2 inches stick cinnamon, 2 whole cloves and 1-4 teaspoon salt to berries when they are first boiled.

FOAMY SAUCE

(For Plum or any Steamed Pudding.)

This is closely related to Hard Sauce. Cream 3 tablespoons butter until it is light and airy, and very gradually beat 7ala II I cup icing sugar. Add 2 unbeaten egg yolks and beat for 5 minutes Just before serving fold in two stiffly beaten egg whites and 1 teaspoon vanilla (or if desired 2 tablespoons sherry or 1 tablespoon cooking brandy.)

ALMOND PASTE

(For Christmas or Wedding Fruit Cake.)

Blanch 1 lb. almonds. Dry them by setting them warm and allowing to stand uncovered at room temperature for 24 hours. Put through finest knife (nut knife) of grinder twice. Mix into the finely-ground almonds 2 lbs. icing sugar, 2 beaten eggs, 1 teaspoon each orange flower essence and almond essence. Knead this mixture well with the hands for at least 3 minutes. Wrap well and store in covered jar in refrigerator for a week. Three days before you are ready to cut the cake brush the tops of cake lightly with white or egg Roll paste out to fit cake exactly to 1-4 or 1-2 inch thickness. Press over cake. Allow to harden before spreading over

PLAIN WHITE ICING

Beat 2 unbeaten egg whites with 1 cup icing sugar until well mixed but not stiff, then add 1 or 2 tablespoons lemon juice and sufficient additional icing sugar to make of spreading consistency—but not runny. Spread evenly over almond paste to 1-8 inch thickness. This keeps well without hardening.

Sorry—but it is too late now for you to get answers to your questions before Christmas.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Ladies, are you listening? Your informal name is your signature.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've just ordered letter-paper printed with my name and address. My name to be printed: Mrs. Richard Thorp. (This is the form, not my real name.) Now I am wondering if this form is correct or incorrect. Some of my friends use this form, and others use "Mrs. Dorothy S. Thorp."

I'm confused about my signature, too. I always sign my name "Mrs. Richard Thorp" in business letters, cheques, and in the return address on the envelope, of both business and social letters. Is this correct?

And is it correct for me to sign this letter to you:

Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Thorp

Answer — For letter paper printed with your name and address, you were correct to order your name Mrs. Richard Thorp.

Note 1: Your formal name is Mrs. Richard Thorp. This is correct for your name on your printed paper, on folded-over cards or visiting-cards. This is the name to write on your return address on envelopes, to both social and business letters.

Note 2: Your informal name is Dorothy Smith Thorp (or Dorothy S.) This is the correct form for your signature. Your signature to business letters, professional letters, letters to people who don't know very well (perhaps a new member of your club whom you have just met), letters to people whom you don't know (your letter to me, for example). All such letters should be signed like this:

Yours very truly,
(for business letters)
or
Sincerely yours,
(for social letters)
Dorothy Smith Thorp
(Mrs. Richard Thorp)

That is: your signature. . . your informal name; then, for information to the person to whom you are writing, your formal name, in parentheses.

A father-stepfather complication

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter, 18, is to be married to a young man of 20. His real father was divorced from his mother. She married again, and the lad calls this man his stepdad. The mother died two years ago, and the boy continues to live with his step-dad. The boy's real father and his step-father are good friends, and the father and the boy visit together a lot. Now our problem: is the step-father to give the ceremony, who is to stand in the line representing the groom's family? Would it be proper for both men to stand in the line as the mother is dead?—Robert A.

Since the prospective bridegroom is on such friendly terms with his real father, I should think he would want his bride-to-be to invite his father to stand in the receiving-line. It would look very strange to have both men, father and stepfather, in the receiving-line. . . that I certainly wouldn't recommend. The stepfather should not be in the receiving-line. It isn't, of course, necessary that the father stand in the line. . . many men prefer not to do this, but instead to mingle with the guests.

ST. MARK'S GUILD

Deseronto — The regular meeting of the Ladies' Guild of St. Mark's Anglican Church was held at the home of Mrs. H. Topping with 17 members and one visitor present.

The president, Mrs. I. Chalmers requested Rev. K. F. Blachford to open the meeting. The report of the bazaar proved the success of this event. Votes of thanks were tendered to the Evening Guild for the splendid manner in which the afternoon tea was conducted and also to Mr. Schroeder for his donation of candy to the bazaar.

It was decided the Ladies' Guild give $90.24 toward the cost of the new clothes purchased this fall and a cheque for $175 be given to the wardens.

It was agreed to follow the usual custom to place flowers on the altar at Christmas in memory of the deceased Guild members and also to send gifts of candy to shut-ins and members who are ill.

Mr. Blachford extended an invitation to the members and their friends to attend the carol service to be held on Sunday evening, December 21st.

The annual meeting of the Guild will be held in the Sunday School room on January 5 at the usual time.

Mr. Blachford closed the meeting, following which refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. R. E. Maybee and Mrs. H. Bender, and a social hour enjoyed.

RESCUE 5 CHILDREN

TORONTO (CP)—Three mothers Tuesday rescued their five small children from a burning home in northwest Toronto. Minutes later six firemen were partly overcome by smoke when they dashed in to rescue the children they thought were still inside. The mothers were Mrs. Hannah Rosen, Mrs. Y. Waljenenberg and Mrs. Theresa Weisenberg.

"The shepherds told Joseph the y wanted to come into the stable."

A CHILD's Story of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Fred Kelly.

CHAPTER I

One winter's night, long, long ago, God, who made the moon and the rain and the rivers and the flowers and all the silvery stars and everything on the earth and in the sky, did a new and wonderful thing.

He sent His own dear Son down from Heaven to join the world and live with people like you and me for a while.

The Son of God did not come as a grown man at first. He was born as a tiny baby, like all the rest of us.

And this is how it happened:

There lived in a little town called Nazareth a man and his wife, called Joseph and Mary. One morning when Mary was alone, an angel came into her kitchen and told her a big secret. She was going to have a Son and God would be His Father. And the name of her Son would be Jesus.

While Joseph lay asleep, the angel whispered the same secret to him.

So Mary and Joseph knew the greatest secret in the world.

The house where they lived in Nazareth had white walls and a round roof. It was a pretty house and Mary wanted her little boy to be born there. But Jesus was born far away from the pretty house with the white walls.

That was because the king of the land made everybody leave home and come to another town, where he could count the people and find out how many men there were.

So Mary had to ride a long way on an old gray donkey while Joseph held the reins and walked beside her. Joseph was so tired that his feet hurt and Mary could hardly keep awake when they got to the little town called Bethlehem.

Every hotel and rooming house and every inn was crowded. There was no room for Mary and Joseph at the inn or anywhere else except a stable. A red cow lived in the stable and every once in a while said "moo." A black hen lived there, too, with a lot of yellow chicks—a donkey and a worship Jesus.

British Theatres Being Prepared For Pantomimes

By GLENNIE CURRIE

LONDON (Reuters)—At 100 British theatres, comics, chorus girls, acrobats and schoolboys "dame-folk" are busy rehearsing pantomimes, those strange British perennials which flourish each Christmas season.

During Christmas school vacations, "panto" are a must for every family with children under 12. Nursery-tale characters, "principal boys," slapstick, vaudeville-hall scenes, topical songs and uncomected light musical numbers provide something special for the youngsters and their elders.

Pantomime openings coincide almost exactly with the last day of school before the Christmas holiday. They close as late as possible, usually when schools reopen.

For the adults' benefit, the hero (the "principal boy") is always played by a leggy girl in tights and the hero's widowed mother (the "dame") always is a raucous male comic.

These switches in sex took place in Victorian times, when the present-day pantomime emerged from burlesques of the straight-faced "harlequinades" descended from the 16th and 17th century Italian Comedia Dell' Arte.

But there is little in today's pantomime to recall the harlequinade, whose amorous adventures have been transformed into a romanticized love story suitable for children. The only difference between the hero and heroine is the amount of leg they show. The hero, in "hes" tights, shows more.

Recalls Clowns

"Buttons," the comic pageboy in Cinderella, who helps "Cinders" get her man although he is in love with her himself, is a standard part of the pantomimes. He is a direct descendant of the clowns, whose shaved-headed and white-painted faces convulsed Roman audiences more than 2,000 years ago.

All the familiar fairy tales are used though some are scarcely recognizable.

Babes in the Wood, for instance, always includes Robin Hood and his merry men; Red Riding Hood always has a two-legged "demon king" with magical powers; Aladdin always is assisted by "widow Twankey," his "dame" mother.

FRANKFORD UNITED CHURCH W.M.S.

On Thursday afternoon, the W.M.S. of the Frankford United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Morrow, with a large attendance.

Mrs. Morrow, presiding in the place of the president, who was absent through illness, opened the meeting.

Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Dickson and Mrs. Johnson each read a few thoughts on the theme, "Living by Jesus".

Mrs. A. E. Johns took charge of the devotional period and brought many inspiring thoughts to each one present.

Following the business, Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel gave a reading "The Water That is Pure".

Mrs. Charlesworth also gave a reading and Mrs. Morrow a vocal solo. All these numbers were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. J. M. Dafoe spoke on the study book, describing the "Home Life of the African People". Mrs. I. E. Rowe favored with a beautiful piano solo, and the meeting was brought to a close.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by her mother, Mrs. Casey, Mrs. Dickson and Mrs. Johnson.

Canada Building Air Force About as Large as the Army, Jet Fighters Main Weapon

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The unusual extent of Canada's swing to airpower as the core of national defence became fully apparent in 1953.

Under a policy pursued without parallel among world powers, she is building an air force about as large as the army, spending as much on it as on the other two forces combined, and counting on a jet fighter force as the main weapon of defence both at home and in commitments abroad.

By 1949, it was starting to be evident that the fighter arm of the RCAF was to be the dominant factor in post-war defence policy. By 1952, the full impact of this trend, accentuated by the Korean war, was there for all to see.

Air Contribution

The air division Canada is pledged to establish in Europe by 1954 was largely in being by the end of the year and half its 12 squadrons already were overseas with another three set to go in early spring. It will represent an investment of hundreds of millions of dollars, a force of more than 300 modern jets, the air equivalent of a small, two-corps army.

Its 8,000 men will actually outnumber the 27th brigade's 5,500 by 4,000, giving the air force superiority even in manpower in Canada's European commitments.

By the end of 1953, the air force says, it will have nearly 50,000 men or just about the strength of the army under the three-year rearmament program. This represents an historic realignment in manpower policy.

In-Between Year

The year 1952 was predominantly an in-between year for all three forces. It saw the three-year rearmament program through its second year, gave the drive its second breath, set the stage for the climax in the fiscal year 1953-54 that is supposed to see Canada equipped with 41 air squadrons, a 160-ship fleet, an army of roughly two divisions, a manpower of 120,000.

There were both progress and delays. Production of many important items of equipment—the CF-100 Canuck jet fighter, the navy's anti-submarine escort vessels, radar—was behind schedule. The total strength of the three forces increased slowly, from 95,000 in January to about 100,000, largely due to the army's discharge of Korean veterans which offset recruiting of thousands of men.

The army stood pat on its existing formations. The navy was still waiting for the new ships that will spearhead the fleet. The marked advances were made by the air force.

Air Training Scheme

It got the radar station program well on its way, brought the air training scheme for Canadian and Atlantic Pact fliers to a peak, raised the total number of squadrons roughly to 30, or 75 per cent of the 1954 objective.

In 1952, Korea became an accepted part of the military scene. The army settled into the routine of maintaining a brigade there, keeping reinforcements flowing over and having another brigade training to go after the present brigade has been there a year. The navy kept three destroyers off Korea. The air force worked at the trans-Pacific airlift part time.

In Parliament, the political parties largely left the question of broad military policy alone and quarrelled about details of defence buying. The Progressive Conservatives charged waste and extravagance. The Liberals said there might be a few errors but neither waste nor extravagance.

Doctor Urges Girdle to Aid Male Success

LOS ANGELES, (AP) — Men need girdles, too, says Dr. Burgess Gordon, president of the Philadelphia Women's Medical College.

Men will feel better and be more able to remain in the race with women in politics, industry any medicine if they wear girdles, Dr. Gordon told interviewers Tuesday.

Some of women's success is due to their girdles, he said, because they get support that elevates the abdomen and facilitates the movement of air in and out of the lungs, thus contributing to the entrance of oxygen into the tissues.

There's nothing like a new girdle to give a woman the feeling of well-being, Dr. Gordon says, and when the two-way stretch devices sag their wearers do, too.

BONARLAW — Garland Stewart McKeown has been awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy by Princeton University. The thesis, "A Study in Perception" deals with problems in contemporary theory of knowledge. Dr. McKeown is assistant professor and chairman of the department of philosophy at Carleton College, Ottawa.

His studies were furthered owing to fellowship assistance provided by the Humanities Research Council of Canada and by Princeton University.

He is a graduate of Stirling High School and of Trinity College, Toronto. He holds Master's degrees from the University of Toronto and from Princeton University. He is a brother of Cyril McKeown of Bonarlaw, where he attended public school.

EXECUTORS AND TRUSTEES FOR OVER HALF A CENTURY

Assistance FOR WORRIED EXECUTORS

When a relative or friend names you in his Will as Executor of his Estate, the time will come, (if you survive him), when the problems of administering his estate will be all yours to worry about.

If you are a busy man or inexperienced in estate administration, you will find that the many details and problems involved will be more than you can handle with justice to the estate, the heirs, or to yourself.

Should you find yourself in this position, appoint The Royal Trust Company as your Agent to administer the estate with you. This would relieve you of practically all the work and annoyance and much of the responsibility.

Conversely, in consideration for the friend you might appoint in your own Will, be sure to name The Royal Trust Company as Executor of your estate to act alone or with a friend as Co-executor.

RAWDON

Orange Lodges Sponsor Fowl Banquets

Rawdon — Fred Bateman, Wor. Grand Master of Ontario East, Loyal Orange Lodges, and Mrs. Bateman, Stirling, attended a chicken banquet last Thursday evening in Picton Presbyterian church. The ladies of the church catered and the banquet was sponsored by Picton Orange Lodge.

Mayor McFarland welcomed the large crowd and Charles Howard, master of Picton lodge, was master of ceremonies. Lieut. Heron of the Salvation Army, in Picton, delighted with music and conducted a sing-song. Rev. F. C. Boazer, Grand Lodge chaplain, spoke briefly. Mr. Bateman gave a special address during the evening.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bateman attended a turkey banquet in Peterborough in Brock St. Orange Hall on the occasion of the Centennial celebration of Nassau Orange Lodge, No. 467, three miles from Peterborough in the rural district. The ladies of Nassau L.O.B.A. catered.

The chairman was Mr. Morgan Brown, Grand Lecturer, of Ontario East.

Among those who gave addresses were: Fred Bateman, of Stirling, Grand Master of Ontario East; Mr. Beaver, Carrying Place, Grand Chaplain; Mrs. Wm. Milligan, Cornwall, Grand Mistress L.O.B.A., Ontario East; Mr. William Milligan, Cornwall, Deputy Grand Lecturer, Ontario East; Richard Sanderson, Havelock, Deputy Grand Master, Ontario East, and others.

Rev. R. W. Rowland, Peterborough, expressed thanks to all the guest speakers and to Peterborough Salvation Army Band, for providing musical entertainment.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw — Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McKeown and Garland of Bath, were guests of Mrs. J. McKeown on Sunday.

Furse Presenting

On Wednesday afternoon several ladies of Springbrook United Church met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Mumby and enjoyed a social afternoon.

Mr. George Thompson read an address and Mr. and Mrs. Mumby were presented with a purse of money on behalf of the S.S. class.

Mr. and Mrs. Mumby have gone to reside with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Miles for the winter.

Refreshments were served by the ladies.

Although taken by surprise, Mrs. Mumby expressed her sincere thanks for the kindness of her friends and enjoyed the afternoon.

Sylestone W.A.

Sylestone W.A. members met at the home of Mrs. E. Jones with ten ladies present.

After the usual business, readings were given by Mrs. W. Spencer, Mrs. W. Rutherford, Mrs. Lillian Anderson and Mrs. Chester Meltlejohn. Music by Mrs. E. Jones; cooled by Mrs. R. Stewart.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. S. G. Malkjelohn.

Mrs. John Lain spent a few days with Mrs. Borden Cripps, at Long Branch.

Anniversary Presentation

On Friday evening Miss Faye McAlpine invited friends and neighbors to a surprise dance and card party in the hall in honor of her parents (Mr. and Mrs. K. McAlpine's) 26th. wedding anniversary.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. McAlpine were presented with a purse of money by their neighbors.

Mr. Harold Rutherford is ill at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Rowe spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. G. Baker, in Toronto.

Mrs. K. Irwin attended the Federation Women's Institute in Toronto.

Mrs. Ralph Wellman and Ray spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Harold Kiels, of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKeown and Mr. and Mrs. R. Thompson and baby visited Mr. and Mrs. Dick Morton.

The annual Sunday School treat was held at the Gospel Hall on Friday evening.

The L.O.L. of Sentinel Lodge, Petherick's Corners, held a pie social and a splendid program was presented by the young people, after which three little girls were called to the platform; Barbara Watson, Nona Petherick and Norma Finny and drew the tickets which resulted as follows: first prize, Mantel radio, Wilfred Spencer; second price, electric tea kettle, Mrs. Rob. Irwin; third prize, wool blanket, Jack Morton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sutherland and family, of Stirling, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Thomson and Andrew visited Mrs. Andrew Thomson on Sunday.

Limb Breaks Teeth

While falling trees in woods on Thursday, Bill Burkitt was hit in the mouth by a limb, cutting his mouth and loosening several teeth; some had to be extracted.

Honors Couple

St. Mark's hall, Bonarlaw, was filled with friends for the shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Moore (nee Jean McInroy), Canon J. M. Brownlie performed the duties of chairman for the following program: Community singing with Mrs. R. Wellman at the piano; piano duet, Linda Wellman and Mrs. Glenn Morton; readings by Mrs. H. Hesketh, Mrs. H. Stiles and Mrs. Ronald Brown.

The wedding at Wayback was put on by 12th. line school; duet by Geraldine and Joan McFaul; monologue by Kenneth Stiles.

Canon Brownlie then asked Mr. and Mrs. Moore to have chairs on the platform and Mr. Stanley Kitchener read the address and they were presented with a purse of money.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore graciously replied and thanked all who had helped in any way possible.

Mrs. Henry Ingram (nee Ileen McInroy) was also asked to take a seat by her sister. Mrs. E. Heath, president of St. Mark's W.A., expressed thanks for the work they had done in the W.A. Mrs. George Wellman and Mrs. Simon Matthews presented each with a gift from the W.A.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McComb, of Sidney, visited Mrs. D. Wellman and Charlie on Sunday.

MADOC

Beass Band Well Acclaimed at Season's Initial Concert

MADOC—On Sunday night a capacity crowd filled the high school auditorium when the newly formed Madoc Boys Band presented its first concert of the season.

It is only about two months since the band was organized, and the splendid manner in which the band presented their concert goes to show that all the members are sincere in their efforts and are giving freely of their time to make the band a success.

The band consists of 34 members under the able leadership of Bill Aylesworth. Assisting in the program were, four N.C.O.'s, members of the Queen's Own Rifles Military Band, Toronto, who brought along their band instruments and assisted in the band selections. The four young men also known as the "Barber Shop Quarter", were generous in their songs appearing four times with three numbers each time.

Bandsman Barton of the quartet, played a cornet solo, "The Last Chord", which was well received.

Master of ceremonies was William Rothwell, who announced the numbers and voiced the appreciation of the band to those who turned out and also those who had contributed financially to the band.

Compliments Band

Reeve Ross Kincaid spoke briefly, complimenting the band on their progress. Bill Rothwell sang a solo, "Asleep in The Deep" which was much appreciated.

Bandsman Brintnell on behalf of the band, expressed the thanks of the boys to all, who had come out to the concert and announced that they planned to hold a series of concerts' one every month if possible.

Bandleader Bell, of Stirling Band, was in attendance and conducted the band for one selection as did Bandsman Bob Wigle, of Madoc Band.

During intermission with Bandsman Snider at the piano, Bill Aylesworth led the audience in the singing of Christmas carols.

After the concert, the members of the band and their wives and friends drove out to the home of Mrs. James Aylesworth, where they were most hospitably entertained by Mrs. Aylesworth and her sons, Bill and Bob.

Band selections were, "O Canada"; March, "Activity"; Waltz, "Chalma"; Novelty, "Stop"; March, "Military Escort"; Overture, Ambition"; Hymn, "Abide With Me", solo by Bandsman Blakely; March, "Hospitality"; "God Save The Queen".

FRANKFORD

Frankford — Mr. and Mrs. Ken Rollins, of Peterborough, visited Mr. and Mrs. George Nicolson on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Post, Messrs. Ed. Tomecek and Ray Lohnes were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes.

Miss Lois Mainprize visited her cousin, Miss Faye Smith, on Saturday.

Mr. Dean Smith called on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lohnes on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lohnes and Darlene visited Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Post, Sunday evening, the dinner hour with them.

W.M.S. Club

A number of members of the United Church 3-M Club spent Monday afternoon cleaning the church floor in preparation to supplying prewritten, Wednesday. Everyone will be looking anxiously toward the next Church Family Night, at which time Mr. Sid Martin will be able to show pictures he took of the laborers in some positions that were strictly un-posed.

The Sunbeam Mission Band of the Frankford United Church held their regular meeting in the church hall on Monday night, with 36 present. President Beth Bonisteel was in charge. Mrs. Poland read a chapter from the Study Book. The program was as follow: Piano solo by Kathleen Bonisteel, verse by Carolyn Carlisle and Vlasta Rabel, and solos by Nancy Bailey and Judy Carlisle.

The Mission Band is reminded of the Christmas program to be held on Monday, December 22, in the church hall. Parents are invited to attend the Christmas meeting.

BURGLAR ALARM STOLEN

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Owner Pat Greenberger told police someone broke into his furniture store Monday night and stole several hundred dollars worth of merchandise—and the burglar alarm.

MARSH HILL

Women's M. S. Appoints Officers

Marsh Hill — The December meeting of the Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held recently at the home of Mrs. Frank Fralick and Mrs. Leslie Finkle with 11 members and one visitor present. Mrs. Bartindale the president, gave the call to worship.

The treasurer Mrs. W. Lindenfield reported that the W.M.S. had a little more to make for the allocation. Two members reported making four hospital visits and three calls, also that 27 cards had been sent.

The supply secretary, Mrs. Dave Hollinger reported on supply work and that a bale had been sent.

Miss Mae Currie, literature secretary, reported that 12 members received the Monthly's and the study book had been sent for during the year.

Mrs. Fred Campbell, Christian Citizenship secretary, reported giving a short talk at each meeting. The associate member secretary, Mrs. Berson Mills, reported that there were seven associate members.

Report of Nominating Committee

Mrs. Fred Campbell gave the report of the nominating committee.

Mrs. Bartindale thanked all the members for helping to make the past year a success.

Miss Grace Harris sang very beautifully in Dutch, "Silent Night" after which Mrs. Fred Campbell, program convener, gave a short story of the origin of the Christmas hymn, "Silent Night". Mrs. Bartindale read "Keeping Christmas" and Mrs. W. Lindenfield read "There's Nothing New About Christmas." Miss Mae Currie favored with a solo "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne"; Mrs. Leslie Finkle read "The Bells of Bethlehem."

The worship service from the Monthly was followed the theme being, "Christmas, the Season of Birth and Re-birth," with Mrs. Frank Finkle, Mrs. Farley Lindenfield, Mrs. David Hollinger and Mrs. Leslie Finkie reading the passages of scripture.

After the benediction the patchers were taken off the silver patch apron. The verses were judged and Mrs. Hearman won the apron and $10.00 was realized from the apron. In the near future the W.M.S. members will be making a quilt from the patches.

The hostesses served refreshments.

New officers for 1953 are as follow: honorary president, Mrs Grace Bartindale; president, Miss Mae Currie; 1st vice president, Mrs. Leslie Finkle; 2nd vice president, Mrs. Allyn Finkle; literature secretary, Mrs. Bartindale; treasurer, Mrs. W. Lindenfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Finkle; community friendship secretary, Mrs. Alex Tanner; stewardship secretary, Mrs. B. Searles; recording secretary, Mrs. Leslie Finkle; supply secretary, Mrs. David Hollinger; associate members secretary, Mrs. Berson Mills; Christian citizenship secretary, Mrs. Fred Campbell; Baby Band leader, Mrs. E. B. Finkle; pianist, Mrs. B. Mills.

Modern Faith Healing Does Irreparable Harm, States Rev. G. H. Good

MADOC — Preaching in St. Bartholomew's Anglican Church, Bannockburn, last night, the Reverend G. H. Good, rector of Madoc and Bannockburn, said, "It is not faith that heals, but God, and medical science derives its knowledge from God.

"Irreparable harm is done to the lives of many people by this modern 'faith' healing which means a trail of frustration runs across the lives of hundreds after they have been buoyed up with great expectations.

"But there could be very little of this if the clergy of the established churches would bring the Master, whom they profess to serve, into the homes and lives of the people, as did the apostles.

"But many, instead of living with the living Christ, are living with the dead to a false mediaevalism. While this is the case, you will have all kinds of evil springing up under the very shadow of the church.

"A clergyman is a man called out from the world, and the least time he spends with the world and football fans, the better for his people."

FOXBORO

Women's M. S. Elects Officers

Foxboro — The December meeting of the Foxboro W.M.S. was held at the parsonage on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

Mrs. E. Sills played quiet music, after which Mrs. Shetler took charge of the meeting. Christmas carols were sung and Scripture readings given by Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Thomson, Mrs. W. Scott and Miss A. Clarke. An interesting reading was given by Mrs. S. C. Gay.

The Christmas service in the Missionary Monthly with Mrs. Shetler as leader, followed.

Mrs. H. Giffin took charge of the election of officers.

President, Mrs. Ernest Thomson; 1st. vice-president; Mrs. W. Wickett; 2nd. vice-president, Mrs. Fred Prindle; recording secretary, Mrs. W. Rodgers; assistant, Mrs. J. Daniels; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. Scott; treasurer, Mrs. E. Chambers; secretary of Church Stewardship, Mrs. Ed. Clapp and secretary of friendship, Mrs. Shetler, Mrs. Eggleton and Mrs. E. Silliq; temperance secretary, Mrs. S. C. Gay; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. C. Wilson; supply secretary, Mrs. G. Priest; Baby Band, Mrs. Johnston; pianist, Mrs. Shetler and Mrs. Giffin as assistant.

press secretary, Mrs. Fred Prindle; Mission Band leaders, Mrs. Hollinger and Mrs. Rombough.

The treasurer reported $195.00 sent to the Presbytery and over $34 on hand. A gift of $100 was given to the United Church Training School — over $249 had been raised to date, thus exceeding the allocation.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Giffin in opening her home for conducting the election of officers and also for the lovely refreshments which she served.

A vote of appreciation was tendered the retiring president, Mrs. Shetler, for her faithful services during the last two years.

DESERONTO

United Church W. A. Elects Officers

DESERONTO. — The W.A. of the United Church held its December meeting in the church parlors with ten members present.

The meeting was opened with the singing of the theme song followed by the reading of the Scripture Lesson by Mrs. Percy Stover.

The president, Mrs. J. Dawson, conducted the devotional period.

Readings by Mrs. Ken Aylsworth and Mrs. W. Crothers and singing of a hymn brought this part of the meeting to a close.

Holy Rosary Sponsors Most Successful Christmas Festival

On Wednesday evening last, the women of Holy Rosary Parish sponsored a most successful Christmas Festival at the Knights of Columbus rooms. The hall was beautifully decorated, and the display tables were filled with lovely things for the festive season. Mrs. H. Brown president, and Mrs. D. Huffman convener greeted the guests, while Mrs. O'Carroll and Mrs. J. Braddon took the admission tickets.

Beautiful Angel Cake

The centre piece of the home-cooking table was a beautiful angel cake donated by Mrs. J. Belanger, and was won by Mrs. F. O'Connell. Mrs. G. Lee, Mrs. W. Lynch and Mrs. G. Brownson were in charge of the sale of tickets on this cake. The table was laden with many other delicacies which were all a treat to the eyes, it was convened by Mrs. J. Fobert, and assisted by Mrs. E. Reid and Miss Shirley O'Carroll.

The fancy work table was convened by Mrs. J. Snider assisted by Mrs. H. Glen, Mrs. M. Walsh, Mrs. F. Daley, Mrs. H. Lyon, and Mrs. R. Mossman. There were many lovely articles, including fancy work, aprons, dolls, knitting goods, and a child's taffeta hand smocking dress donated by Mrs. R. Loveless was drawn for by Mrs. J. Barrett and won by Mrs. R. Rolston.

The lunch and tea table was one of the main attractions to the children, and was soon left bare. This was convened by Mrs. J. Hogan, assisted by Mrs. W. Smith and Mrs. L. Farrell.

Attractive Candy

The candy was convened by Mrs. R. Loveless, and assisted by Mrs. E. Schriebel, Mrs. J. Eves, and Mrs. L. Donovan, attractively arranged and soon was devoured.

Mrs. J. Belanger was the lunch room convener, assisted by Mrs. R. McCullough, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. P. Tomaso, Mrs. J. Eliard. Refreshments included hot dogs, home made pies, and coffee, with Mrs. M. Carter in charge.

There was a beautiful watch donated which was drawn for, and won by Miss Diane Rivard, 3 Reynolds Crescent. Mrs. R. Rolston was in charge of tickets.

The junior Children of Mary sold tickets on a lovely hand made cushion. Miss Donna Mary Belanger was in charge of these, and it was won by Mrs. R. Scott, 11 Mikel ave. Also a hand made handkerchief of fine linen donated by Mrs. Celina Doyle was won by Miss Grace Masterson.

The senior Children of Mary sold tickets on a nun doll of extreme beauty. This doll is a Paris original, and was won by Rev. Fr. Michael Simson. Miss Arlene Glen was in charge of this raffle.

The draw for door prizes concluded the evening with the bushel of apples, won by Mrs. F. Connell. Two gallons of Anti Freeze was won by Mrs. P. Tomaso. Silver butter dish was won by Donna May.

With Santa Claus in attendance, he was kept busy with his little girls and boys, giving out prizes and candies to all. Christmas spirit prevailed throughout the evening as the all boy orchestra played Christmas Carols—consisting of: Herbert, Richard and Robert Brown, Jimmy Bay and Larry May.

Many thanks to all those who so kindly donated prizes, and to all those who helped in any way to make this event such a huge success.

MINTO

Mr. and Mrs. V. Hagerman and Mac, were Friday evening visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orval Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Breedman of Shannonville, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Bedell.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clements of Ivanhoe, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Courtney.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Jackson and Mr. Nathan Sine were supper guests of Mr and Mrs. Frank McGee on Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Herrington and boys, of Toronto, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Will Donald.

Several from this community attended the funeral of the late Francis Reid, of Halloway, on Tuesday afternoon. Sympathy is extended to the family.

Glad to report Mr. B. A. Tucker is improving.

WINS ACQUITTAL

TORONTO (CP)—Garry Evans, 21, of Claremont, appealing against his conviction on a charge of arson, won an acquittal Tuesday before the Ontario Supreme Court. Evans was sentenced by Magistrate F. S. Ebbs at Oshawa last September to six months definite and six months indeterminate after a $7,000 barn was destroyed in Uxbridge township. "All the evidence of the crown witnesses showed that the fire was caused accidentally," Chief Justice J. W. Pickup said.

GOVERNMENT

Government spokesmen have said they favor national health insurance but don't think the country has enough facilities to handle it.

Highlight of the day's debate was an exchange between James Sinclair, new minister of fisheries, and Ron Thatcher, outspoken CCF member for Moose Jaw who has been criticized by the CCF for not always adhering to the party line.

Mr. Thatcher said the government could cut $375,000,000 off the "dangerous" tax load Canadians now carry, by slashing sales, personal income and corporation taxes. He said high taxes are bleeding business while and blunting its initiative.

The latter assertion brought from Mr. Sinclair the observation that Mr. Thatcher's argument was unusual for one of his party and he wondered if it was party policy.

He said Mr. Thatcher could be termed a "business tycoon"—because since the end of the war he has expanded his lone Moose Jaw hardware store into a chain of stores.

Mr. Sinclair, formerly parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, said only about $700,000,000 of the present $4,500,000,000 federal budget corresponded to 1939 government expenditures. Defence, social security, payments to the provinces and the national debt took up the rest.

Therefore, he argued, government spending was about equal to 1939.

Sees Trouble Ahead

C. E. Johnston (SC—Bow River) said Canada's economy is founded on the synthetic floor of the defence effort. If "peace was declared" tomorrow there would be trouble. He saw dangerous signs already in the fact that 100,000 Canadians were out of work and farm prices were dropping.

Mr. Blackmore, moving the Social Credit amendment, said the world's main problems today are monetary. Money should be the servant of man, not the master. This could be done by the simple expedient of balancing the flow of money with the flow of goods. This would halt the overbalances that cause inflations and depressions.

Labor Delegation Asks Govt. Aid for Implement Industry Hard Hit in Four Ont. Cities

OTTAWA (CP) — A labor delegation has told the government that hundreds of workers are losing their jobs in Canada's slumping farm machinery industry, and has asked for aid to both the industry and the unemployed.

C. H. Millard, Canadian head of the United Steelworkers, said Wednesday four Ontario cities — Hamilton, Toronto, Woodstock and Brantford—have been hit by the production and employment slump.

He headed a 16-man delegation which suggested, in a meeting with four cabinet ministers, gifts of tractors and other farm implements to underdeveloped countries, federal public works projects in Brantford and Woodstock — the hardest-hit areas — and a tariff probe into the possibility that the implements industry may be a monopoly, fixing prices at such levels that sales were reduced.

Will Consider Proposals

Labor Minister Gregg said the government will consider the proposals. He added, however, that if there are any jobless steelworkers next year they will be able to find jobs easily in such big projects as the St. Lawrence seaway and the Kitimat, B. C., aluminum development.

Th delegation, representing the steel and auto workers unions, charged that the farm implement industry is dominated by three companies and is actually following monopoly practices.

Justice Minister Garson said he would consider the suggestion of an investigation under anti-combines laws.

1,000 Laid Off

Mr. Millard said that in Brantford, more than 1,000 of the 2,900-odd Massey-Harris employees have been laid off and the foundry is on a four-day week.

"The tractor plant at the Massey-Harris Company in Woodstock is to all intents and purposes closed down," he added. "Seventy-five-per-cent of the 250 employees have been laid off with little prospect of recall."

The Massey-Harris Company had laid off more than 1,000 of its Toronto employees in July, but had recalled them. In Hamilton, the International Harvester Company had laid off 400 since August.

Nationalist Air Force Transport Crashes, 31 Dead

Taipeh, Formosa (AP) — A Nationalist Chinese Air Force transport has crashed into a mountainside near Taipeh and killed 31 persons, including two women and three children, it was reported today.

The victims included 26 members of the air force. The women and children were dependents of air force personnel.

Air force headquarters said the plane was en route Monday to Taipeh from Pingtung, a Second World War Japanese air base in southern Formosa.

The pilot ran into bad weather and the plane smashed into a mountainside.

7,000 Gallons Of Gas Spilled On Main Street

TRUCKEE, Calif. (AP) — The menace of a conflagration kept this mountain town in fearful suspense for two hours early today after 7,000 gallons of gasoline spilled down a quarter mile of the main street.

All traffic was stopped for fear a match or cigaret from a car might touch off a terrible fire.

A large tanker truck overturned and spilled its inflammable cargo. The driver had swerved to avoid a collision with another tanker.

The U. S. forest service, California highway patrol and Truckee fire department teamed to wash the gasoline off the main street.

Truckee — population 1,625 — is at the foot of Donner pass, about 35 miles west of Reno.

SOOTY FOG KILLS LIVESTOCK

The cold fog that covered southern England and parts of Europe brought inconvenience to millions. Hardest hit by the dampness were farm animals, hundreds of which are reported to have succumbed to respiratory ailments aggravated by the soot in the fog. These sheep, in spite of their heavy wool coat, need an extra covering to keep warm as they appeared at a London livestock show. Eleven prize pedigreed cattle choked to death at the show. President-Elect Near Honolulu On Way Home

By DON WHITEHEAD

ABOARD USS HELENA (AP)—Rested and relaxed, President-elect Eisenhower arrives in Honolulu today for more of the vital conferences that will shape United States policy in the far east.

Eisenhower will remain until the week-end, then fly to his New York headquarters. Shortly thereafter he will meet with Gen. MacArthur to discuss the latter's views for shortening the Korean war. That meeting probably will be held early next week, said a source close to the president-elect.

Eisenhower did not comment on President Truman's statement "if anyone has a reasonable plan for ending the Korean fighting . . that plan should be presented at once to the President." He did not name MacArthur, but his press secretary Roger Tubby said there was no question that the general was meant.

Clear on Solution

Last Friday in New York MacArthur told the National Association of Manufacturers "I am confident there is a clear and definite solution to the Korean conflict."

He did not say he had any plan in so many words.

In a message exchange, Eisenhower and MacArthur agreed to meet in discuss Korean strategy.

On hand to meet Eisenhower at Pearl Harbor will be defence secretary-designate Charles E. Wilson, who will report on his military conferences in Honolulu with Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Admiral Arthur W. Radford, navy commander in the Pacific.

Plan Cancelled

An earlier plan to have Wilson fly to the Helena by helicopter was cancelled.

The main Helena conferences ended at noon yesterday, although there were brief and informal discussions Wednesday night. The entire party relaxed during the afternoon.

A source close to the president-elect said Eisenhower and his advisers are all pleased with the progress of the talks and the development of a broad policy outline for attacking the Korean war situation.

LIGHTS FOR SAFETY

LONDON (CP)—Mounted police carried lights for the first time in regular service when they escorted the 2nd battalion Coldstream Guards on a recent march through the city. Use of such lights has increased since last year's accident at Chatham when 23 marching naval cadets were killed.

Youth Sentenced To be Hanged For Part in Murder

LONDON (Reuters) — Derek Bentley, 19, accomplice of a 16-year-old boy who shot and killed a policeman in a rooftop gun battle was sentenced today to be hanged for his part in the murder.

Christopher Craig, the boy who fired the shot, was ordered to be detained indefinitely "during the Queen's pleasure." He was saved from the gallows by British law which sets the minimum age for hanging at 18.

The two-day trial centred largely around Craig, described by his defence lawyer as "a symbol of wayward youth." He and Bentley were surprised by police as they clambered over a factory roof.

Craig pulled a .45-calibre revolver and blazed away at the unarmed police. "Just like the films" he told the court.

Police finally sent for a gun. After a few shots were exchanged Craig shot a constable between the eyes and leaped off the roof. Bentley already had been captured.

The judge, Lord Justice Goddard, told baby-faced Craig, "You are one of the most dangerous young criminals that has ever stood in the dock."

"It is quite obvious that people in this country will not be safe while you are at large."

"Your heart was full of hate when you murdered that policeman, without thought for his wife and his family or himself. And never once have you expressed a word of sorrow for what you have done."

British Officer Says Sergeant Helped Japs

NEW YORK (AP) — A British officer says John David Provoo, former army sergeant on trial for treason, urged fellow prisoners to co-operate with their Japanese captors on broadcasting enemy propaganda.

The officer, Charles R. F. Williams, now stationed in Uganda, British East Africa, testified Wednesday that Provoo led the move to have a part of every broadcast for the Japanese.

As one of the objectors, Williams said, he was forced to stand facing a wall for 11 hours, given five days' solitary confinement and transferred to a labor camp.

Provoo is accused of going over to the Japanese side after the fall of Corregidor in 1942 and contributing toward punishment of fellow prisoners. If convicted he could be sentenced to death. Provoo contends that anything he did was under duress.

PLAN TOURIST FLIGHTS

JOHANNESBURG (CP)—South African Airways will introduce tourist-class air flights next year on the Johannesburg-London route. The flights will be 23-per-cent cheaper than existing rates and will be effective Oct. 1, 1953.

N.S. Senator Offers Economies To Cut UN Budget 48 Millions By Less Waste, Extravagance

By NORMAN ALISTEDTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (CP) A Canadian senator-business man is helping shape the United Nations budget for 1953.

He favors a paring-knife rather than an ax.

Senator Gordon B. Isnor of Nova Scotia has many suggestions for lightening UN expenditures that will amount to about $48,000,000 next year.

But he believes drastic economies cannot be made on "a strictly business basis across the board because of the international complications involved.

While Isnor is new to international diplomacy, he was a Liberal member of the Nova Scotia legislature for seven years. During his 15 years in the Commons at Ottawa he served on finance committees and was chairman of the war expenditures board.

Maritime Businessman

Isnor was appointed to the Senate in 1950. He owns a small chain of men's-wear stores in the Maritime provinces.

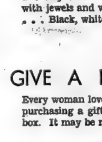
As Canada's representative on the budgetary committee of the general assembly, Isnor is pressing the Canadian policy of continuing examination of the UN budget to eliminate "waste, extravagance, overlaps and duplication."

In next year's budget, Canada's bill is cut from 3.35 to 3.30 per cent of the total. Last year Canada paid $1,458,490. Isnor noted this with favor in committee but expressed concern that Canada might some day be called on to pay more per capita than the United States, which will pay 33.1 per cent of next year's budget, or about $15,000,000. Both Canada and the U.S. now contribute about 10 cents per capita.

Persuades Colleague

Isnor took on a diplomatic role in helping persuade Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican from Wisconsin, to accept the committee's recommendations for the U.S. share. Wiley wanted the U.S. bill cut to 33.3 per cent this year, but the committee said it should be 35.12 per cent until 1954.

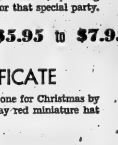
Later Isnor and Wiley ganged up on the Russian delegation by expressing surprise at the contrast between Russian claims of vast economic development, and fierce Soviet objection to any boost in its contributions. Russia's bill was raised from 9.85 to 13.28 per cent.



Agree on Match

LONDON (Reuters)—Promoter Jack Solomons said today that Sugar Ray Robinson and Randolph Turpin have agreed to meet next June for Robinson's world middleweight title.

QUESTIONS EVIDENCE



STRATFORD (CP)—Mr. Justice D. F. J. Kelly Wednesday recommended that the testimony of Arthur J. Quast of Mitchell, defendant in a lawsuit, be investigated with a view to prosecution on a charge of perjury. Mr. Justice Kelly found Quast responsible for a highway accident and awarded damages totalling $2,452 to Mrs. Elizabeth Craig and William Dunmore of St. Pauls and Patrick Hart of London. He dismissed a counter claim by Quast.

Chinese Serve A Wonderful Time

The Chinese crowd is very lively. In North America we're accustomed to the idea of lymphatic Chinese opium smokers. But the Chinese of Peking are, animated and effervescent. They like noise and music, torches, parades, costumes and uniforms. They seem to be having a wonderful time and they don't hide their pride in the fact that so many foreigners have come such a long way to admire them. The parade therefore, was a good thing and expressed a real feeling of strength.

In a People's Democracy a holiday wouldn't be complete unless the workers had a big part in it. They had their place in the parade, marchingly past according to their trade and factories. They paraded with samples of the articles and machines they had made. The whole business went off with a great deal of singing, shouting, commands and clenched fists.

The parade wound up with gymnasts and theatre groups. Young girls in shorts and sweaters contrasted oddly with the old women whom you see toddling everywhere around the city on their bound and crippled feet.

It was all over at 2 p.m. Half a million Chinese had paraded past us in four hours.

Better Than Hitler

In 1937 I watched the Nazis and fascists on parade. I've seen the German's goose-step and the Italians sing the glories of Mussolini. But I think parades have improved in the last 15 years. The one I saw at Peking was a little more successful than those which used to be seen on the Via de L'Impero in Rome or on the Unter den Linden in Berlin.

I said as much to some of the other foreign spectators. The non-Communists agreed with me. But the Communists seemed to be quite offended by the comparison. I particularly remember good old Nazim Hikmet, a Turkish poet who was living in Moscow. He spent a good five minutes telling me the difference between a Communist and a Nazi parade. According to him, Hitler stole the idea of the spontaneous demonstration from the Reds. He told me that Communist parades, even if they are preceded by a military show of strength, are inspired by the idea of peace, while Nazi parades....

It just goes to show that two people can witness the same event and draw entirely different conclusions from it.

But still: there are certain times when Picasso's dove shows its vulture's beak and claws.

LATTA

LATTA — Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Treverton spent a night recently with Mr. and Mrs. Dilts.

A bazaar was held in the hall at Plainfield on Tuesday afternoon. Proceeds amounted to $115, which was very gratifying.

The W. I. met at the home of Mrs. Archie Meeks on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. W. Ford, Mrs. Lee Gould of Belleville and Mr. Floyd Gould of U. S. A., called Wednesday afternoon at the Hamilton and Wilder home.

Miss Helen McFarland of Desaronto spent a few days recently with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall.

Miss Marilyn Meeks is convalescing at her home.

Miss Verna Carleton of Oshawa and Verne Baker of Belleville spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. E. Carleton.

Mr. Jack Carleton and Miss Margaret Carleton of Oshawa spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Carleton.

Other guests on Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Carleton's were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carleton and family of Wallbridge for tea. Misses Marjory, Patricia and Verne Baker of Belleville on Sunday for tea. Mr. Jack Carleton and Miss Margaret Carleton returned to Oshawa on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Armstrong of Bellleville spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beatty. Mr. Clare Meeks of Toronto spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Archie Meeks and family.

Mr. Kenneth Kleinsteuber, Mrs. W. Elliott and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hazard called on Mr. and Mrs. Almond Hall on Sunday evening at Point Anne.

ISRAELI SKIPPER

Hours later the operator replied: "Will be unable follow your orders as captain holding me at pistol point."

Complained of Mutiny

Later messages from the master demanded the arrest of all high officials of the ministry and another complained of an attempted mutiny by the crew.

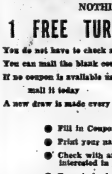
There was silence and the situation aboard the ship remained a mystery until the skipper was landed here yesterday.

Gratz's father, H. R. Gratz, is one of the owners of M. Dizengoff and Co., the line to which the ship belongs.

He flew to New York from Israel following receipt of the first messages and early today arrived in Montreal en route to Halifax to see his son.

The tug Foundation Vera met the freighter 15 miles out of Halifax and Capt. Fred Turner said Gratz came aboard without incident and appeared "quite normal" during conversations on the return trip.

Crew members of the tug did not know the nature of their trip and were under the impression that there was some sort of illness aboard the freighter.



Treated As Sick

Immigration officers here said Gratz will be treated as a "sick mariner" under international regulations which provide him with the best available treatment and accommodation until he is returned to his native land.

At first it was reported that he had been admitted to a hospital but later it was discovered that he had gone to a hotel.

Hotel officials said he hadn't registered but declined to say whether Gratz, described as a tense and the British blockade of Israel when nervous type, learned his seaman- ship as skipper of ships running he new state was fighting for recognition.

Labor Closing Out Year Volcanic in Spots, Made Some Gains, Stalled Elsewhere

By JOHN LESLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian labor is closing a year that was more dynamic in spots but generally marked by unspectacular progress.

Organized labor has some objectives, made gains toward others, was stalled toward others. By and large, it moved ahead.

The national wage average pushed to successive peaks month after month, under labor impetus. Union membership swelled to record figures. The base of union organization was broadening into new fields.

The biggest headline-snatching development of 1952 was the payoff in the bloodless coup out of the CBRE and this was followed by Mosher's resignation as boss. Pat Conroy was elected honorary president. Mosher went on to get re-elected as president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, which he founded in 1940.

Late in the year, talk of organic unity among all factions of the approximately 1,100,000 workers in organized Canadian labor gained new strength. This was stirred by suggestions of an AFL-CIO amalgamation in the United States, which would put pressure on their Canadian associates.

But there were no active steps towards liaison in Canada, though Mosher's 370,000-member TLC was warm for affiliation with the 525,000-member Windsor and Labor Congress. During the year, the TLC moved a few degrees farther away from confederation.

The stand of smaller central labor bodies towards amalgamation was not made known.

On wages, unions generally maintained to move ahead during the year.

Big Wage Dispute

But as the 1952 close neared, the country's biggest wage dispute was still unsettled. That was the struggle between the railways and unions representing 144,000 non-operating employees, the largest bargaining group in Canada. The same group staged the paralyzing rail strike of 1950, but the question of a strike was not raised in the current fight.

During the year, the voice of communism faded further in unions. The big central bodies had cleared out all but the minor fringe of fiends.

Another move in this tough fight was a clean-up of the leftist-ridden Canadian section of the United Textile Workers of America (AFL). Its top Canadian leadership was expelled and supplanted by anti-Red officers.

Unions made inroads into the government-employee field during the year. The TLC signed up about 5,000 workers in the federal government's unemployment insurance commission, breaking new ground. It also issued a charter for a federation of around 20,000 municipal employees across the country. -

Public School Skating Dates Are Announced

Dates of free skating for public school students at Memorial Arena, and group divisions, were released by the Recreational Director, Lloyd "Red" Doran.

Due to the large number of children attending school, it was deemed advisable to break the number down into groups, thus facilitating supervision and assuring proper accommodation.

The sessions will be held from 4.30 to 6.00 p.m. on the dates which follow. If the system does not prove satisfactory, the necessary changes will be made.

Group One includes pupils attending up to and including Grade Five. Group Two takes in Grades 6 to 8 inclusive.

Tues. Dec. 16, Group One; Mon. Jan. 5, Group Two; Tues. Jan. 7, Group One; Tues. Jan. 13, Group Two; Wed. Jan. 14, Group One; Tues. Jan. 20, Group Two; Fri. Jan. 23, Group One; Mon. Jan. 26, Group Two; Thurs. Jan. 27, Group One.

Arrangements have been made for proper supervision. However, parents' presence if possible should be appreciated as it is expected a large number of the total school registration will take advantage of the free skating.

A schedule for the month of February will be announced the first of the coming New Year.

Time for Snowmen, Snowballing But Ingredients Are Missing

The season for building snowmen and snowballing is here, or at least the time of year for it is around. All that is missing are the ingredients. Everywhere, the public is dreaming of a white Christmas and judging by the weather report, that could be exactly the case.

Try and build a snowman this weather, or knock off a few top hats with a projectile of snow. It would be a rather frustrating experience, to say the least. Since Tuesday, rain has fallen to the extent of 1.56 inches, according to reports received from the Purification Plant. The latest weather report for this area forecasts temperatures to a high of 30 degrees and a low of 25. Yesterday a high was attained of 50 degrees. This is December we are talking about, not March or April.

Out of it all comes one consoling factor. In the past 10 years, there have only been 3 Christmas Days whereon there was no snow. Exactly 10 years ago this December 25, there was no need for snowboots, because there was no snow. On the present Christmas, rubbers would have sufficed. The records show there was only a trace of snow upon the ground.

The year 1944, the year of the great blizzard, skis and snowshoes were the style for Christmas in the footwear line. In 1945, there was a snowfall two inches the night Santa Claus came to town. The years 1946 and 1947 there was one-half inch and two inches respectively, and in 1948 there was one inch of snow Santa Claus put wheels on his sleigh in 1949. Snow that Christmas was conspicuous by its absence. In 1950, put runners back on to cover the big inches of snow and last year he floundered through 28 inches to visit local children.

PSYCHOLOGICALLY BAD

LONDON (CP)—A nursery school here imposed a ban on toy guns when some of the 80 pupils arrived at school with toy guns to play cowboys and Indians. An inspector said it was psychologically bad for kiddies to get the feel of toys that looked so much like the real thing.

Damage Suits Planned May Total 25 Million

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (CP)—Damage suits planned as a result of high water in Lake Ontario will total at least $25,000,000, a Rochester lawyer says.

Norman Atterby, president of the Lake Ontario South Shore Land and Beach Protective Association, was among a dozen lawyers representing owners of property along the lake's south shore who met Wednesday to plan prosecution of claims against the United States government and Canada for high water damage.

The shore residents contend that a gut dam—built by Canada in the St. Lawrence river—contributes to the high water level.

Canada now is removing the dam in a step preliminary to building the St. Lawrence seaway development.

Atterby said the lawyers planned to name New York state and Ontario as additional defendants.

House Briefs

OTTAWA (CP)—Revenue Minister McCann reported in the Commons that 20,327,648 United States cigarets have been seized in Canada since Jan. 1, 1951. In a written reply Wednesday to C. D. Coyle (PC — Elgin), Dr. McCann said 1,025 persons have been fined $12,645 for smuggling American cigarets into Canada.

OTTAWA (CP)—Approximately $1,000,000 worth of civil defence equipment and supplies have been distributed to the provinces by federal civil defence authorities, it was disclosed Wednesday in a reply tabled in the Commons by C.D. Coyle (PC—Elgin). The equipment and supplies included air raid sirens, respirators, steel helmets, coveralls and bandages.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Car and Foundry Company has produced 219 Harvard training planes since July 1, 1951, Defence Production Minister Howe said in a reply for C. E. White (PC—Hastings-Peterborough). Most of the work on the first 40 planes was done at St. Laurent, Que.; the remainder at Fort William.

New Approach To Weigh Scales Almost Complete

A new sooth approach to the weigh scales building on Pinnacle Street was being surfaced by the public works department today.

Acting on the recommendation of a weights and measures department official who claimed that a longer approach to the weigh scales was necessary, city workmen took out several parking meters along Pinnacle Street. The street's approach was widened and today asphalt paving was being laid.

The improvements will allow heavy trucks easier approach to the scales. They will now enter the scales on a straight approach rather than on a short angle as before.

ONE FOR LUCK

DARTFORD, England (CP) — Town clerk Thomas Armstrong expects five babies to be born in this Kent district Coronation day. Asked how he arrived at the figure, Armstrong said: "I worked out the average number of births in Dartford one day, then added one for luck."

U.S. POLITICAL

British officials are concerned over the new rules. They fear that the screening may cause major delays in the sailing schedules of big British liners.

In London Wednesday a spokesman said the Cunard line's Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, with crews of almost 2,000 each, will be especially inconvenienced. The line estimates the screening will take four minutes per man.

As a step to prevent delays, the U. S. justice department said, special immigration inspectors will be placed aboard some of the big passenger liners to question the crew during the crossing. In the case of the Queens, the inspectors would be flown to London and accommodated on the voyage back at the expense of the line.

Britain nevertheless was expected to lodge a formal protest.

The first immigration inspector left New York Tuesday aboard the French liner Liberte to begin the questioning.

During the Second World War, U. S. officials screened those aboard neutral vessels arriving at American ports before allowing them shore privileges. Intelligence officers checked passports and interrogated the visitors about their background and political affiliations. Those found to be unsatisfactory were required to stay on the ships while in port.

FINED FOR GAMBLING

TORONTO (CP)—A total of $2,700 in fines was imposed Wednesday on 33 Toronto business men and a home owner in suburban North York township who were arrested when police raided a craps game Monday night. John Argier, 36, owner of the house, was jailed for 19 days and fined $200 for keeping

Williams Adds to Lead

DETROIT (CP)—Governor G. Mennen Williams, Democrat, continued to add to his election night majority of 8,618 votes as the governorship recount in 34 Michigan counties neared the end of its third day.

The recount was requested by supporters of the defeated Republican candidate, Fred M. Alger Jr., secretary of state.

Governor Williams Wednesday showed a net gain of 167 votes in the 267 precincts counted. Some 3,463 precincts will be covered by the check. Other precincts have voting machines.

Belleville Moiras Trounce Trenton In Basketball Tilt

Belleville Moiras staged a rousing fourth-quarter rally last night to down Trenton Whit Confeds in an Intermediate "B" Bay of Quinte basketball game, 56-43. The tilt was played in the B.C.I. gymnasium.

Moiras trailed their opponents throughout the first half, finally got even at the end of third quarter and then feed it in the final 10 minutes.

The visitors jumped into a 14-11 lead in the first minute and still were on top 24-23 at half time. After that they were washed on a tight rope that finally collapsed beneath them.

Nabmy Batchelor was the big gun of the winners, potting 18 points. Allen Hayman scored 13 points through the hoop, followed by Doug Soule with nine.

Help paced the Trenton squad with 14 points, followed by W. Whitley and M. Jeffreys, who racked up eight apiece.

The win gave Moiras sole possession of first place in the league.

The lineups:

Belleville — Muirhead (2), Soule (9), Lockyer (5), Dowsett (3), Batchelor (18), Hayman (13), Spiegal, Garrow (1), Massey (3), Pappas (1) and Watson (2).

Trenton — M. Jeffreys (3), Tripp and Holt (14), W. Whitley (8), T. Whitley (4), D. Whitley, Blinson, Ebbier (6), Wash, Hancock, Mc-Gregge (4), R. Jeffrey and Burley.

Referee: Bellerby. Umpire: Thomas; scorer: T. Batchelor; timer: D. Dodley

Sixth Ruling Queen Bears Crushing, Inevitable Burden

Queen and princesses are often reminded in the public mind with exotic sweetness and the pageantry of state occasions. There is more to their job than that. This story, one of a series, explains the rights and duties of the Queen in our constitutional monarchy.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Elizabeth II, Britain's sixth ruling Queen and 40th sovereign since the Norman conquest, bears a crushing and inevitable burden.

Crowds who cheer her public appearances seldom think of the tremendous duties and responsibilities which history and tradition confer.

The Queen is more than a figurehead, despite the saying that in modern times the sovereign reigns but does not rule. She is the embodiment of an ideal developed by 1,000 years of struggle among the monarchy and nobles, Parliament, church and people.

Ancient Institution

The monarchy is the United Kingdom's most ancient institution, its continuity broken only in Cromwell's time. There have been interruptions in the line of succession, but the monarchical principle is not abandoned. Elizabeth, for instance, is a descendant of a Saxon King, Egbert, who united all England in 828.

The Queen carries on a line unbroken for 250 years from George I. She has blood of Tudors and Yorks; Kings of France and Spain; dukes of Normandy, Anjou and Saxony; and Charlemagne, King of the Franks. She is the first Queen to succeed her father in direct natural succession to the throne.

As the personification of the state, she is the supreme authority in law; head of the judiciary in England, Wales and Scotland the titular head of the army, navy and air forces; head of the established Church of England; and nominally sole representative of the nation in international affairs.

Paramount Authority

She may send ambassadors and ministers abroad and receive those from foreign countries. She alone can enter into treaties, declare war, make peace. As paramount authority in the kingdom, she summons, prorogues and dissolves Parliament. Her assent is required before any bill becomes law.

In royal terms, she is the "fountain of honor, the fountain of justice, the fountain of mercy," attributes which are reflected in various phases of the Coronation next June.

She has many incidental rights. All treasure trove is her exclusive property, as are whales and sturgeon caught in territorial waters and white swans in open rivers. She decides when salutes are to be fired, what the royal arms should be, and has some right of interest in the Bible, book of common prayer and state documents.

The royal will is expressed in many ways—by orders-in-council by order, commission of warrant under the sign manual; and by proclamation. She appoints ministers or other documents under the Great Seal, affixed by the Lord Chancellor in obedience to a royal warrant countersigned by a minister.

Well-Informed Ruler

Although sovereignty is exercised by the Queen in Parliament, rather than by the Queen in person, ministerial responsibility does not detract from the sovereign's participation in the smooth functioning of government. The Queen must be informed on every aspect of national life. On more than one occasion, her grasp of affairs is said to have impressed persons outside the court circle.

Elizabeth, finally, is leader of society by queen of general precedence dating from the 14th century.

There is one other detail—she can never retire.

A court official said:

"The postman, the civil servant, in fact any ordinary person, knows that on reaching 60 or 65 years of age he is free to retire and spend the rest of his life growing roses. But the sovereign, short of abdication, must remain a sovereign to the end."

In Westminster Abbey

CONFIDENCE IN IKE

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Dave Beck, president of the 1,250,000-member AFL Teamsters Union, said Tuesday night in an interview that bonafide labor unions haven't anything to fear from President-elect Eisenhower. Beck cited Eisenhower's designation of Martin P. Durkin, AFL union official, as secretary of labor, as evidence "the president-elect have consecrated themselves to the destruction of labor" or not guiding the president-elect's hand.

Admiralty Arch

The monarchy is the United Kingdom's most ancient institution. There have been interruptions in the line of succession but the heredity principle is not abandoned. Much of the brilliant pageantry of the past, such as the coronation services dates back centuries. Queen Elizabeth will ride in this same royal coach, shown passing Admiralty Arch, as did her father King George VI and Queen Mother Elizabeth in 1937 following his coronation. — (CP Photo.)

MARMORA

Marmora — Great success attended the holding of the bazaar in St. Paul's Parish Hall by St. Paul's Ladies' Guild on Friday afternoon and evening.

Despite the unfavorable weather there was a large attendance.

The newly renovated hall presented a gay appearance with its Christmas festoons.

Receiving at the door were Mesdames J. M. Brownlie, D. E. Robertson and T. Pearce, wives of the rector and church wardens respectively.

The many artistically arranged tables were staffed as follows: Home cooking, Mrs. R. Hewitt, Mrs. C. Cronkright and Miss M. Robinson; candy table, Mrs. W. Deering; bazaar table, Mesdames W. Leonard, A. Eggleton, J. Davidson and C. Neal; parcel post Mrs. Gus Leonard and Mrs. Claud Nichol; apron table, Mrs. R. G. Winters and Mrs. Clayton Bedore; girls' auxiliary table, Misses Annette Provost, Patricia Spry, Anne Marie Bedore, Jean Provost and Madeline Frost; fish pond, Misses Sandra Neash, Josephine Price, Eva Keating, Dorothy Phillips and Ruth Spry; fancy table, Mesdames C. Waiting on tea tables were: Mesdames S. Yorke, W. D. Lawander, C. M. Bullard, G. Shaw, C. Nickle, P. Gray and Miss Jennie Jones.

At 8.30 a card party was held with honors going to the following: euchre, Mrs. E. Maloney, Mrs. C. E. Jones; bridge, Miss Maud Robinson, playing as man, Mrs. Donald McIntyre.

Door prizes were won as follows: Miss M. Savage, George Aunger and Mrs. C. V. Wallace.

Drawings were won by: Mrs. I. B. Nichol, quilt; Susan Corrigan, Christmas cake.

Mrs. Melville, of Campbellford, is visiting Mrs. I. B. Nichol.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jarvis moved into their new residence on North Hastings Avenue, on Saturday.

CANADA'S POPULATION MAY BE 30 MILLION BY 1975

... FUTURE DEPENDS ON INVESTMENT OF SAVINGS says Dominion Bank President

ROBERT RAE
President

Canada's national income has again achieved a new peak. The physical volume of production has also broken all records. The 1952 crop of wheat and coarse grains has surpassed that of any previous year. Export trade has been greater than ever before, both in dollar value and in physical volume. Capital investment in new plant and equipment has established a new record. Retail sales have been buoyant. The cost of living is much the same as it was a year ago. This means that the Canadian people are now living more comfortably than ever before.

The current rate of population growth is striking evidence of the faith which native-born Canadians, and new Canadians coming from abroad, have in this country's future. During the past twelve months the number of persons in Canada increased by no less than three per cent—a high rate of growth. If this rate of population increase is maintained, Canada will have nearly 30 million people by 1975—more than 50 per cent greater than at present.

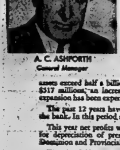
Unfortunately, there are influences at work which mitigate against this. During the next few years family formation resulting from past marriages is likely to be at a lower rate than in the recent past. Another factor is Canada's lack of a positive and expansive immigration programme. This lack is a cause as wealthy and underpopulated as Canada, is to be deplored on both social and economic grounds.

Canada has ample space for a larger population. There can be comfort and economic security for all. But we can only have comfort and security if we work for them. We must continue to save and invest on a substantial, indeed, an increasing scale. We must keep up the present rate of technological progress. We can do this, if we have the will. I am confident that, in the days to come, Canadians will achieve a living standard much higher than that to which we are now accustomed.

The strength of the Canadian dollar in the foreign exchange markets during the past year has been a source of pride to most Canadians. But for some of our largest and most important industries—mining, pulp, newsprint and lumbering—it has also been a source of real embarrassment. Therefore, I think we should regard as a healthy influence the recent lessening of the foreign exchange premium on our currency. A considerable volume of consumer purchasing power within this country is still dependent on sales of our export industries. To-day, Canada markets abroad one-fifth of her total output.

The inward flow of capital from abroad which has been a marked feature of our economy since 1950 has made a substantial contribution to Canada's industrial expansion. But the proportion of new capital investment financed with funds from outside has not been as large as many people think. Canadians have subscribed from their own savings nearly four dollars for each dollar invested in Canada by non-residents.

The discount on U.S. dollars has enlarged the outward flow of capital from Canada, so that no one yet knows accurately the relative importance of these two movements this year. It will not be surprising if for the whole of 1952 the inward and outward flows nearly neutralize one another, leaving only a small net movement.



Since the net movement of capital this year will be small, it is apparent that the continuing inflow of capital has not been mainly responsible for the Canadian dollar selling at a premium in New York. The principal reason has been the improvement in our merchandise trade position.

During the past four years, while Canadians were saving 8½ cents out of every dollar of personal income, the people of Britain—faced with unprecedented need for the rebuilding and modernization of plant, equipment and housing—could only save one cent out of each dollar, due to the character and burden of taxation. Practically all of British investment during the postwar period has come from government funds and from corporate savings. In these fields also the rate of savings in the United Kingdom has been somewhat less than in Canada.

We Canadians may learn much from the present plight of Britain. The load of taxes which burdens us is less heavy than the load burdening the British people. The fiscal system here is less harmful toward enterprise than the fiscal system in Britain.

For long years past, even in Canada, there has been an insidious growth in the cost of government. There has been a tendency to penalize risk-taking and enterprise. The marvel is that our Canadian economy, nevertheless, now grows as fast as it does. The danger is that if we continue to discourage effort and enterprise, we may seriously retard the rate of our growth.

Canada is rich in resources. The long-term prospects are bright. Developments now under way will increase greatly the range and volume of materials which the world needs and must have, and which Canada will be able to supply in fair and competitive prices. If risk-taking and enterprise are encouraged, if Canadians are given an incentive to save and invest, Canada will continue to move forward to greater achievement.

ASSETS AND DEPOSITS OF DOMINION BANK TREBLED IN 12 YEARS says General Manager

The 82nd Annual Statement which I have the pleasure to present shows the greatest annual growth in the history of the Bank. Assets and deposits are at a peak level. Total assets exceed half a billion dollars for the first time, amounting to $517 million, an increase of $59 million for the year. Healthy expansion has been experienced in all phases of the Bank's operation.

The past 12 years have been a period of substantial progress for the bank. In this period, assets and deposits have more than trebled.

This year net profits were $1,158,356 after setting aside $575,324 for depreciation of premises and equipment and $1,315,000 for Dominion and Provincial taxes—up $125,000 over last year.

The already heavy tax burden became more onerous during the year, Dominion and provincial taxes absorbing 53 per cent of net income.

The Bank's profit margin is low. Net profit this year was equivalent to 0.24% on average assets throughout the year, the same rate as 1939 was 0.51%.

A new year-end high was recorded in total loans of $233 millions—an increase of $8 millions over 1951. Total deposits by the public at the end of the fiscal year amount to $457 millions, an increase of $56 millions.

The increase in deposits is clear evidence that Canadians appreciate the value of thrift. This is reflected not only in the larger volume of savings entrusted to us for safekeeping but also in a healthy increase in the number of savings accounts at all branches.

Deposits are active dollars. From coast to coast Dominion Bank dollars are busy each day helping Canada to grow and creating new jobs for Canadians.

The Bank's holdings of Dominion, provincial and municipal bonds represent dollars lent to finance improvements which make Canadian communities better places in which to live.

The principal channel of investment for deposit dollars is commercial loans. They help little and big business to expand and this makes jobs for Canadians. They assist enterprising individuals to start their own business. Such loans make a real contribution to the country as a whole.

Shareholders now number 3,083. Of the outstanding shares, 77.3% are held in Canada, 16% in Great Britain and 6.7% in other countries. The average Canadian shareholder owns 200 shares which indicates that most of the capital stock is in the hands of small investors.

Business in Canada is humming. During the first six months of 1953 business in Canada should be reasonably good but beyond that prospects are difficult to assess. A continually rising level of business activity is unlikely. While it is only prudent to expect occasional set-backs, the long-term outlook for Canada remains favourable.

Maggie's Art Club Exhibits Paintings At Art Gallery

HALIFAX (CP)—There's probably no Canadian ship afloat with more paintings hanging from her bulkheads than the aircraft carrier Magnificent.

The Maggie's art club has made about 1,000 officers and men aboard more art conscious than if they had toured the Montmartre district of Paris.

None of the club's members had painted before: Lt.-Cmdr. C. Anthony Law of Ottawa, noted war artist, started art classes last spring.

Shows Is HaMax

They've come a long way since then. Recently 48 of their paintings, portraying scenes in Malta, Greece North Africa, Scotland, and England, were exhibited at an art gallery here.

Law organized the club as a hobby group. The only entry requirement was: "Anybody interested is welcome." The class began with 39 but now is about half that number.

Most of the work was done during the Maggie's European cruise. The lieutenant-commander and his students painted the town and countryside at nearly every port of call. They touched up their canvases and spent off-duty hours at sea.

All Over the

CPO George Green, Victoria, had five canvases on display in the radio room. CPO Joseph Poirier, Quebec, the ship's barber, had one bulkhead reserved for the work of AB Gaston Boulanger, Montreal.

CPOs Joseph Decoste, Belliveau N.S., and Lestrr Bell, Toronto, had their exhibition in the shipwright shop. In the officers' living quarters there was "Greenwich Alley," where five of the eight officers in the section were painters.

Law makes no effort to influence his students' style. "I've let them develop their own and they've come along amazingly well."

NORTHPORT

NORTHPORT — Dr. Finlay and Mrs. Finlay, Wilkinsburg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mills a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Simpson have returned home after a two weeks' visit with relatives in Chicago and other western cities.

A good crowd attended the travelogue by Miss Margery Foster and Miss Isabel Treary, showing the tour they took last summer to the western coast. All enjoyed both pictures and descriptions of the trip.

Mis Mae Weatherlel spent Saturday with her niece, Mrs. D. Rutherford and family, Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ruggles of Kingston spent the week-end as guests of Mrs. Ruggles' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harker.

Mrs. Hazel Lambert left on Thursday to spend some time with her brother, Mr. H. Sedore and family at Enterprise, before leaving for Toronto for the winter.

Mr. Ralph Clow visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Clow, over the week end. He and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Clow visited their brother, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Clow, Brockville, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Egbert Hough, Mr. and Mrs. Embury Hough and Stephen, of Holloway, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. Hough.

Mrs. Edna MacDermaid has treated herself and family to a new car.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Robinson and family, Wellington, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Robinson

Mr. and Mrs Robert Greenwell have treated themselves to a T.V. set.

Mr. Jack Fraser who is working in Toronto, spent the week-end with his family here.

CROFTON

CROFTON — Mrs. E. Williams of Picton, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. R. Jones, and Mr. Jones.

Mrs. W. J. Gray was the guest of her son, Mr. John Gray, Mrs. Gray and family, at Jericho, over the week-end.

Mr. Judd of Colborne, spent a few days last week with Mrs. George Hutson and Ted.

Glad to report Master Keith Munro is able to be back at school.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Jones and boys, of Selleville, spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Parsons and George, of Carrying Place, were Sunday callers at the home of Mrs. W. J. Gray.

Mrs. Victor Bongard has moved into Picton for the winter months.

A number from this community gathered at the church Wednesday to do honor to Mr. Graydon Calnan and bride, Miss Thelma Buell.

Mr. Clare McFaul as master of ceremonies, led in a community sing-song and after a short program, Mr. and Mrs. Calnan were seated at the front while Mr. Morley Moran read an address.

They were presented with a group of three matched tables, for which Mr. and Mrs. Calnan each made suitable replies.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served by the ladies.

Prime Minister Pays Surprise Visit to Centre

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent and other high-ranking Canadian representatives were cordially acclaimed when they paid a surprise visit to the Nuffield recreation centre, off Trafalgar Square, where members of the Commonwealth forces were being entertained.

The prime minister took time out Tuesday night from his busy Commonwealth conference sessions to meet the large gathering of service men which included a group of Canadian soldiers and airmen on leave from their units stationed on the continent.

St. Laurent was accompanied by Defence Minister Brooke Claxton, Air Commodore Martin Costello, senior RCAF officer in the United Kingdom, and Air Marshal W. A. Curtis, chief of air staff, who earlier in the day had visited the Canadian air bases at North Luffenham in Rutland and Langar near Nottingham.

The Canadian visitors arrived at the recreation centre just as a troupe of British entertainers was about to begin a performance before a battery of television cameras.

The cameras were focussed on the Canadians when Claxton delivered an impromptu speech thinking the people of Britain for their generous hospitality to the Canadian forces.

After a tour of the centre, a number of Canadians were introduced to the prime minister and Claxton. Among them were Miss Lena McClure of Charlottown, a hostess at the centre, LAC John Laprade of Halifax, LAC Steve Hoach of Calgary and LAC Bill Skinner of St. John's, Nfld.

Judgment Reserved

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Supreme Court reserved judgment on the appeal of Harry Lee of Hamilton, sentenced to be hanged Dec. 20 for the murder of Mrs. Mary Rosenblatt, also of Hamilton.

Lee was charged after Mrs. Rosenblatt was found shot near Sheffield June 8.

C. L. Dubin appeared for Lee Tuesday and argued that Mr. Justice W. F. Spence had misdirected the jury through failure to tell the jury of evidence that could have resulted in a verdict of manslaughter.

MADOC

Madoc — At their regular monthly meeting Madoc branch of the Canadian Legion elected their officers for the year:

Madoc Legion plans to devote its efforts to the welfare of the community and the good-will of the community towards the end will be fully appreciated.

The Goodwill Club of the Irish settlement met at the home of Mrs. Nathan Bronson for its annual meeting. After the business transactions for the year were discussed and retiring officers tendered a vote of thanks for their efforts and best wishes extended for the newly appointed officers a pleasant hour was spent with the hostess, assisted by Mrs. McFaul and Mrs. Jean Spry, serving refreshments.

Officers Elected:

President, Mrs. Thelma McFaul; vice-president, Mrs. Jean Spry; secretary, Miss Lorraine Bronson; treasurer, Mrs. Eva Bronson; birthday com. convener, Mrs. Edith Davidson; sick committee, Mrs. Lottie Bailey.

St. Peter's Women's Club

The St. Peter's Women's Club met at the home of the president, Mrs. Ken Wise, on Monday evening.

Mrs. K. Nicol was in charge of the devotional period and opened the meeting with a reading, "Song for Christmas." "Silent Night" was sung. A poem, "These Are Lovely Things," and the Christmas Bible story, Luke 1: 30, was read by Mrs. Wright. Mrs. R. Woods gave a reading, "Our Guiding Star."

Mrs. K. Nicol was in charge of the program and had the members all join in the singing of Christmas songs.

A quartet, Mesdames Nicol, McCoy, Crawford and Elliott, sang two numbers, "Silver Bells" and "Christmas Candles."

Rev. M. W. Heslip addressed the meeting and used as his topic, "The Christian Church from its beginning in Europe to the Present." A very timely subject as St. Peter's Presbyterian Church in Madoc will observe its 100th. anniversary this coming year.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

FRANKFORD

W.M.S.

Frankford — On Thursday afternoon the W.M.S. meeting of the Frankford United Church was held at the home of Mrs. W. Morrow, with a large attendance. Mrs. Morrow, presiding in the absence of the president, due to illness, opened the meeting.

Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Dickson and Mrs. Johnson each read a few thoughts on the theme "Living for Jesus" and Mrs. Johns took charge of the devotional period and brought many inspiring thoughts to each one present.

After the business part was settled, Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel gave a reading "The Water That is Past." Mrs. Fred Charlesworth also gave a reading and Mrs. Morrow a vocal solo, both numbers were greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. J. M. Dafoe spoke on the Study Book, describing the home life of the African people.

Mrs. L. H. Bowen favored with a beautiful piano solo after which refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Dickson and Mrs. F. Johnson.

The Frankford Scouts held their meeting Friday evening, rather than Saturday, due to the paper drive that day. The four patrols studied the tenderfoot tests. Later, they followed a trail which led to the bridge approach, where as assistant Scoutmaster was presumed hurt at the base of the approach. The Scouts lowered a boy down to check for wounds, and helped raise the victim. He was then bandaged and carried on an emergency (home-made) stretcher. This stunt greatly pleased the Scouts, as they realized how useful their training is.

After the meeting five dozen doughnuts and a case of soft drinks were brought in. The boys howled with glee.

Saturday finished the paper drive with the second truck load going to Glen Miller paper mill. Altogether six tons were collected.

The boys wish to thank the following gentlemen for their kind help: Messrs. Ed. Loucks, Joe Adams, Harry Wickens, Bert Carter, Hugh Miller and Earl Baker. They also wish to thank everyone who helped with their bundles of paper.

Any person wishing to try out for the Frankford Lions hockey team this year is urged to contact Mr. Oscar Farrar right away. Help is still needed to get a winning team and everyone will be given a fair tryout.

Damage Slight

A minor accident occurred on Tuesday afternoon on Mill St. Mr. Lee Flood, of R.R. 1, Frankford, backed into the driveway in front of the Frankford Co-op. Although there was plenty of room for clearance, the back end of his car skidded on the ice and struck the fender of a parked car, owned by Mr. A. McIntyre, of Clarmont, representative of the United Co-operatives of Canada. Damage was slight, both cars suffering dented fenders. Icy roads were blamed for the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Patrick spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stuckey spent the dinner hour with Mr. and Mrs. Tom McCann in Marlone on Sunday.

Mrs. George Patrick, Marvin Patrick, Linda and Paul called on Mrs. John Casement on Sunday afternoon.

Tank, Truck Production For Army to Ease

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. Army announces it will apply the brakes to production of tanks and trucks. Some plants will have to close as a result of the slowdown.

Army spokesmen explained Wednesday that the immediate needs of the army are close to being met. At the same time strong production lines have been established to meet future needs.

Production of medium tanks will be cut back to a point about 45 per cent below the original goal set for the spring of 1954, the army said.

There will be a 22-per-cent reduction, in output of light tanks and the manufacture of 2½-ton trucks will be slowed.

Production rates of some other basic weapons will be reduced later, a spokesman said.

C-47 Transport Missing With Six Aboard

RENO (AP) — Planes began a search at dawn today for an Air force C-47 transport with a crew of five and one passenger missing in the Nevada-Utah border region.

The transport, reported lost in a blinding snowstorm on a flight from Peterson Field, Colorado Springs to Hamilton, Calif., was last heard from at 4:30 P. M. Tuesday. The plane carried enough gas to stay up until 10 P. M.

STIRLING

1st. Company Girl Guides Attends Church Service

STIRLING — At St. Paul's United Church on Sunday evening "The First Stirling Company of the Girl Guides" under the command of Capt. Mrs. Mae M. Kent, assisted by Lieut. Mrs. Robert Lucey, and also accompanied by the "Rosvale Pack" commanded by Mrs. Charlie Faires "Brown Owl", assisted by Mrs. Edwin Warren "Tawny Owl", paraded to the church for service. There were about 35 Guides and Brownies in attendance.

Mr. R.A. Patterson led in carol singing before the service. Suitable Christmas hymns were sung.

The Christmas lesson, Luke 2:1-16 was read by Capt. Mrs. Mae M. Kent, O.C. 1st Stirling Girl Guides.

Miss Janet Ann Good sang a solo, "The Holy Boy." Prayer with choral invocation by Mrs. C. E. Mallin.

The choir rendered two anthems, "While Shepherds Watched their Flocks" and "Let Us Now Go Even Unto Bethlehem" and Miss Laura Jeffery, a Girl Guide, rendered as a solo, "A Christmas Prayer."

A dramatized advent message, "The Poor Little Match Girl," by Hans Christian Anderson, was presented by Miss Wendy Warren, a Girl Guide. Mrs. E. E. Rose was the narrator.

Mrs. A. R. Baker presided at the organ using for her organ prelude, "The Shepherds' Watch," by Cyrde Brant; organ interlude, "Jesu Bambino," "Prelto A You," and organ postlude, "Christmas Song," "Spanish Catalan."

At the morning service the Royal Choir rendered "What Child is This?" and the choir rendered as anthem, "Nazareth", by Gounod.

Miss Verna Brown rendered a soprano solo, "Holy Night."

Other Christmas songs were used followed by her organ postlude, "Gloucestershire Carol," Old English.

Training Viruses To Kill Human Cancer Group Told

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—A cancer expert told a medical group Wednesday that scientists now are training viruses to kill human cancer.

Dr. C. P. Rhoads, director of the memorial centre for cancer and allied diseases at Cornell University, spoke at Duke University's annual medical symposium. He said scientists have found they can cure human cancer transplanted to animals and that they have been successful in eliminating cancer by chemical means in a few human patients.

This has been accomplished by treating viruses chemically so that they will feed on cancerous cells, by-passing the more resistant normal cells.

TRUMAN

Asked about a report that the attorney-general of Massachusetts had said Truman was urged to say during the recent campaign that he himself would go to Korea, the President said such a step was suggested.

But, he said, he rejected the suggestion, deciding it would serve no good purpose and would be just a piece of demagogery.

And, he added with a touch of acid in his voice, that is just what it turned out to be.

Reporters pressed Truman as to whether he considered Eisenhower's trip announcement a piece of demagogery. The President said the announcement was a piece of demagogery, and of course Eisenhower had to make the trip after saying he would.

The developments that followed MacArthur's announcement came swiftly:

1. Disclosure that Eisenhower intends to meet MacArthur in New York to discuss with him details of the plan, and that Eisenhower would consult MacArthur in the future on Far East policy although there are no plans now to give MacArthur an official role in the new Republican administration.

2. Announcement by Truman that "if anyone has a reasonable plan for ending the Korean fighting in an honorable way—in a way that will not lead directly into a great war—that plan should be presented to Eisenhower and MacArthur to a meeting at the White House and explore with them what hope the MacArthur plan may hold. Both are men of wisdom and military genius."

It was MacArthur's proposals that the United Nations forces bomb Communist bases in Manchuria, blockade the Red China coast and take other steps which Truman opposed that led to the general's dismissal from his commands.

"Truman never since then has consulted MacArthur or ever shown a willingness to use his military genius in any way," Watkins said. "I am happy that Eisenhower clearly is determined not to make the same mistake."

Watkins said Eisenhower had "broken the ice" and made a friendly gesture to MacArthur, who had refrained from endorsing him for President.

Termed Ingracious

Watkins termed Truman's statement "pretty ungracious" but added:

"I hope the President will set aside rancor and in the interests of humanity and patriotism invite MacArthur to discuss with him the plan."

Buffalo Police In Great Manhunt For Three Gunmen

BUFALO, N. Y. (AP) — The biggest dragnet in 15 years was extended into Canada today as police tightened their efforts to capture three gunmen who killed a Main street jeweler and made off with about $10,000 worth of diamonds.

The trio, led by a cold, silent blond about 30 years old, Tuesday shot to death Donald F. Hurd, 45, and pistol-whipped two of his employees as they staged the mid-morning holdup.

Throngs of Christmas shoppers were passing the shop but none was aware of the robbery and killing.

Detective Chief William T. Fitzgibbons, directing the manhunt, said Tuesday night his men had learned that one of the holdup men spoke with a British accent.

He said police are seeking a Canadian already wanted by Niagara Falls and Toronto police in diamond gallery photos from Canadian police were brought here to be viewed by witnesses to the holdup.

SUBDUE FOWS

TOKYO (AP) — One Communist prisoner of war was killed and another was wounded Monday on Koje Island as they were attempting to organize a secret Red party meeting, the UN Command announced today.

Bandit Shakes So Badly Gun Comes Apart

BALTIMORE (AP) — The would-be bandit who entered a grocery Tuesday night became so nervous and shook so violently that his revolver came apart in his hand and the lone bullet fell to the floor.

Mrs. Pauline Beall, clerk in the grocery, told police the gunman walking into the grocery, pulled a gun and demanded money of her.

The bandit, already visibly trembling, became more nervous when Mrs. Dorothy Jones, another clerk let out a scream.

As the gun seemed to disintegrate in his trembling hands, the bandit got down on his hands and knees to retrieve his bullet.

At this point Mrs. Beall charged the man with a butcher knife and he fled—without the money, his bullet and parts of his gun.

FRANKFORD

FRANKFORD — The Lions Club of Frankford held its regular bimonthly meeting in the community hall on Wednesday evening. A bountiful banquet was served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

The main matter of business were plans for the coming Ladies' Night on December 15, and plans for this winter's activities at the Lions' Community Arena.

Guest Speaker

Guest speaker for the evening was Past District Governor, Harry Sager, of Trenton, a former Frankford resident, who chose as his topic, "Bridges of Life." He was introduced by Lion Bert Carter and on completion of his talk, he was thanked by Lion Ed Loucks and presented with a token of appreciation from the Frankford Lions.

Among the visitors present, was Lion Bert Sisson, past president of Peterborough club, who has a great many friends in Frankford.

The two senior classes of Frankford United Church Sunday School held their regular bi-monthly meeting in the Church Hall Wednesday night. A worship service, program and recreation made up an enjoyable evening.

Friends will be glad to hear that Mrs. John Casement is much better after her recent illness.

The Catholic Women's League bazaar, held Wednesday afternoon in Batawa, proved a successful event. Prize winners were: Mrs. Don Singer of Trenton; Mrs. F. Mackenzie, Batawa; Mr. I. Brezik, Toronto; Mr. D. Boyce, Belleville; Mrs. C. Mills, Trenton; Mrs. Cliffe Phillips, Batawa; Mrs. Bastian, Batawa; Rev. Father Jelinek, Trenton; Mrs. J. J. Jeffrey, Trenton; Mrs. J. Cain, Frankford and Mr. D. Westlake, Frankford.

House Is Saved

Heroic efforts on the part of Mrs. Harry Forbes early Wednesday evening undoubtedly saved their residence from destruction by fire. Mrs. Forbes discovered the fire in the east side of the two-apartment house, the half being occupied by Mrs. Forbes' father, Mr. Albert Rose. The curtains were ablaze in the front window, and the window frame as well. Mrs. Forbes seized the curtains, and got them out of harm's way burning her hands as she did. She threw water on the flaming window frame and wallpaper, and with a great effort, succeeded in extinguishing the blaze. She'd been afraid to leave the fire long enough to telephone the fire department or other help, lest the blaze get out of hand. The fire spread to the chesterfield next to the window and it was seriously damaged as well. The source of the fire is at present unknown.

Stratford Shades Owen Sound 5-4 To Strengthen Hold on Loop Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sarnia Sailors won a game in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series when it counted. Owen Sound Mercurys lost one that meant a lot.

Sarnia jumped from sixth place to a fourth place tie with Chatham Mitrons by nosing out Brantford Redmen 4-3 Wednesday night. Owen Sound lost the chance to come within one point of the league-leading Stratford Indians by losing 5-4 in Stratford.

North Bay Trappers hustled into a first-place tie with Sault Ste. Marie (Oct.) Greyhounds in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group by defeating the tail-end Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 6-4 in North Bay.

Sarnia Gets Two

At Schumacher Timmins-Schumacher Flyers were spanked to a 6-3 win over Abitibi Eskimos in a Porcupine Senior Hockey League game by playing-coach Pat Peturcel.

Sarnia scored twice in the third period to cop the win. Chuck Clash notched two for Sailors. Don Emms scored a single and Rolly Beauchamp slapped home the winner. Don Oberhuttner, Wally Bastiuk and Sam Kennedy shared the Brantford scoring.

Stratford also staged a third-period rally in their win over Owen Sound. Tommy Burlington and Buck Forslund scored twice each for Owen Sound. Jack White scored twice for Stratford. Singles went to Lloyd Ferguson, Billy Flick and Dinny Flanagan.

Don Hogan scored twice for North Bay and moved into the league's scoring leadership as a result. Jill Dwyer also notched two and George Gosselin and Fred Valenti scored others. Indian marksmen were Dan Horeck with two, Jack Heon and Jim Farrell.

The Schumacher win strengthened their hold on second place, 10 points behind Noranda Copper Kings. Petrucci scored once and set up three other goals. John Kennedy rammed in three with others credited to Dennis Morello and Ralph Orlando, Paul Godin scored two for Abitibi. Butch Festarini, Roger Donovan and Eddie La marche shared others.

Split Race Honors

TORONTO (CP)—Handy Flash, owned by G. Verhurst of Rochester N.Y., and driven by Cliff Chapman, and Daley F. Gratian, owned by W. Wood of Chesley and handled by Riney McLean, split the featured harness event between them when they each won a heat in the seventh race at Dufferin Park Wednesday.

Skeeter Volo, owned by J. Enders of Oneonta, N.Y., and driven by Homer Harp, won the sixth and secondary feature in straight heats.

Sport in Brief

BARRIE (CP)—Barrie Flyers or the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series have purchased right-winger Orv Tessier and goal-tender Bill Harrington from Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts.

Coach Hap Emms of the Flyers announced the deal Wednesday.

The Greenshirts receive goalie Gil Boisvert, left-winger Ken Collins and defenceman Ivan Tennant. In addition the Shirts receive an unrated sum in cash.

Harrington, who comes from Toronto, last year won the Tilson Memorial Trophy as most valuable player in the OHA Junior A and the George Hainsworth Trophy as the outstanding player in the twin cities.

KINGSTON (CP)—Ted Nicholson, former American Hockey League professional, was reinstated as an amateur and played his first game with Kingston Goodyears Wednesday night as the locals bested Peterborough Petes 5-3 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior B game.

EDMONTON (CP)—Coach Bud Poile of Edmonton Flyers has put forward Gerry Ehman from the Western Hockey League team's roster. Ehman played with Regina in the Saskatchewan Junior League. Meanwhile, defenceman Bill Folk has rejoined the Flyers after a brief whirl with the parent Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League. In exchange, Edmonton sent defenceman Jim Hay to the Wings.

NEW YORK (AP)—The 1953 New York racing season will open on April 1 and continue until Nov. 14, the commission said Wednesday. The opening meet is at Jamaica from April 1 to May 5.

CINCINNATI (AP)—Art Rose, 23-year-old right winger for Cincinnati Mohawks of the International Hockey League, underwent surgery Wednesday after being struck in the face by a puck. The speedy Montreal youngster suffered a horizontal fracture of the upper jaw which will cost him four teeth, said Dr. C. J. Hudson. The injury occurred in a game Tuesday night with Toledo which Cincinnati won 7-1.

LONDON (AP) — Johnny Williams, British heavyweight champion, threw one good punch Wednesday night flush to the jaw of Werner Weygand, German giant from Luxembourg, to win by a fifth-round knockout of the scheduled 10-round bout. Wiegand was a last-minute substitute for U. S. heavyweight Harry Matthews, who pulled a back muscle in training.

ONTARIO LIBERALS MEET

TORONTO (CP)—One hundred and fifty members of the Ontario Liberal party met Friday to draft policy for the next session of the legislature. Committees were appointed to outline plans in labor, education, health and welfare, municipal affairs, agriculture and natural resources.

MARIES NURSE

WINNIPEG (CP)—Anthony Mann a war veteran paralyzed from the waist down because of wounds, married his nurse to show his appreciation for the good treatment he received. He married Mildred Marks of Milwaukee, Wis., a physiotherapist.

ASSUMPTION WINS

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Assumption College Purple Raiders defeated Adrian College of Adrian, Mich., 66-61 Wednesday night in a close basketball game. Assumption held a 37-35 edge after the first quarter but the visitors went ahead 33-31 before half time.

Lindsay Rink Wins Bonspiel

SARNIA (CP)—The W. Govesiock rink of Forest had little trouble downing a Lindsay rink skipped by R. N. Gregory 12-4 to take the Imperial Trophy, premier event of the Sarnia Curling Club Imperial bonspiel.

In the first consolation event, for the Mueller Brass Trophy, the Sarnia rink of J. W. Lennox defeated G. R. Armstrong of Hamilton Thistles 12-4.

Central Ontario dominated the finals Wednesday in the Rotel Vendome play with T. S. Graham of Toronto Vics losing to A. C. Baillie of Orillia for the silverware 11-10.

In the Belton Cup finals A. J. Parkhill of Oshawa Ontario downed D. W. Currie of Toronto Granites 10-4.

In the Dow Chemical Plate finals, the Nels Brown rink from Detroit was defeated by Gordon Gilbert of Chatham, 11-7.

QUITS AS COACH

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—Cliff Roach coach of Sydney Millionaires of the Maritime Major Hockey League, announced Wednesday night that he has resigned. In a letter to Club President Art Lipton, Roach said: "Inasmuch as efforts are under way to obtain a playing-coach . . . it would appear that my services are not satisfactory."

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

HINTS ON TABLE TENNIS

1 Control is essential for good results in this game. Ball must be watched every instant. Otherwise shots will be missed or returns will not be effective. Concentrate keeping your eye on the ball.

2 Footwork must be right. Keep on your toes, changing position of feet with every stroke. Always "chcks" your racket by keeping grip as close to hitting blade as is possible. This gives control and leverage.

3 Keep the ball low. Avoid lifting the hitting blade back or jabbing at ball. Follow-through on every shot keeps ball controlled. Return to position in centre of table after every shot — do not edge over to side.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in table tennis as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and games.

HANK HAMMERS 'EM HOME!

Apart from the better polish, and finish around the nets of the Barrie-based crew there was little to rave about that junior "B" till last night unless it was "Hammering Hank", Therrien's job of puck sniping. The chappie from Chapleau lit the lamp five times, and should have had a couple more. At that he assisted in another to round out a neat night's work.

The plucky Cobourg Jays, while outclassed by the finer passing plays and hard checking of the Hawks came up with a fine effort. They have plenty of spirit and what-it-takes, and were battling as hard when the final whistle blew as in the first five minutes. The lakeshore team has a fine junior "B" club in the making.

Meanwhile the Hawks fattened their scoring averages, paced by Therrien's neat sniping display. He scored the prettiest goal of the night when he raced the length of the score without a chaperon touching the puck. The win extended the Hawks' wins to seven for fourteen points, and they're well out in front of the pack.

COURT GAME!

Manager Ted Clarke, of the Belleville Moirs, intermediate basketball squad says the team has another game on tap tonight at the collegiate. This time the opposition will be furnished by the Trenton RCAF Flyers, one of the strongest teams in the league. Should be a good tilt. It gets under way at eight o'clock.

ANCIENT CRAFT?

There's still a trace of "Old Lases" in his accent and a bit of the "Old Country" in his speech. At 74 he still has that rugged complexion that betrays the Englishman the world over.

He is James Cretney, well known blacksmith of the city and district, returned soldier and a member of the trade that is gradually disappearing.

"Ay, lad," he smiled, "'tis a sad state of affairs, to see horses disappearing."

But Jim was sincere. He has seen the gradual fading of Old Dobbin from the Canadian scene and the onward march of mechanized "nags."

This member of the fabled "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree" fraternity is a past master of the craft. He graduated from the old-school of merely shoeing horses several years and specialized in the making of special shoes for dainty equine feet.

And many a racehorse has swept across the wire to victory wearing the "Cretney Specials."

Jim makes these shoes something like a master cobbler would manufacture an expensive pair of shoes for a fussy client. He takes keen interest in the operation and everything must be letter-perfect before it gets the Cretney O.K. Jim has yet to have a pair of shoes returned for alteration, and to chalk up his first dissatisfied customer.

Jim was born in the island (Manx), noted for its tail-less cats, but lived most of his life prior to coming to Canada in Lancashire.

When a small boy he became apprenticed to a Lancashire blacksmith and received the magnificent remuneration of sixpence a day. Years later he received the princely sum of "two-and-tuppence" a week, roughly 54 cents.

Jim came to Canada with his family in 1907 and operated a smithy on Coleman Street, later removing to Prince Edward County, where he still operates his forge, a few miles out of the city on the Belleville-Picton highway.

His first turned his attention to specializing in horse shoes making in England. And one day when a King's Plate winner thundered across the wire the winner, there was not a powder man at the track than Jim. The winner were shoes made especially for him by the clever Cretney hands.

He has race-horse owners coming near and far. And one of his proudest possessions is a group of shoes, of all types, made for temperamental kings of the track.

Horses may come and horses may go, but racehorses will probably go on forever. And this medium is the slim hold Jim retains with a craft that is rapidly passing away.

"It's vastly different today," he said. "Time was when smithies were crowded with horses waiting to be shod. I remember one day back in 1909 when I shod 28 horses. It was following a severe ice and sleet storm, and people wanted their horses sharp-shod. Now, we rarely see a horse."

"And back in those days we received ten cents a shoe for resetting and twenty-five cents for new shoes."

"The day of the farm horse is gradually passing away," Jim said regretfully. "It won't be long before Old Dobbin will be a curiosity or placed in a museum."

But horses or no horses, there is still plenty of work for a blacksmith to do. Wheel repairing, implement fixing, manufacture of parts for the mechanized "nags", and other jobs keep Jim fairly busy.

But his love remains with his race-horse shoes. And as long as racetracks echo with the cry "They're off", Jim hopes to keep his hand in."

Jim has shod practically every type of horse from the shaggy Shetland ponies to heavy draught horses.

Some of the heavy English farm horses could not be shod in the ordinary manner by the smith picking up the foot and holding it between his legs. These horses generally weighed in the vicinity of 2,500 pounds. They were placed on their backs, with their legs tied, and the smith went to work.

Some of the shoes measured eleven inches in length with a width of nine inches.

Jim with Mrs. Cretney observed his 56th. wedding anniversary yesterday.

Defeat Rangers by 4-1 Score To Take Over Second Place; Habs Win First in Ten Starts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins are streaking up the National Hockey League ladder.

A few weeks ago the Beantown crew was in fifth place. But after going seven straight games with-out a defeat, Lynn Patrick's boys are knocking on the door of the league leadership, one point behind the pace-setters, Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings.

The tall-end New York Rangers were Boston's victims Wednesday night when the Bruins won 4-1 at home. Boston scored two quick goals early in the third period to break a scoreless tie and then added a couple to Fleming Mackell, who slipped it to Joe Klukay.

Rookie Leo Boivin made it 3-0 when he took a pass from Milt Schmidt. Real Chevrefils scored the other.

Paul Ronty spoiled what would have been Sugar Jim Henry's fourth shutout when he scored late in the final session.

At Toronto Bernie Geoffrion scored just past the half-way mark of the third period to give fifth-place Montreal a 2-1 edge over the fourth-place Leafs. It was the Canadiens' first victory in 10 starts and the first away from home in 16 games.

Centre Paul Masnick put Montreal ahead early on a combination play with Maurice Richard and Geoffrion. Then twice in the first period was over George Armstrong tied it up, Ted Kennedy and Sid Smith assisting.

Just past the half-way mark of the final session Geoffrion picked up Billy Reay's pass deep in the Toronto zone and scored with a 25-foot shot. Fred Berger, who worked the puck out of the Montreal end, also received an assist.

Gaye Stewart made his debut in a Montreal uniform, the fifth he has won in touching all but one city (Boston) in the circuit. The former Ranger, picked up for the $7,500 waiver price, played only once during the game.

Tonight Montreal is at Chicago and Detroit at Boston.

Bears Move Up With 3-2 Victory Over Cleveland

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hershey Bears scored a 3-2 win over Cleveland Barons to move to within three points of the league-new leaders in the American Hockey League.

An overtime goal by Dunc Fisher gave the Bears the win Wednesday night and marked their return to home ice after 13 days on the road.

Joe Schertel scored in the second and third periods for the winners, but the Barons tied the count in the third session on goals by Ray Ceresino and Frank Kubasek.

At Buffalo the Bisons handed Providence Rx is their seventh straight loss 5-0. Sam Lavitt, Harry Meldrod, Eddy Robinson, Vern Kaiser and Bob Fryday counted. Phil Maddox scored his second shutout of the season.

A four-goal third period gave Syracuse Warriors a 5-2 win over Pittsburgh Hornets. The win was the Warriors' third in the last four games.

Lee Carich scored twice for Syracuse and other goals went to George Milligan, Eric Pogue and Armand Lemieux. Danny Lewicki and Bob Sebourin tallied for the Hornets.

Open Warfare Breaks Out In Cleveland Office

CLEVELAND (AP)—The struggle for power in the Cleveland Indians' front office broke into open warfare today. Both sides said they would win.

In the one camp: Ellis Ryan, the baseball club's 66-year-old president, who startled those pressuring him to quit by reversing himself and announcing his intention to fight for the job he has held three years. Five directors are on his side, Ryan also is a director.

In the other faction: six directors and most of the officers in the baseball club, led by vice-president George Medger. They want Ryan removed as incompetent, and replaced by Medinger. They have asked for a showdown stockholders meeting a week from today to decide who should take over.

Neutral Hank

In a neutral corner: Hank Greenberg, general manager. He is not on the beat but an employee. At this point his job seems safe, since he has two years remaining in his contract at $65,000 a year and both sides say they want him to stay.

The important question to be answered is: Does the anti-Ryan faction of the top-Ryan group have more than 50 per cent of the stock?

Ryan and his five directors say they and their supporters among smaller stockholders have.

A spokesman for the anti-Ryan group told a reporter:

"I would never have entered this contest unless I felt confident of winning. And I assure you we will win."

In announcing his decision Wednesday to fight to stay on as president, Ryan also said he would keep Greenberg as general manager.

That was a surprise. Although he had said nothing against Hank H was understood that he had wanted to take over some of Greenberg's duties.

Chuck Davey Waltzes to Easy Win, TKO's Fitzie Pruden in Third Round

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chuck Davey, dancing man from Michigan, tuned up for a welterweight title bout by stopping a badly-outclassed Fitzie Pruden of Paterson, N. J. in the third round.

Referee Jackie Davis halted the one-sided fight, scheduled eight at 2:32, after Pruden, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont., went down for an eight-count and then rose in a feeble effort to continue the fight. Pruden's face was beet-red and he had landed scarcely a blow throughout the bout, which had been scheduled for 10 rounds.

Davis said Pruden suffered a cut inside his mouth and said there simply was no contest between the two.

A crowd of 11,921 at the Cleveland Arena saw the feature fight on the Cleveland News annual Christmas toyshop Fund show. The gross receipts were $54,232.

Davey weighed 150 and Pruden 149.

The fuzzy-haired Davey kept the stream of leather flowing into the face and occasionally the body of the beefed-browed Pruden. Several times in the last round he landed as many as 10 straight punches without a return.

Davey has been promised a title bout with welterweight champion Kid Gavilan next year. The bout probably will take place February in Chicago.

A heavy favorite Wednesday night, Davey went to work in a hurry, jolting Pruden in the opening round with his machine-gun left. Pruden seemed completely confused and hardly landed a blow in return.

Pruden's face turned a deep red in the second round as Davey kept up the barrage. Pruden was staggered several times, but gamely kept after Davey.

Stamps Swamp Edmonton 9-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Calgary Stampeders swamped Edmonton Flyers 9-2 to consolidate their hold on third place in the Western Hockey League.

In other Wednesday night games, New Westminster Royals drubbed Saskatoon Quakers 5-3 and Seattle Bombers downed Tacoma Rockets by the same score.

Steve Witiuk paced the Stamps with four goals. Roy Kelly fired two and Joe Levandoski, George Agar and Frank Ascenzi tallied singles. Jim Unlac and Earl Johnson counted for Edmonton.

Gord Fashoway scored two goals for the Royals with Bobby Love, Bobby Bergeron and Gerry Gallaway notching the others. Alex Kaleta and George Senick tallied for Saskatoon.

George Homenuke led Seattle to victory with three goals. Vic Lefsrud and Doug Macauley counted the others. Gordie Kerr and Dave Wall scored for Tacoma.

State's Biggie Coach-of-Year

NEW YORK (AP)—Michigan State today had the football coach of the year in Clarence (Biggie) Munn as well as the No. 1 college football team in the United States.

The 44-year-old Spartan mentor, whose team has won its last 26 games, was picked for the honor by members of the American Football Coaches Association in the 18th annual poll conducted by the Scripps-Howard newspapers.

Junior Hawks Extend Margin With 11-2 Win Over Cobourg; Henry Therrien Good for Five

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Faced by the five-goal sniping of "Hammering Hank" Therrien, the junior '72 Black Hawks roared through for a convincing 11-2 victory over the Cobourg Jay's before a small crowd here last night.

The win strengthened the Hayle' grip on the group's top perch and was their seventh victory and five in a row.

Eleven penalty-dirt pucks that while fled past young Lingard in the Cobourg nets brought the Hawks' sharpshooting total to 72. They whipped the Peterborough Triple Leafs 13-4 in their last performance in Peterborough.

"Hammering Hank" was the near-hero of the piece. The Cobourg leaphorn winger had a field night as he tipped home five goals and five assists for an assist on another. He missed three more from close-in while his goal-mouth mates' efforts on occasions were missed by team-mates.

Goal of Night

His prettiest goal of the night and the game, came in the third period. He grabbed the puck near his own end, sashayed through the entire Cobourg team at top speed, deked Lingard out of position and then behind the net for an assist on the cordage.

He slung home three in the first period when the Hawks rallied through to a 5-5 lead. The Cobourg defence tightened and the checking became tough in the second period when the Hawks flung home two to one. They added to that in the third when Therrien fired home his final pair and outscored the plucky visitors by a 3-1 count.

The young Jays, most of them are juveniles, put up a gallant fight against their more experienced and bigger opponents. They showed plenty of fight and spirit but they lacked the polish and passing ability of the Hawks. Lingard, in goal, turned in a fine effort despite the score while Hancock, who wasn't overworked, again came up with a neat performance as the desperate youngsters from the lakeshore tried to reduce the margin.

Eleven penalties were handed out by referee Art Carleton of Kingston, all of them minors. The game was a bit rugged in spots when the checking became heavy, but it was not as rough as the last battle here between Lindsay and the Hawks.

Doug Hull came up with a pair of goals and an assist with Casey scoring once and assisting on three others. Dwyr Jones found his form last night scoring once and being credited with two assists. Ron Halstead and Paramuk got the others. Cain and Boswell were the Cobourg snipers.

Hat in Ring

Halstead drew first blood for the Hawks in the first period taking Perlini's pass at the seven-minute mark to hit the hemp. Therrien blasted home a pair in five minutes after Casey made it 4-0 with three minutes to go. Hull made it five from Casey's pass at 18-5 and Therrien hat-tricked exactly 60 seconds later.

Jones and Hull added two more in the second period and with three minutes to go Cain fired the puck past Sandy for Cobourg's first marker.

Paramuk combined with Hull and Casey for the Hawks' ninth goal early in the third beat. Then came Therrien's picture goal at 8.57 and four minutes later "Hank" slung home goal-mate for his fifth and final tally. The crowd gave him a fine hand. Cobourg's Boswell banged the rubber home from a goal-mouth scramble late in the period for his team's last score.

The teams:

Cobourg: Goal, Lingard; defence, Cavanaugh, Daws, Halstead; centre, Campbell; wings, McIvor, Boswell; subs, Doinko, Cain, Mowat, Hesain, Stewart, Richards, Pearce.

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Green, Stocco; centre, Perlini; wings, Jacklin, Halstead; subs, Jones, Gilmour, Therrien, Hull, Casey, Hermeriston, Goyer, Paramuk, Green.

No Jap Tour For Falconbridge

SUDBURY (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has refused to sanction an exhibition trip to Japan by the junior Falconbridge Wolves in January.

Max Silverman, president and coach of the senior Sudbury Wolves, said Wednesday he was advised of the decision by George Dudley, secretary-manager of the association.

Silverman said Dudley didn't give any reasons for the CAHA's refusal to allow the trip, but he thought it was because the Wolves haven't played in league competition this year.

The juniors have played only three exhibition games.

Toronto Argonauts edged Winnipeg Blue Bombers 4-3 in the Grey Cup final five years ago today in freezing weather at Toronto. The booming punts of Bob Isbister for Toronto and the stellar performance of Winnipeg's quarterback Bob Fritz highlighted that renewal of the battle for Canadian football supremacy.

Haney Willing, Up to Rickey

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fred Haney, skipper of the successful Hollywood Stars of the Pacific Coast League, put it squarely up to General Manager Branch Rickey of Pittsburgh Pirates today whether he will sign as Pirate manager.

After flying here from the West coast for a meeting with Rickey, Haney was asked bluntly if he will sign with the last-place Pirates. He replied:

"If Mr. Rickey wants me to do it, I may. It's up to him. I could do it for him, because I feel I owe him an obligation for helping my Hollywood team."

Rickey invited Haney to his palatial suburban home for a morning conference.

Since Bill Meyer quit as manager of the Pirates at the end of the 1952 season, Haney has been prominently mentioned for the job of trying to lead the Pirates out of the National League cellar. Rickey has known Haney for years.

When Rickey was in the front office of Brooklyn Dodgers he sent several players to Hollywood. Rickey has also dealt with Pirate players. Haney has profited. He won the Coast League pennant in 1949 and in 1952.

Despirito May Face Suspension

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Jockey Tony Despirito 's to learn today whether he will be suspended or if he will continue his sensational drive to tie or break the American record of 388 winners in a year.

Tropical Park stewards, who disqualified Despirito's mount for impeding another horse in Wednesday's fourth race, are to decide at a meeting whether to suspend the lanky 12-year-old Lawrence, Mass., rider.

A suspension would just about wipe out any chances he might have of topping the 388 winners to tie the mark set by Waller Miller in 1906 and equalled by Joe Culmone and Willie Shoemaker in 1950. Despirito has 370 winners.

Westons, Trudeaus Open Owl League

Westons and Trudeaus battled to a 4-4 draw in a fast, action-packed game to open the Owl Commercial Hockey League at Memorial Arena last night.

Westons opened a 1-0 first period lead, trailing 4-3 at the end of the second, then came on in the third to knot the count. Each team got a pair of penalties each over the route.

Charley Hamilton sank a pair for Westons, with Jerry Desjardins and Frank Allen getting the others. Steve Gervin picked two for Trudeaus, Atkins and Burst splitting the other pair.

The four-team league will see Boyce's Garage and Bell Telephone lined up in their opener Thursday night.

'Hap' Emms, Fiery Barrie Flyers Coach Makes Good as Hockey 'Horse Trader'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hap Emms, fiery coach of Barrie Flyers, must have inherited some horse-trading blood somewhere along his ancestral line.

For the second time this season Emms has lured a player with high scoring potential away from another Ontario Hockey Association senior A team. The first was Tony Poeta, a consistent performer since Emms acquired him from Galt Black Hawks.

Wednesday Emms traded three players to Kitchener-Waterloo Greo chirs or Cov Terzier e' goalie Bill Harrington. Wednesday night Terzier scored two goals in 27 seconds of the second period as the Flyers trounced Guelph Biltmores 7-3.

No Standing Change

No changes occurred in the standings but Oshawa Generals helped Galt consolidate their fourth place hold by dropping a 7-5 overtime decision to the Hawks.

Three Rivers Reds of the Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association defeated Quebec Citadelles 3-1 at Three Rivers.

Another consistent scoring threat for Barrie, Jim Robertson, notched three in the Flyers win. The other two went to Orien Carver and Johnny Martan. Ted Brady, Bill McCreary and John Gillies scored for Guelph.

Frank Bonello and Zip Collis scored the overtime winners for Galt. Collis' goal was scored one and John Sleaver with two, Jim McBurney and Jim Nelson notched the rest. Bob Attersley and Jack Armstrong each scored two for the losers. Roger Maisonneuve accounted for the other.

Raymond Cyr scored the only Quebec goal after three seconds of play at Three Rivers. Jean Guy Gendron and Ray St. Cyr put in two for the Reds in the first period and Yvan Hindis scored the goal in the third.

Both junior games are in Quebec province tonight as Toronto and Montreal Royals, cellar-dwellers, play the first-place Montreal Canadiens.

'Star of India' Turns Up In Cup Matches

BRISBANE (AP)—India trotted out a really formidable player named Sumat Misra today in gaining an even break with the Italians in the opening singles matches of their Davis Cup interzone semi-final.

Misra, a big tall fellow with a terrific service, blasted Rolando Del Bello of the host 6-4, 8-6, 6-1 after Fausto Gardini had put the Italians in front with a 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2 victory over Naresh Kumar.

As a result of Misra's great showing, Australian experts gave the Indians a chance of upsetting the European zone champions and opposing the United States in the interzone final in Sydney next week.

Tomorrow's doubles pit the two-man India team against the veteran Italian pair, Gianni Cucelli and Marcello Del Bello. The way Misra blasted the ball today the Indians must be given a chance of winning it."

The opening singles was played in temperature well over 90 degrees and the Italians appeared to feel it more than the Indians.

Gardini was somewhat lucky to win. Gardini, little moustached Indian, led 5-3 in third set with his own service coming up and appeared to have the tall Italian youngster on the run. But then Kumar lost his service and won only two more games.

When it ended Kumar said disconsolately: "I handed it over to him."

The towering Misra finally won his match by breaking Del Bello's serve in the 10th game. It looked as though Del Bello might square it when he broke through in the third game of the second set, but the Indian star broke right back and never again let the Italian come close to taking his service.

Missing Mare Mystery Solved

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—Dagsworthy Lola, the homeless mare owned by Yonkers Raceway, was back in Delaware today munching oats in the same box stall she occupied before that shouldn't happen to a dog—let alone a racing horse.

Seems that when Yonkers closed for the season Nov. 15 and the horses were shipped to winter quarters or other destinations, Dagsworthy Lola was left behind by accident.

Nobody knew who she was, or her owner.

Yonkers called in the Pinkerton horse identification bureau, and experts went to work. Checking the markings on the legs, they finally identified the horse.

Truman L. Campbell of Dagsboro, Del., had sent the horse in trailer Dal Mactavish of Lachute, Que., with instructions that he take her to Canada for training this winter.

Dagsworthy Lola had been converted from trotter to pacer this year, and Mactavish didn't consider her satisfactory. He swapped with a trucker to ship the horse back to Delaware.

But something went wrong. The trucker didn't pick up the horse. Campbell bought his mare was in Canada, Mactavish thought she was in Delaware.

MAYOR HUME AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP)—Fred Hume, 60-year-old electrical contractor and half-owner of a professional hockey team, was re-elected mayor of Vancouver Wednesday for his second two-year term. Mr. Hume, who owns a half share in New Westminster Royals of the Western Hockey League, won in a close fight with Tom Alsbury, 48-year-old high school principal and vet-eran member of the CCF.

DIES OF INJURIES

TORONTO (CP)—Kallee Mattinen, 56, of Toronto died in hospital Wednesday night of injuries suffered when struck by a car Dec. 7. It was the city's 59th traffic death this year.

AT THE BELLE

Great Cast in Carol Reed's Twi Film Based on Conrad's "Outcast of the Islands"

"Outcast of the Islands", Carol Reed's widely-acclaimed film version of Joseph Conrad's savage masterpiece, is showing today at the Belle Theatre, for the last times, with Ralph Richardson, Trevor Howard, Robert Morley, George Coulouris and Wendy Hiller co-starred, and introducing the exotic Algerian beauty, Kerima.

In his latest production, Carol Reed offers us, in place of the slther music of his hit, "The Third Man," his sensational new discovery, the smouldering Kerima, who does no talking in the film because her eyes talk for her. They are enormous orbs of compelling power and are the most striking feature of the completely fascinating personality.

Apart from Kerima, we also see the transformation of popular Trevor Howard from his usual hero role into that of a treacherous villain who becomes an outcast.

The story tells how Peter Willems (Trevor Howard) falls in love with Aissa (Kerima), the exotic daughter of a native chief, and becomes involved with the treacherous scheming of Babalatchi (George Coulouris), a cunning native politician.

Willems, a victim of his own weakness, betrays his guardian, Captain Lingard (Ralph Richardson) who adopted him when he ran away to sea as a boy. How the old sea captain decides to punish the man who has made himself an outcast forms the basis of an outstanding climax.

A program of varied and entertaining short treats precede the feature attraction.

FEWER MILK COMPANIES

TORONTO (CP)—The number of Ontario milk companies has dropped to 543 from 750 during the last 13 years, Everett M. Biggs of the Ontario department of agriculture said Tuesday. Addressing the Ontario Milk Distributors' Association convention, he said reduced profits accounted for the liquidation or absorption of the 207 companies.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 12, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Mercury's fine aspect promotes mental work, new and valuable ideas, creative things. But Mars warns against irritability, impatience.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Be quietly conservative, yet hopeful and cheerful. And you will progress now. Don't worry what others do, keep your faith.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Your Mercury well aspected encourages you to top effort today. But—day does not sanction over-running others!

June 22 to July 21 (Cancer)—Pleasant indications with no planets in unfriendly positions and with Mercury well aspected. Day favors sound planning, intelligent work.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Extra care advised where contention is likely. Much can be accomplished in business, industry, mechanics and other work if you handle things well.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Your day, with Mercury most beneficially aspected. But be mindful of the temptation—impatience and ill temper—genial, gracious Virgoan will be successful.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—"A little with contentment is great gain." The more content and hopeful you are today, the greater your gains later.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—May have to use strongly your ingenuity and initiative in this playful, resourceful period to produce good results.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Finances may need double-checking and most matters careful investigation, but day will be progressive and you can make headway.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Plan program with urgent issues first. But look for satisfying results in the long run. Help keep domestic affairs pleasant.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Your planet Uranus going to fine configuration tomorrow says plan, work efficiently, with long range outlook in order to achieve benefits.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Be accurate, prompt, and you will meet opportunities unexpected. Budget wisely. Let no one spoil your even disposition. Be efficient.

YOU BORN TODAY: Active generally, shrewd in business but may tend at times to unwarranted recklessness. You have versatile talents, unusual capability, are magnetic, and impress people favorably. Choose associates carefully. Birthdate of: Arthur Brisbane, Amer. journalist; G. Flaubert, Fr. novelist; John Jay, Amer. statesman.

WALLBRIDGE

WALLBRIDGE — At the time of writing Mrs. Walter Ivey has disappeared. Last week the rr e which fell made it look like winter and thoughts turned to Christmas, but it is hoped it will be back when Christmas comes. Glad to report Mrs. Llewellyn Wannamaker, who still is convalescing at the home of her father, Mr. Elmer Bird, and Mr. Smith is improving.

Sgt. and Mrs. W. M. S. recently held their monthly meeting in the church hall with a fair attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris were entertained on Sunday evening to dinner, it being the occasion of Mrs. Harris' birthday. A beautiful birthday cake glowed with lighted candles on the table and a pleasant time was spent.

The children, with their teachers, are busy practising for the Christmas concert to be held on Dec. 16th in the Orange Hall.

POINT ANNE

POINT ANNE — Mrs. Bert Ashley spent a day in Napanee with Mrs. Maude Conger.

Mrs. Maude Conger and Mrs. Noble Brown spent Sunday afternoon in Shannonville and called on friends on Front Road Sunday evening.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Earle wish to extend their deepest sympathy to them and their family in the sad bereavement of their little son, Peter Earle, who passed away suddenly Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Akey spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Sunday in Belleville with their daughter, Mrs. Lee Bradshaw and Mr. Bradshaw.

The L. O. L. 2595 held its regular Friday evening euchre in the Orange Hall with a good attendance. Prizewinners were Mrs. Ivan Henderson; Miss Marie Parks; Mrs. Dorothy Hart; W. L. Judy; Mrs. Lorne Hamilton and Mrs. Lorne Lone hands; Mrs. Jack Barton.

Refreshments were served by the ladies.

The Ladies Auxiliary to Branch 219 of the Union, was held on Thursday evening in the Parish Hall. After their business period was over with euchre was enjoyed. Winners were Mrs. Floyd Henderson; Mrs. Charlie Hart;

Mrs. Walter Macdonald. Door prize was won by Mrs. Noble Brown.

The ladies served refreshments.

Pleased to report Mrs. Esmond Ellis is home from the hospital, feeling a little improved.

DESERONTO

Deseronto—The many friends of Mrs. Ernest Robinson will be sorry to hear of the death of her sister, Mrs. C. Tolan of Detroit, Mich., the former Cora Bruyea. She was well known in Deseronto where she was born and lived until after her marriage, when she moved to the States. Mrs. Robinson attended the funeral in Detroit, she was accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Robinson of Toronto.

Card Party

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Corrall opened their home for a card party for the Deseronto Lawn Bowling Club. Prizewinners were won by Mrs. B. Seymour and Mr. Roy Hopkins, Mrs. Percy Vine. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. F. M. Roach, Mr. Edmond Dowling and consolation by Mrs. E. E. Maybee.

Further parties are planned for the new year but no definite place or date was decided.

Refreshments were served by the ladies at the close of an enjoyable evening.

WALLBRIDGE

WALLBRIDGE — At the time of writing Mrs. Walter Ivey has disappeared. Last week the rr e which fell made it look like winter and thoughts turned to Christmas, but it is hoped it will be back when Christmas comes. Glad to report Mrs. Llewellyn Wannamaker, who still is convalescing at the home of her father, Mr. Elmer Bird, and Mr. Smith is improving.

Sgt. and Mrs. W. M. S. recently held their monthly meeting in the church hall with a fair attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris were entertained on Sunday evening to dinner, it being the occasion of Mrs. Harris' birthday. A beautiful birthday cake glowed with lighted candles on the table and a pleasant time was spent.

The children, with their teachers, are busy practising for the Christmas concert to be held on Dec. 16th in the Orange Hall.

POINT ANNE

POINT ANNE — Mrs. Bert Ashley spent a day in Napanee with Mrs. Maude Conger.

Mrs. Maude Conger and Mrs. Noble Brown spent Sunday afternoon in Shannonville and called on friends on Front Road Sunday evening.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Earle wish to extend their deepest sympathy to them and their family in the sad bereavement of their little son, Peter Earle, who passed away suddenly Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Akey spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Sunday in Belleville with their daughter, Mrs. Lee Bradshaw and Mr. Bradshaw.

The L. O. L. 2595 held its regular Friday evening euchre in the Orange Hall with a good attendance. Prizewinners were Mrs. Ivan Henderson; Miss Marie Parks; Mrs. Dorothy Hart; W. L. Judy; Mrs. Lorne Hamilton and Mrs. Lorne Lone hands; Mrs. Jack Barton.

Refreshments were served by the ladies.

The Ladies Auxiliary to Branch 219 of the Union, was held on Thursday evening in the Parish Hall. After their business period was over with euchre was enjoyed. Winners were Mrs. Floyd Henderson; Mrs. Charlie Hart;

MADOC

Over 900 Children Meet Santa Claus

MADOC — On Saturday morning Santa Claus paid a visit to the Kincaid Bros. grocery store and meat shop, and made it his headquarters for the day.

Long before opening time boys and girls were gathered at the door to get a glimpse of the merry gentleman who had a very busy day. Over 900 children called to see him and were presented with balloons, toys and candies. It was a splendid gesture on the part of the brothers, Jack and Kel and brought so much happiness and the spirit of Christmas to the children when, by the expressions on their faces, one realized there is still a Santa Claus and plenty of happy little folk at Christmas time.

St. Peter's W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the St. Peter's W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Walter Brett. After the call to worship by the president, a verse of the hymn, "O LORD Town's Bethlehem" was sung.

The Christmas story, as told in Luke's gospel was read by Mrs. Alvey, a prayer and poem composed by Miss Bessie McKitrick was read by Mrs. McCaffrey.

Reports of standing committees were received showing that the sale location had been met and a fine sale of clothing sent out west.

A Christmas reading was given by Mrs. A. Johnston.

The report of the nominating committee was received and accepted.

Mrs. Shelton and Mrs. Johnston assisted the hostess during the social hour.

Officers elected for 1953 are as follows:

President — Mrs. F. Allan; 1st vice-president — Mrs. Rogers; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. Johnston; secretary —Mrs. Dave Blakely; corresponding secretary — Mrs. C. Spencer; treasurer — Mrs. Fred Curry; United Tidings' secretary— Mrs. Walter Brett; 'Home Helpers' secretary — Mrs. Kilpatrick; press secretary — Mrs. F. Sharp; welcome and welfare — Miss Vanblock; supply secretary — Mrs. Donohue, membership — Mrs. Ben Miller and pianist — Mrs. A. Johnston.

Mrs. Luke of Toronto spent a few days with her friend, Mrs. Margaret Cowling.

Stan Hawthorne, of Toronto, spent the week end at his home in Madoc.

Mrs. Berlie, of Trenton, spent a few days with her friend, Mrs. Walter Brett and Mr. Brett.

Master Walter Kincaid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kel Kincaid, who had an appendectomy in Belleville General Hospital last week, has returned to his home in Madoc.

Miss Margaret Brett, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home in Madoc.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box and arguing about different subjects each one which you would rather be, a private in the cavalry or a gunner in the navy, and whether people actually see flying saucers or whether they just have spots in front of their eyes, and I said, Hay, lets all keep looking up in the air as if we saw some flying saucers, just to see what happened.

Which we started to, pointing to the sky and making surprising sounds, and Pudz Simkins said, Oh boy look at them winding, that's what I call travelling.

I wonder if there's anybody on them? said Yaps and Dopey Shorty Judge said, If there is, they must be pritty fast breathers.

Which just then some man stopped going past and looked up with us, saying, Say, there are some queer looking objects flying up there.

Being a man with a brown suit and yellow hair, and some lady stopped and looked up too, saying, I see them, they're pritty red and black.

They look sausidge shape to me, and they're red, the man said, and the lady said, Oh no, they're quite black, perhaps you see diffrent ones.

Whatever ones I see, they're sausidge shape, and they're red, the man said, I think I'll write to the newspapers about this, he said, and a lady said, Goodness, I believe some of them are green and red.

And they kept on going shaking their heads, and I said, G, I wonder if they really did see something.

And we kept on looking till we thawt we saw something too, having a fierce argewment about the shape and the color.

Proving it's easy to fool other people and even easier to fool yourself.

Indigestion Dizzy Spells
London Citizen Tells How Syntona Helped Him
Relieved Awful Gas and Stomach Pains, Appetite Improved, Headache, Tired Feeling.
"I just want to tell you what good results I got by taking Syntona Herbal Compound for stomach disorders," said Mr. Ross Penrose, R.R/1, Hyde Park, London, Ontario, in a recent statement.
Always Felt So Tired
"Because of my upset stomach condition I was feeling so miserable I couldn't eat my meals. And what little I did swallow to eat gave me awful gas and cramps in my stomach. I would feel sick, dizzy and tired. I had pains in my back and shoulders. Also all over me and pains set into my back, hips and joints. I felt terrible and generally tired.
Tried Many Things
"I had tried so many things in an effort to help my stomach that I was almost afraid to eat, but when I read about Syntona Herbal Tonic Compound I was sure and it proved to be just what I needed. After I had bolstered with any of those ailments now, food is digesting fine, and I can eat meals without gas. I have a wonderful appetite and the pains in my back and shoulders are gone and I feel well.
"I will recommend this grand medicine to any sufferer as I did."
How It Acts!
The reason why good results are obtained by taking Syntona is because the organs of digestion act, so closely related in their function that when one becomes upset it so often affects one or more of the others. Syntona tones up the stomach, liver and kidneys so that they act freely, thus and bowels so that they act freely, thus and bowels so that they act freely, thus and bowels

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

The story that McGrath told was a simple one. Coming to the village that morning, he had dropped in to have a chat with Peter Hayes. He'd found the aged man lying in a pool of blood. All Hayes could tell him was that a hooded man had entered his place the night before and had demanded money. He had put up a fight with dire results to himself. Dr. Baird said that Hayes had been severely, but not dangerously, injured, and after a few days' treatment at the hotel, to which he ordered McGrath to take him, he would be fit to go home again. Sweet got to the stage in time to tell Ben Whitmore what had happened and told him to notify the Bellevue authorities.

The brutal assault on Peter Hayes came as a great shock to a community unused to crimes of such violence. And the belief was general that unless "The Hood," as they were to call him, was stopped, there was no telling what he would do next. Bellevue police came into the district and asked questions.

Curly Brown was puzzled. Some time before the attack on Hayes, the Newton twins had been in the area and while their association with Bill Frost did not help them any, yet there was nothing in their past record to indicate that they would ever beat up and rob an old man. The police investigation had apparently cleared Bill Frost, and Curly wondered about that. Frost was in urgent need of money to prevent the law from selling him out, and in an effort to get that money he might have stooped to robbery with violence. What was the one angle to the case that the police should know about, he thought, and he went to Sweet about it. Sweet said the police knew all about that, but they figured that the crime must have been perpetrated by a transient and he now had had plenty of time to get away.

Curly was not satisfied that the police had done their best, and a few mornings later—just before he was to drive to the village to attend to his business—he was expressing his opinions to Hugh Maitland, who had stopped in on his way to see the Foster brothers about some work they were planning. Hugh had not returned to the mill as foreman when it had started running again. His place had been taken by George Olmstead.

Peter had let the chickens out, and fed them and they were running all over the place, even among the kitchen slops—so that Curly belatedly decided to clean and which were scattered on the grass near the door of the back one over by the chicken house. A sort of "Sally, y'know."

At that moment, a yellow dog, tongue hanging, ran into the yard from the road, sent the poultry scattering, then ran out again. The white rooster dove for safety into the first hole he saw, which happened to be a stove pipe, and he was stuck there.

"Who's dog?" Hugh asked, and Curly said:

"I don't know, must be following a team—I hear a wagon, don't you?"

And then, past the house came a team, a wagon, a hunched figure of a man on a seat who raised his hand and let it fall again.

"Bill Frost doesn't appear to have much to say this morning," Curly said, winking knowingly at Peter.

Hugh Maitland's eyes lighted. "After what you did to him at Barrier's the other afternoon, you wouldn't expect him to drive to and kiss you, would you, Curly?" Hugh grinned.

"Somebody's been telling tales," Curly said, face reddening. "I didn't do anything to Frost the other day that you couldn't have done."

"Who—me?" Hugh gasped. "I'm—I'm no fighter!"

"You don't know what you are, Hugh," Curly said, "You'll never know until you're put to the test. You have the size, the strength—what more do you need?" He stepped over to the buggy, placed a hand on the seat. "Bill Frost never licked you, Hugh," he said.

"Well, I—I didn't, who hit me in the eye at the dance?"

"Lots of men get hit in the eye, but that doesn't say they're licked," Curly pointed out. "Had you not been afraid of Frost in first place, you wouldn't have let him hit you in the eye. If Bill Frost, in disguise, were to hit you, you would light into him, but as it was, you knew who was behind the mysterious "—" he stopped, "what's going on here?"

The black rooster, a craven coward every time the white rooster had gone near him before, was whaling the daylights out of his enemy. Not only that, when he chased him out of the yard into the field. And the rooster, the white rooster, in his recent contact with the inside of a dirty stove-pipe, had lost his identity.

"Do you get it, Hugh?" Curly asked, "see what I mean? As long as that white rooster was white, the black rooster ran from him, but when the white rooster was blackened and the black rooster realized—" he stopped, flustered. "Oh, you know what I mean, Hugh! If you didn't know Bill Frost as Bill Frost but as some stranger you had never seen before, you'd take nothing from him. You must understand?"

Hugh laughed. "I don't know if you do yourself, Curly. You seem to be all balled up this morning."

But even so, Curly thought he saw a change in Hugh's face—a new light in his eyes. And he hoped he was right. For if Hugh Maitland was to succeed Lauren Sweet as constable, he must have courage to handle the job, particularly if there were such dangerous characters as the Hood running around.

A week passed and the Hood struck again. This time he lay in wait with a rifle and held up the cage as a gully about seven miles south of the Depot. At rifle point he forced Johnny Morrison to hand over the registered mail sack. And again, the police came up from Bellevue to investigate. They found the empty sack and a few postal notes and money orders scattered on the floor of the hill near the road. They returned postal notes and money orders to the office at the Depot. Postmaster Ferguson doubted if the bandit had secured much money in the mail, but Banker Northcott was certain that he had lost some. How much he would not know until he contacted the banks in Bellevue.

As the police searched for the Hood, the Boer War as they called it, was still the talk of the country. Matt Hawkins remarked that the Hood was probably that man De Wet and the British were chasing all over Africa, or he was probably old Paul Kruger in person who had slipped into the country in search of a good hiding place.

By now the ninety thousand Boers were facing a British army numbering close to half a million men. But the Boers were breaking up into small groups, striking fast, and scattering just as quickly to their hiding places.

The Depot and district people were never to be unmindful of the war. By then, seven thousand Canadians were either on service in South Africa or on their way. The Red Cross, the women of the village, were doing everything to back up the war effort. Letters must be written, parcels must be mailed. By now a few of the district boys were in the army—were overseas!

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church held their June meeting at Hard Acres. It was a combined church and patriotic affair, a most enjoyable event. And then the public school closed for the summer holidays and Miss Wood informed the trustees that she would not be teaching after the end of the year, as she was going to marry Wesley Lawson and go to the Lawson Settlement to make her home.

And then the question was being asked—"Who is going to succeed Miss Wood?"

The answer to that question was not to be decided for some time, and when it was, the Brown family at Hard Acres was to be the most interested—was to benefit greatly.

As spring passed into summer, into fall, and the Depot could not boast of anything better than a string of loose planks and boards as a means of taking in people from one mud puddle to another after a rain, there came murmurs of disappointment in the capabilities of Curly Brown as a councillor. Why had he not done something about the walks?

Council had the measurements and the cost of their construction, then what was the hold-up? What was Curly Brown doing about it?

(To Be Continued.)

"TALKING" HORSE CONTINUES TO CONFOUND QUESTIONERS

Lady Wonder, the 27 year old mind-reading horse proves herself a prophet to Toronto's James Hunt as he "interviews" the celebrated prophetess in her Richmond, Va., stable. Lady, when asked by Reporter Hunt, told him, by flicking out letters on a giant-size typewriter, that F-R-O-S-T was premier of Ontario, that the Ti-l race. (Central Press Canadian.)

cats would win the next Grey Cup and a number of other things. The answer to most questions was written on a slip of paper by the reporter before the questions were asked. The horse was asked by Reporter Hunt, told him, by flicking out letters on a giant-size typewriter, that and couldn't prophecy the winner of any horse race.

Early Evils of White Man In China Did Much To Cause Hatred of Foreigners

By Gerard Filion

The Chinese are quite touchy about the history of religious persecution. They allowed us to talk about most of their problems. They are not as secretive as the Russians. They readily admit an error, a partial success — even a failure. They are very well aware that they have a lot to learn from the West in technical matters. They hope that if relations between China and the West ever improve they will be able to trade freely with Europe and America. They would like to hire the services of technicians and buy the tools they need to modernize their country.

But they don't like to joke about religious matters. If you accuse them of persecution, they become nervous and impatient.

SEEKS PERMISSION

The day after my arrival in Peking I asked permission to visit some Canadian missionaries. I had obtained their address before leaving home although I thought it was likely I would be refused permission to see them. But I wanted to be prepared. I knew I would kick myself for not having brought some names and addresses with me if permission were easy to get.

So I sent my request to the congress organizers. The following day they told me that the reception services were overworked with the continual arrival of new delegates and that they couldn't provide me with an interpreter but they promised that as soon as the congress was over they would willingly arrange for me to take any trips I wanted.

I brought up the question several times during the congress. I told several influential Chinese that I would like to see my fellow countrymen, some of whom were personal friends. I wanted to give them the latest news from home and when I got back to Canada I would like to be able to tell their relatives and religious colleagues that they were all right.

GIVEN RUSH-OFF

I got the same answer every time I spoke to a Chinese about such a visit. It can't be done right away but later we'll be able to arrange any trips you'd like to make.

The Chinese officials insisted that the congress delegates should remain in China until the end of October. They said they had planned several trips to the principal industrial cities and promised us a week of discussions on China and her problems.

It didn't take me long to see that any hope of mine to a Canadian missionary was being relegated to some distant and uncertain date. I didn't want to embarrass the missionaries who were having a hard enough time as it was, living under guard and some of them in prison, we had heard. I decided to abandon the project and go home at the end of the congress.

YOU'RE NOT LEAVING!

My seat was booked on the plane which left the next morning. My bags were packed and had been sent off when Dr. Ma, the principal of Peking University, came to see me. He was with another Chinese person whose name I don't remember. I had met them both several times during the congress.

"We've been told that you're leaving tomorrow morning, Mr. Filion."

"That's right."

"You're making a mistake. You haven't seen anything of China yet. China is a very big country, you know, and is a very old civilization. You should take advantage of your trip here to see as much as possible."

"You're right and I would be very happy to accept your invitation to stay until the end of October but I have a family and a newspaper waiting for me and I've got to get home."

"But you mustn't leave so soon, Mr. Filion. You haven't seen any of the sights yet. Stay over for another week and we'll see the sights together."

"It's very kind of you but my bags have already been sent off and I'll be taking the plane in a few hours."

"Yes, we will see to it that you don't. Friday, we have formal discussions on China and then we're going to take the delegates to see Shanghai, and Nanking and Canton. Besides, you have your Canadian students friends you want to see. As soon as the official program is over, you'd be able to go and see them."

Federal Ban on Non-Essential Use of Steel Ends December 31

OTTAWA (CP)—A federal ban on the use of steel for pool halls, skating arenas and other amusement and recreational centres ends December 31.

The government announced Thursday that it is lifting restrictions on steel for non-essential construction thus paving the way for a big building expansion in 1953.

Limitations on the amount of steel stockpiled by civilian industry will be lifted, however, but the government will still maintain the right to channel steel from the public if it desires.

As a result, Canada's multi-million-dollar construction industry will start the new year free of government control for the first time since the Korean war.

Builders no longer will have to apply to the federal steel controller for an allotment of steel to build banks, office buildings and civilian factories.

Steel controller Kenneth Harris had been allowing some steel for these types of buildings in recent months, but he still maintained tight control over use of steel for bowling alleys, dance halls, theatres, liquor stores and the like.

Builders will be able to buy steel against other forms for the steel — if it is available. There still may be difficulty getting sufficient structural and plate steel, but production is expanding steadily.

By the time the construction industry gets into full swing next spring many of the shortages likely will have disappeared.

The remaining government will retain one order giving it power to tell a mill to ship steel to any part the government sees fit.

This power, however, probably will be used sparingly, unless a great scarcity develops again and Canada's three-year $5,000,000,000 defence program suffers.

The steel controls were the last government restrictions on the construction industry, partly to give defence projects priority on available supplies and partly to discourage non-essential construction and curb inflation that followed Korea.

CCF-SC FEUD AGAIN REARS HEAD IN HOUSE

Other Parties Sit Back, Prod Antagonists On

OTTAWA (CP)—A growing CCF-Social Credit feud has brimmed over again in the Commons with the leaders of the two parties in starring roles.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader since 1942, and Solon Low, Social Credit leader for eight years, engaged in a major verbal bout Thursday.

Liberal and Progressive Conservative members sat back and enjoyed this side-light in the throes speech debate and sometimes prodded the antagonists on.

The CCF and Social Credit leaders exchanged charges and counter-charges that had their origin in the stormy British Columbia election campaign last June. The Social Credit party won that election by a one-seat margin over the CCF.

Mr. Coldwell attempted to justify charges made in B.C. that the Social Credit movement is steeped in anti-Semitism and racialism, and had shown anti-democratic tendencies. In support he offered a long series of quotations, including some from Major C. H. Douglas, founder of the Social Credit movement.

Mr. Low, counter-punching fast, said the CCF itself tries to foment class hatreds by blaming big business for all economic ills. He described Mr. Coldwell's charges as "adolescent and flimsy distortions and falsehoods."

Enter Angus MacInnis, CCF member for Vancouver East, took up Solon Low's defence, and Frank Jeffrey, member for Leithbridge and the party's main proponent of monetary reform.

Mr. MacInnis said Mr. Blackmore was completely out of touch with economic matters. He made himself look foolish by propounding "fantastic theories."

Earlier Mr. Blackmore had accused Communist members of being stupid. It was only nonsense, he said, to say that Social Credit theories of making the supply of money balance with the supply of goods can't be implemented.

Stock Salesman Returned to Face Theft Charges

TORONTO, (CP) — Ian Mackenzie, 34-year-old Toronto stock salesman, was brought here from Texas today to face charges of theft of $15,000 in stocks.

Police said Mackenzie, a customers' man, took the bulk of his securities entrusted to him by customers.

A married man with two children, he was employed six years by the firm known for years in the bathtub of their home and attempted to take his own life unsuccessfully in a mercy killing pact. Mrs. Jones, also 62, suffered from multiple ailments, and legless after two amputations.

Allege Legless Wife Mercy Killing Victim

DETROIT (AP)—Police today sought a murder warrant against Mrs. Ethel Jones, 62, who Thursday electrocuted his invalid wife, Jessie, in the bathtub of their home and attempted to take his own life unsuccessfully in a mercy killing pact. Mrs. Jones, also 62, suffered from multiple ailments, and legless after two amputations.

New Basic Sale Freight Rates Set By Commissioners

Applies to All Canada Excepting the Maritimes

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — The board of transport commissioners today took the first big stride towards national freight rate equalization by ordering a level scale of basic rates for all parts of Canada except the Maritimes.

The new scale of "class" rates — the selling charges directly involving about $200,000,000 of the country's $1,000,000 — a year freight business—was ordered effective tentatively Jan. 1, 1954.

It largely omitted the Maritimes from a general lift in eastern rates, on the basis of legislative protection given the seaboard a year ago by Parliament.

For the West, the board indicated a drop in the general rate level but forecast a later boost in the charges on grain moving in that area for domestic consumption.

Effects Expected

The changes in the class rates, upsetting the existing levels of tolls between the Quebec-New Brunswick border and the Pacific coast, were expected to have these effects:

1. Rates between points from the head of the lakes to the west coast will go down slightly.

2. Rates within Ontario and Quebec will go up.

3. Between the East and points beyond the Manitoba-Saskatchewan border, there will be reductions.

4. In Manitoba, midway between East and West, local rates on east-west rates should stay fairly stable.

There was no indication in the 15,000-word judgment as to how far up or down rates might vary regionally. The aim was to preserve the current revenues of the railways by pushing up the central Canadian rates to balance cuts in the West, which has had a higher scale of rates.

Special Exemptions

For the Maritimes, the board gave the four-eastern provinces a special exemption. It was the one big deviation from the new equalization principle, and it was based on a board interpretation of the 1951 legislation as giving special and extended some protection to Maritimes rates.

These are based on the Maritime Freight Rates Act of 1927. The board had in the judgment no traffic strictly within the Maritimes could be affected by the alterations.

But it said that hauls into and out of the Maritimes would be subject to equalization —up or down—on that part of the movement west of Montreal.

Jackson, Suchan Appeal Rejected By Supreme Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada today rejected a request by Leonard Jackson and Steve Suchan to appeal convictions of murder to Canada's highest court.

The two members of the notorious Boyd gang are scheduled to be hanged next Tuesday for the shooting of Toronto Detective Edmund Toy.

Counsel for the two men had sought leave to appeal the convictions on a point of law. The case was heard before Mr. Justice J. W. Estey of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Counsel for Jackson and Suchan —at one time the two most wanted men in Canada—argued that the trial judge had not made it sufficiently clear to the jury the "limited use" to which certain evidence could be put.

Dealt With Capture

The evidence in dispute at the trial dealt with the capture of the two men in Montreal last March and the shooting barrage that preceded it. It also dealt with a dummy torso and head used by the two men in target practice the night before Detective Toy was shot on a Toronto street March 6.

LONDON PAPERS ARGUE RESULTS OF CONFERENCE

'Sad Shameful Moment' Is Beaverbrook View

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's decision to confer with "the most-considered Commonwealth statesmen" was hailed today as the first step toward "getting back to sense today by RCAF plane.

Police said Thursday a man and a woman, both members of the Boyd bank robbery gang last September escaped last night with the arrest of the Blowers and the recovery of the baby about 10 hours after the child disappeared.

But it took police a few minutes to recognize it as her own daughter."

The baby's father, Fred Bond, said he had doubts at the time that the child was his.

"She had quite a mop of jet-black hair," he said.

Mr. Bond said it appeared as if somebody had tried to duplicate the baby. The undergarments were new, and even the booties appeared to be hand-knitted.

Linda's new clothing—white with some spots—was all of similar design, who wanted a baby, badly had prepared for one, Mr. Bond said. tried to duplicate the baby.

Mrs. Bond decided the baby was shopping.

Two Charged With Kidnapping Toronto Baby in Front of Store

TORONTO (CP) — Police today charged Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blower with kidnapping Linda Charmaine Bond from her carriage in front of an east-central five-and-ten-cent store.

They were remanded a week.

The husband, 32, was released on $1,000 bail and the 24 year-old wife was detained for mental examination.

Police said Mrs. Blower, mother of six children, "acted with the utmost exceptionally strong" longing for children.

Tried To Adopt Child

"For the last two years she has been hoping to have a second child but has been unable to have one," said a police official, "the couple said they even tried to adopt one. But they didn't have any luck."

Police said Thursday a man and woman, both members of the Boyd bank robbery gang last September escaped last night with the arrest of the Blowers and the recovery of the baby about 10 hours after the child disappeared.

Police said they had arrested Mrs. Beatrice Blower, 24, on a kidnapping charge. Her husband, Thomas, 32, is being held on a material witness.

Mrs. Audrey Gullar, who had been a carriage-shop operation, expected Thursday with Mrs. Bond, said:

"Mrs. Bond screamed as she took the bonnet off the baby. Her hair was so short she couldn't recognize it as her own daughter."

The baby's father, Fred Bond, said he had doubts at the time that the child was his.

"She had quite a mop of jet-black hair," he said.

Mr. Bond said it appeared as if somebody had tried to duplicate the baby. The undergarments were new, and even the booties appeared to be hand-knitted.

Refutes Report $87 Million 1951 Profit for Ford

NEW YORK (CP) — A story in the Wall Street Journal on 1951 earnings of the Ford Motor Co. has been challenged by Henry Ford II as inaccurate but the newspaper said today it had complete confidence in the statistics it published.

In a story Thursday, the Wall Street Journal said the Ford Motor Co. had a net profit of $87,000,000 in 1951. In Detroit, President Ford commented that the story made 33 "figure-guesses" and not one of them was correct.

The newspaper said in a statement today that "the Wall Street Journal does not engage in guesswork and did not in this news story."

Being a family owned concern, Ford does not have to file detailed financial statements as do most large corporations and its profits and sales totals have been well-kept secrets. It does file an abbreviated balance sheet in Massachusetts as required by that state's laws.

The latest statement filed with the Massachusetts tax commission showed the company had assets of $1,584,172,592.42 as of Dec. 31, 1951. This represented a gain of $115,081,592 for 1951. In 1950, Ford reported a gain in assets of $136,142,000.

Allege Chiang's Men in Junks When Canadian Captain Killed

HONG KONG (Reuters)—A coroner's court in Hong today heard a Canadian captain of a British freighter—pursued by armed Chinese junks—died after the ship's Nationalist troops. Both Chinese port fast week—was murdered by "a person or persons unknown."

Coroner James Wicks said most of the Chinese who boarded the ship waving sub-machine guns and revolvers, were wearing khaki uniforms and a white sun on a blue sky, the symbol of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist troops. But he did not go as far as the first witness of the freighter Rosita, who identified the attackers as "Nationalist soldiers."

The British-registered 700 ton steamer Rosita left the Communist port of Hong Wha Dec. 1, after unloading fertilizer. The 53-year-old captain, Robert Adam of Montreal, was cut down by a machine-gun bullet as he tried to reach the unarmed ship from pursuing Chinese junks. Adams is survived by his wife and two children in Scotland.

Mate Eric Shakehaft, 29, told the court how the junks pulled alongside the Rosita and the armed Chinese jumped aboard.

"I thought at first they were pirates," he said. "Then I saw we were faced with uniformed men in the right to channel steel from the public if it desires.

New Aircraft Flies Like Airplane But Lands, Takes off Like 'Copter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Aircraft which take off and land like helicopters and fly like airplanes are practical and ready for development, leaders in a new field of aviation said today.

Speakers at a "convertible aircraft congress" disclosed the hybrid craft—combining the best of flying cheaper, faster—and much safer.

One of them, Dr. J.A.J. Bennett, an engineer with Bell Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, Calif., also proposed the use of "short-haul jet-powered helicopters as aerial taxis.

Bennett said in a prepared paper that helicopters can be used to pick up shipments from rooftops or ship decks and launch them, or to catch them as they come in and lower them to tiny landing areas, much as harbor tug-boats shepherd huge liners into port or out again.

Gerard P. Herrick, president of Convertiplane Corp., New York City, and builder 20 years ago of the first aircraft to "fly both ways" —like a helicopter and like an airplane—also spoke on the subject: the true convertiplane "will soon be here."

Models and sign drawings of several convertiplane types were displayed, but no actual craft was described or discussed.

Herrick's design de Franeau of Pletiner Aircraft Corp., New Garden, Pa., has a single rotor powered by a shaving of membered engine. Two propellers are used for forward flight.

SCHOOL FOR DEAF CLOSES FOR HOLIDAY ON DECEMBER 17

The Ontario School for the Deaf will close its doors for the Christmas holidays on Wednesday, December 17th. It will reopen on January 5th.

Pupils living in Northern Ontario will leave by bus for their homes in the late afternoon of December 17th. All other pupils will leave by train the following morning.

It is likely that 360 of the 381 pupils enrolled will be going home. Those remaining in the school will enjoy Christmas dinner and entertainment.

BIRTH CERTIFICATE FOUND AT STATION

Passing at a service station near Trenton the other day, A. D. McLean, manager of the Imperial Oil Company branch here, found a birth certificate. It is believed the certificate was lost while the parents were stopped at the service station.

It bears the name of "Muriel Jacqueline McCannon" and is dated June 18, 1950. Its number is 250631.

The certificate is at present in the possession of Mr. McLean.

Fantail Pigeon Wins Top Show Awards This Year

A white fantail pigeon owned by George K. Graham, Trent Road, has set a North American record by winning best bird in show titles at three major pigeon shows in one year.

The bird has just returned from Chicago where it won best bird in show award at the Western Fancier Club show. Previously this year it had won similar victories at Boston and at the Toronto Royal Winter Fair.

Christmas Party Held By Energetic Club

The Energetic Club 'o' Holloway Street United Church held its annual Christmas party at Holloway St. Church on Wednesday evening at which their children were entertained. Approximately 100 hungry persons sat down at the long, decorated tables to the strains of Christmas carols on recordings, to enjoy a delicious turkey dinner, cooked by the ladies of the club.

After all had partaken of the good things the president, Carson Stratton, introduced the honorary members, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Campbell. Mr. Campbell thanked the club for the privilege of again meeting with the members, although a goodly number were new faces, as he said Mrs. Campbell were the parents of the club, which was formed in 1931. He gave some of the history of the club and the chief reasons of its formation.

The vice-president, Frank Wilson, was master of ceremonies. Recitations were given by Bruce Post, Roger Morton and Steve Wilson, followed by a piano solo by Maureen Wyatt; a recitation by Claire Wilson and a vocal trio by Connie, Barry and Douglas Hicks.

A telegram was received to say that Santa's bells had been heard over Kingston and that he was heading for Belleville. Recitations were also given by Gail Grestris, Jackie Thompson, Harold Townsend and Diane O'Neil; a piano solo by Joyce White.

Barbara McMillan and Sandra Ostingford were favorites with a six-piece duet, followed by recitations by Donna Thomasson, Marilyn Howard and Douglas Hickie. Nonnie Post sang two numbers, accompanied by her mother. As the children sang "Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer" Santa arrived with a pack full of toys and a bag of candy for each child.

The 1952 party thus brought to a close and voted by all as one of the best.

Bride from Belleville Wins $10,000 Home in Toronto She Can't 'Describe the Thrill'

Old Lady Luck is much more than a myth. She is very much a reality for a young married couple in Toronto who until a few months ago lived in Belleville.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson, 113 Woodington Ave., Toronto, were notified they were the winners of a $10,000 colonial home by winning the $1 ticket. In addition to place it on, and about $1,000 worth of other prizes. Mrs. Wilson is the former Maria Laskaris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Laskaris, 182 Foster Ave., of this city.

She was the winner of the Bride Year Contest, sponsored by a jewellery firm. She won the home, the homesite, as well as two gowns worth $300, a $70 coat and a $250 diamond ring. Mr. Wilson gets a home workshop worth $300, enough paint to paint the new house inside and out, Venetian blinds worth $150, a $200 oil burner and a $20 birthstone ring.

Married Month Ago

The young couple were married just a month ago, the bride's name being submitted to the contest by Mrs. Clifford Everton Ave., Toronto. The winner came to Toronto from more than 50,000 entries.

"It's a dream of a lifetime come true," Mrs. Wilson told me in a telephone conversation with The Intelligencer today. "I have always had the attitude," the young bride continued, "that as it is possible to win, we had that, mine would be the last to be picked. But it is so wonderful I can't describe the thrill."

Asked when she planned on moving into the home, Mrs. Wilson said the details were not completed as yet and she didn't know what was going to happen, however, she added, as soon as it is possible, we will move to our new home."

Works with Trust Company

Mrs. Wilson works for the Canada Trust Company in Toronto and has only been there a week. The young bride-to-be said she received the news at 3.30 p.m. yesterday at the manager's office and broke up a directors' meeting with the news that she had won $10,000." The manager put her in a cab and sent her home. Mrs. Wilson is back at work today, "deliriously happy and excited." The bride's parents in Belleville were among the first to know of their daughter's good fortune. An excited telephone call from Maria in Toronto brought the news of the good fortune. "I am very glad, and Maria is very happy and excited about it all," said Mrs. Laskaris today.

Well-Known Musician

Until she moved to Toronto following her marriage, Mrs. Wilson lived in Belleville. She met her husband while he was working in this city with a finance company. Mrs. Wilson is well known in the city as a pianist.

The Wilsons live in a three-room apartment. When he learned of the good fortune he summed it all up by saying, "Lady Luck has given us a head start of about five years."

Trenton Flyers Defeat Moiras In Court Game

The RCAF "Blues" handed the loop-leading Belleville Moira Thrift Store Flyers in Bay of Quinte Intermediate "B" Basketball League circles a 74-50 setback to keep them by a 50-45 score in the collegiate gymnasium.

The Blues won the game in the second half after trailing the Moiras 27-24, thanks to the sharp shooting of Muirhead and Batchelor. O'Hara, Flyers star, had put the Blues in the running by potting 10 points.

Flyers had the edge of play in the second and third quarters. Sparked by Batchelor, Watson and Air Force; McLeod, Watson, O'Hara, McLeod, Campbell Rockburn, Jones, Hall, Jones, Hearnden, Ruggins and Baxter. Referees: Jones and Carson. Timer: Fred Clarke. Scorer: Don Sudley.

Several Cases Of Scarlet Fever Reported by MOH

The red cards of warning are beginning to be seen a few places in the city, these particular notices proclaim the fact that the once dreaded disease of scarlet fever is present within the walls of the placarded dwelling.

Six cases have been reported to the health department this week and this is premature weeks, bringing the total to eight cases.

The name scarlet fever, no longer means the fear and panic it once did. All cases respond well to the treatment taken, placing the disease on the list of less serious childhood diseases.

Responds to Treatment

Dr. Reid Ketchi, medical officer of health, commenting on the number of cases in the city, said today, "scarlet fever as seen today is by no means as feared as it once was, and it is one which usually responds dramatically to antibiotic treatment."

Asked whether he considered the possibility of an epidemic, the medical officer said, "It is unlikely the disease will jump to such proportions, but with the advent of the cold weather we anticipate a number of cases will be reported. Scarlet fever is a disease of the winter months and not unusual at this time of year."

Many local doctors can not recall any cases of this disease for a number of years in this city. One doctor in particular mentioned they were the first cases he had seen since the war years.

Victoria Park Acquiring New Look Due to Efforts Of Energetic Committee

A former beauty spot of Belleville that in the past few years has deteriorated into little more than an obnoxious swamp once again may become a source of pride and pleasure to residents and visitors alike.

There's going to be a new look about Victoria Park, situated in the ravine behind the Memorial Arena.

"There still remains," he said, "an area of about 200 feet yet to be filled. This work will be completed before spring unless complications set in. Six men and another man in charge of a bulldozer have been working on the project.

"I would like to see the job finished by 1953," Alderman Keegan said. "Certainly it is well worth the money to Belleville as a tourist attraction."

Working with Mr. Keegan on the project are Mrs. Max Matthews, chairman of the parks commission, P. E. Ellis, Harry Smith, Alderman Donald Thompson, Freeman Burrows and J. J. Morch.

Mail Early and Address Letters, Packages Clearly Says Postmaster

"Mail early and address letters and parcels fully and accurately," is the advice of Postmaster J. C. Waddell today as he noted that the annual Christmas post office rush was now commencing.

Mr. Waddell said the volume of mail has increased already from normal and would gradually build up to a peak a few days before Christmas Day It was expected that approximately 100 additional workers would be taken on to assist in handling the 1952 Christmas mail. The first of these would commence tomorrow, with others to be taken on as the mailing rush demanded.

"Letters and parcels that are neither fully nor accurately addressed will be delayed and are familiar with cannot in the city but during the Christmas rush the new help is completely beaten unless mail carries full and accurate addresses."

As has been the custom in recent years, a temporary wicket mailed at the local post office will be handled by the parcel metering machine. This greatly speeds up service.

However, to keep up with the demand for stamps, the extra wickets will be set up to serve customers in the post office lobby. To avoid delays as much as possible these stamp wickets will be manned by licensed stamp clerks. In this way it is expected that the lineups for stamps seen in other years will no longer be necessary. Porters in the lobby will direct customers to the additional stamp wickets.

Death Ends 64-Year Barber Partnership

MILFORD, Mass. (AP)—Death Thursday ended what may have been the country's oldest barbering partnership. Joseph B. McClure, 90, died in hospital. For 66 of his 74 years as a barber, McClure worked for Frank H. Thomas, who at 92 has been cutting hair for 78 years.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils continued to lead a mixed stock market in early afternoon trading.

Volume for the first three hours totalled 838,000 shares.

Western oils gained strength steadily during the session as more issues attracted support. The list of small gains was led by Trans-Empire and Gridoil. Anglo-Canadian fell headed the losers.

Retail stores were strong in the industrials list and utilities, banks and papers gained. Steels and foods weakened while most other groups were mixed.

Senior golds held firm in spite of a $1 loss by McIntyre but junior showed a majority of small losses. Bellexterre was an exception with a loss of 20 cents. Prospects aided by Convest, but Gunnar made a small gain.

Hudson Bay continued weakest in base metals with a loss of $1.75 in early afternoon. A few lower-priced issues traded actively. Ascot moved 70,000 shares for a gain of pennies. Fenimore and Eastern metals, added pennies in active trading but Nesbitt-Labine dropped a penny. East Sullivan also slipped.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter prices were unchanged here today.

Prices were slightly higher at the egg auction but trade was steady. Grade A large packed in wood sold at 40 cents. Quotations for graded eggs in fibre cases were: A large 56; A medium 50-54; A small 30-36; grade B 33-33; grade C 29-29. Wholesale to retail: A large 43-44; A medium 39-40; A small 33-36; grade B 37-38; grade C 33-34.

Butter solids: first grade 63-63½; no price established on second, third, or Western butter.

United Church W. A. Sponsors Successful Bazaar, Tea

DESERONTO — The W.A. of the United Church held its annual bazaar on Wednesday afternoon in the church parlor, which was gaily decorated in traditional Christmas style.

Mrs. G. Shea presided at the tea table with its white linen cloth, centred with a lovely silver basket of 'mums' Little guest tables white covered, which were also centered with 'mums,' surrounded the tea tables.

The tea assistants were: Mrs. R. Walker; Mrs. A. Walker; Mrs. G. Walker; Mrs. A. Gordon; Mrs. H. Transue; Mrs. G Burley; Mrs. J. White, Mrs. W. Anson; Mrs. H. McKee; Mrs. C. Rendell, Mrs. R. K. Jackson; Mrs. G. Stuart; Mrs. J. Clarke and Mrs. L. Gordon-lee.

Receiving at the door were the receptionist, the president, Mrs. James Dowson, and Mrs. W. Neelands.

Fancy work and apron booth was convened by Mrs. Don Dawson; Mrs. J. Young and Mrs. M. Detlor. For the Christmas shoppers there were gifts for every member of the family, with booklets, bonnets, for the newest arrival, also mitts, mitts, doubts, pot holders, towels, lovely aprons in all kinds of material, half and full for mother and grandmother and a hamock to rest Dad's or Grandpa's feet.

Variety of Products

The farm booth in charge of Mrs. H. McCaul, Mrs. H. Vanvlack and Mrs. K. Clement, offered a variety of products and home cooking to appreciative buyers.

The Evening Association booth, which was convened by Mrs. Sid Brown, Mrs. E. Gibson and Mrs. T. E. Thomlinson, was the Christmas centre-piece, surrounded by a wide variety of work from the members.

The parcel post was supervised by Mrs. S. Shea and Mrs. C. Young, who were kept busy disposing of their mail, to a steady line of customers at their wicket.

The white elephant table in charge of Mrs. P. Stover and Mrs. Crothers, offered rare bargains for all.

Most Popular

Home cooking, in charge of Mrs. W. Joyce and Mrs. W. Frink, and the candy booth in charge of Mrs. C. M. Lafferty and Mrs. M. Ryan were, as usual, the most popular spots. How one could find cakes, tarts, cookies, buns, and small cakes, also all manner of goodies, bon bons fudge, and creams for the family enjoyment.

A substantial sum was realized from the bazaar and the members are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts.

Catholic Women's League Hears Interesting Reports

The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held on Monday in St. Michael's High School, John Street, with Rev. L. J. Garvin, spiritual director, present, and Mrs. J. E. Hoyt, president, in the chair.

The first vice-president reported a paid-up membership of 302; the second vice-president recorded on the presentation of prizes to the pupils of St. Michael's Academy and Holy Rosary School and to St. Michael's music studio. Third vice-president reported the Christmas baskets were to be packed and sent to the needy and that donations for these baskets would be gratefully received on, or before December 19 at the home of Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick, John St. There is still a great need for quilts and blankets for several families.

Thanks Tendered

Thanks were extended to those who had donated articles of clothing. A box of comforts for the women inmates of the penitentiary, Kingston, is being forwarded to Father Way, chaplain. Corresponding secretary has sent several letters during the month and has read acknowledgments, one of which was a letter of thanks from High School Y.C.W.A. for the $200 donation towards cost of reconditioning the campus.

Sacredness of Home

Mrs. J. Anton has obtained five new subscribers to the Canadian Messenger magazine.

The Register campaign has to date reached $1,800 in commissions. Mrs. James Lynch reported that the W.C.W.L. had given nursing service to 48 patients last month.

Forty-seven and one-half hours were spent assisting the Department of Health in the schools and child health clinics. Mrs. Hudson visited 52 patients during the month at Belleville General Hospital. Mrs. R. Gavin is to be deposited in the building fund of St. Michael Archangel Parish.

UNTHINKABLE EMBARRASSMENT

By the barest possible chance, Clayton Price, clerk of Dungannon Township, has been spared an embarrassment which the public relations counsel should be required to face in the performance of his duties.

In the Dungannon municipal elections on December 3 a tie-vote was reported for two school board nominees. One of the candidates was Mrs. Price, the clerk's wife. The other candidate was Donald Littlejrroad, a neighbor. And the law provides that in the event of a tie-vote the municipal clerk must cast the deciding ballot.

The unenviable position in which Mr. Price found himself when the votes were tallied on election night can be hardly imagined. Among those who noted his predicament from a distance we can be sure that the refined strain of sadism which is an undoubted element of a robust sense of humor provoked many a lond guffaw of delight. Others, we hope, were moved to more humanely sympathetic without indulging themselves an almost gleeful contemplation of the unhappy alternatives which confronted their hapless fellow benedict in this fell clutch of ironic circumstance?

As a hypothetical situation the incident humor is delightful. As a very real matter it presents a most thought-provoking problem.

However, there did remain one saving possibility. An official recount might break the tie. But in the intervening week Mr. Price must have captured an ordeal which few municipal clerks have ever had to go through.

Happily, when the recount was conducted Wednesday before County Judge J. C. Anderson, a ballot previously ruled out as spoiled was declared valid. Macpherson was declared elected to the school board by a majority of one vote.

Mr. Price was spared a decision few men could face with equanimity.

It is altogether probable that this case is unique in Canadian elections records. Certainly when the law first designated municipal clerks to break ties they must cast the deciding vote in the event of a tie, such a situation could not have been anticipated. This procedure was in effect long before women were enfranchised or wives could have been candidates for office.

We suggest quite seriously that such a situation should not be permitted to occur again. It is responsibility enough for a municipal clerk to find himself in the position at times where his vote must decide an election which may involve close personal friends. It is unnecessary—if not downright cruel—that election laws should require any man to decide between his wife and anyone else who might be a candidate for public office, or, indeed, a candidate for anything whatsoever!

We are sure that if the members of the Ontario Legislature are merely asked to put themselves in the position of a municipal clerk in such-a circumstance some other provision will be agreed to with alacrity on all sides.

AN OUTSTANDING ACHIEVEMENT

Last year in this province, awards made by the Workmen's Compensation Board as a result of industrial accidents amounted to slightly less than $25,000,000. In addition there was an indirect—but nonetheless real — loss to practically every employer. And the same loss was ultimately a charge paid by the Canadian consumer.

These facts are to be noted in estimating the importance of the industrial safety award which was presented a few days ago when the Northern Electric plant here completed 2,000,000 man-hours without a lost-time injury. This record placed "the Northern" at the head of 97 firms in Canada which have had similar awards. It represents a clean sheet without a lost-time injury since October 18, 1951.

The safety mark now is 3,000,000 man-hours, a goal which would put the plant in top safety position for the province among all categories of industry affiliated with industrial accident prevention associations.

Records of this sort are not achieved without the fullest co-operation of everyone on the 880-man payroll. Constant vigilance is the essential factor in individual safety but there must be plant-wide teamwork to achieve the remarkable record of operating the plant well into a second year without a single injured loves of time from work.

It is evident that among Northern Electric employees, safe practices at work are as important as the job itself. And that safety consciousness does not end with employment by intensive education and safety supervision. The most minor injuries are made subjects of special studies to determine corrective measures. Special films are shown to illustrate plant hazards, meetings and conferences in small departments and at all levels are devoted to the safety cause.

The results are manifold. The men and women of "the Northern" have gained undoubted personal satisfaction, as well as material production rewards, in achieving their record. Their safety habit in continuing to maintain it they have created working conditions for themselves in which they are insured more personal safety than when they are in their own homes, or on the streets and highways.

And finally, of course, they have made a contribution to the productive economy of the country which is shared in some measure by the whole community.

CHRISTMAS WISH

What I'd like to have for Christmas
Is a thing you can't put
In a minute;
The family all around me and
Me together with laughter
In it.
Never mind the usual trinkets, wrapped in tissue, tied with ribbon,
I want chuckles from the oldest
To the baby with her bib on.

Let me settle in my corner when
The Christmas tree is lighted;
I'll enjoy their shouts of wonder
As the youngsters grow excited.

Let me see their bright eyes shining
At their gifts and then with health the pink of.
As my gift for Christmas morning
That the finest I can think of.

What I really want for Christmas
Is a gift that's precious very,
It's the family all around me and A Christmas Day that's merry.

But the richest man now living hasn't gold enough to buy it;
Only God does grant it and
His blessings must supply it.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WITH WHAT WE HAVE

We are only accountable for what we do with those things that material possessions who have material influence, fame or left the greatest heritage to the world have been those who used what they were with what they had. Most of these benefactors were poor.

Happiness is relative. I have known many rich people who have been happy, than rich people. Happiness is something that is in the heart. If you have it there, you are rich! It's safer there, too, than it would be anywhere on earth, unless you could transfer it to some other person's heart.

A safe rule is to be content with what you have until you are in a position to add to what you have without creating a worry. The great of this earth grew from what they had in the first place. How little Lincoln had, as well as countless others who have blessed the world! Many have been those who were looked upon as failures until they began to do something about what they had.

The light from many a life has lit the flame of ambition in others who have, in turn, lighted a lamp in other lives. We grow largely from observance. The thought flashes to each one of us that we, too, may become great through usefulness. As Longfellow wrote it: "Lives of great men all remind us we can make our lives sublime!" We can become inspired when the laws are simply not enforced—are precisely the same as those which appear when gambling is legalized.

life on mountain peaks." There are valleys, winding roads, and open paths, and unexpected circumstances that we must encounter with conquer through courage. With courage alone men have mounted as eagles to the heights of greatness what you have —then do your best. Be envious only in that you have your own efforts.

We often wish for the equipment of those who succeed. We forget that the equipment that is ours is best in our own hands. There are no substitutes for what We, and what we have, may well prove to set us apart as unique. spoke of his greatest happiness, please.

Gambling Is Dirty

(Mesaba Jew Times-Herald)

The American Bar Association's commission on organized crime, after two years of research, agrees that gambling is a "dirty business" and that legalization of gambling is no answer to the evils.

This is new expert opinion contrary with much stated by, taken by the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and many others who have studied the problem. It gives strong support to those who contend that gambling is gambling and leads to crime and other evils whether it is legal and whether it is done for charity or for the welfare of gang bosses.

Not only are there no "positive arguments in favor of professional gambling in terms of intrinsic worth or social utility," the lawyers' group points out, but "the evils that flow from tolerated illegal gambling are the same as they are simply not enforced—are precisely the same as those which appear when gambling is legalized.

Unusual Is Occurring as Usual In Records of Human Mishaps

(By Paul Jones, Director of Public Information, U.S. National Safety Council)

For those who are upset by a feeling that things aren't what they used to be, the National Safety Council has this reassuring word: Unusual accidents are going on just as usual.

In fact the Council is able to report that accidents of all kinds are continuing to happen, but they are happening in the same old ways.

The Council's annual rounding up of freak quseks shows that in 1952 animals were still shooting people and causing traffic crashes; folks still were falling drastic distances out of windows and down cliffs and walking away from the accident ....and safety experts were still getting hurt while what they tell other people not to do. For example:

Julius Monroe was awakened from his room in Baltimore, Md., by a sharp pain in his right hand. He looked over at the chair, and there was his pet rabbit moodily staring down the sights of a .22 calibre rifle. Monroe's trigger figures the rabbit hit the trigger accidentally.

But a pig in Luxemburg, Germany had a clear motive of self defence for shooting a butcher who was trying to kill him. As the butcher backed into the pig, the pig took leg-his gun the pig sprang up and struck the trigger with its hoof. The butcher was shot through the knee.

You can imagine the surprise of Mr. and Mrs. Milo R. Ewing of Denver, when a 30-pound meteorite landed kerplunk on the roof of their car as they drove along. The bolide crashed through the roof, the stockyards and, fleeing from the shock of impact, the Ewings had pass on to the Ewing car. Casualties: the meteorite, two frightened and banged-up people, and a badly battered car.

Sixty-year-old Louis De Rosa slipped while playing in a hallway of his home in Newark, New York City and fell down a stairwell. Five floors below he landed on the back of a German Shepherd dog named Prince. Neither dog nor boy was hurt badly.

But the champion distance faller in 1952 was 16-year-old Kenneth Wright, Jr., of Compton, Calif. Kenneth fell a distance of a 1,500-foot cliff near Lake Arrowhead when he slipped. He fell 200 feet virtually straight down, landed on a nearly vertical rockslide, rolled down the slide for 1,000 feet, then took another drop and rolled before reaching the foot of the cliff. He didn't break a bone. A real hardy kid.

Very few people are complaining these days that they are overloaded with dough. But it literally happened to the baker Bill Fawkes, of Atlanta, Ga., when 70 pounds of the stuff slipped from a mixing table, fell on his foot, fractured a bone.

Robert Moses, Brockton, Mass., had one consolation when his truck ripped through nine highway posts, rolled over on its side, and lay there quietly. It could have been worse. The truck was loaded with dynamite.

On a highway near Meridian, Miss., Mr. T. B. Middleton saw something fall from a station wagon travelling ahead of her. She picked it up, figured the people in the station wagon would eventually miss the purse and get it back. She set off to overtake them. She had a tough time. It too, for the occupants in the station wagon thought the purse-giving ever just wanted to play catch. Finally Middleton was caught up, after a 15-mile chase, and returned the lost purse.

And were the couple in the station wagon ever glad to get it back. It contained a pet squirrel. It was their two-year-old son!

The cleanest boy in all Indiana is Jerry Lee Mitchell, the three-year-old Michael Cannon, of Elwood. That was the day Mike was out in the garage, the washing machine just before his mother started it. Jerry thought it looked cool on the motor and was startled to hear loud and sudsy screams. Mike was rescued unharmed but alarmed, and abnormally shiny clean. Jerry, that is.

Safety hats are worn to prevent accidents. But they can work one by a civilian operator of a crane at the Portsmouth Navy Yard in New Hampshire. The Washington-made hat fell off and struck the man on the ground, breaking his nose.

And Cliff Gill, operations manager of a radio station in Los Angeles, was celebrating his birthday in 1952 for a long time. That was the day when Gill elected a director of the LA chapter of the National Safety Council and (2) broke both in his bathtub and broke two ribs.

Something In the Air

(Edmonton Journal)

When the subject of flying saucers, discs and such comes up there is always a natural human tendency to doubt the reality of sightings reported from distant parts of the world. The observation reported in the Journal is an airborne "horse" of another color, however, and so bound to arouse speculation anew.

The facts—for such they appear to be—were reported to the Journal by Editor Don Boyce of the Fairview Post.

They are, briefly, that Fred Clarke, employed by a pipeline company, his wife and grand-daughter, saw a strange craft in the air recently while driving about 30 miles northwest of Edmonton; that they viewed it from two different angles at what they estimated to be 1,000 feet elevation; that it was round in shape; that it resembled no conventional aircraft; that it held a stationary position for six or seven minutes; and then flew off very rapidly, and to their ears, soundlessly.

This unreliably gives every evidence of being a clear-cut observation of an actual object by alert and responsible persons.

What was this mysterious craft? What, in short, is going on in this little old world that nobody knows of or wishing to explain satisfactorily? Who wouldn't like to know?

Royalty On Stamps

(London Times)

Portraits of Prince Charles and Princess Anne appear this year's issue of "Health" stamps from New Zealand. Printed by photogravure, by photogravure, the Boy Princess appears on the 1½d. stamp (sold at a premium of ½d. in aid of Children's Health Camps), while the 2d. stamp shows the Girl Princess, an up-to-date likeness of the young Duke of Gloucester.

This is Prince Charles' second appearance on New Zealand postage stamps. Earlier stamps of the Dominion, the first being two years ago, bore the Prince's portrait between his mother's lap. Similar special stamps were issued in honor of the first de-partment of New Zealand yearly since 1931. Have made important contributions to the New welfare schemes. Last year more than five millions were issued, the 1½ d. denomination, and upwards of six million of the 2d.nild. were sold.

First among the younger members of the Royal Family to have his portrait on a postage stamp was the Prince of Wales, who appeared King Edward VIII, who figured in Highland costume on the stamps of the 1911 stamp of the province of New Brunswick in the year 1860, when he was the Prince of Wales.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

REST AFTER TOIL

Two navy veterans were reminiscing about the war. One spoke of his greatest happiness, which was that of the long and dangerous convoy run, his ship reached port again; the other spoke of his greatest happiness, which was that of the long watches and nights of rough weather and long watches when enemy's attacks behind him; the ship tieg alongside the dock, the engine stopped; and at last, the warm, leisurely, comfortable feeling as he settled down in his bunk w'l - a book knowing that for the first time in many months he could read till he dozed and then sleep undisturbed all night.

The feeling of peace of mind and body that comes after hard work well done—that is there to equal it? No enjoyment synthetically created by entertainers can compare with it. And it is free to all men.

But not all men know this feeling; some will never know it. It takes a combination of two essentials—work and rest to bring it about; hard work, and well-done work. It does not matter whether the work is physical or mental, but it must be taxing; for the truly rewarding sense of satisfaction comes only after a real effort. And it must be well done; inward peace does not spring from slipshod work.

To know this feeling regularly is a great part of human happiness.

HOW TO COPE WITH A MURMUR

A reader says that in this column a few weeks ago I answered a mother who asked for help in a diagnosis given her daughter by a school physician. The school physician, says the reader, diagnosed a heart murmur in the girl and advised against swimming or playing tennis. But, I, says the reader, told the mother to ignore the doctor and permit the young girl to engage in the sports of her desire. How the devil do I know whether the murmur is of the insignificant type, the reader asks.

All I know is that the mother told me, and she told me only that a school physician examining the pupils of her school had announced against such normal activities as swimming and tennis.

Detecting a "murmur" is hardly a diagnosis, as the reader regards it.

Even if the little girl had valvular disease, it by no means follows that she should be kept in a state of inactivity or playing tennis. This reader, who, I suspect, has been consulting the doctor if he is not a doctor himself, evidently harbors an antiquated notion of heart disease — the notion that one with heart disease must walk with a cane and be the rest of his or her life.

In the armed services, nearly 13,000 sixth grade school children, physicians found 1,000 of them to have heart murmurs —but only 119 of these presented any signs of heart trouble. In other words, nine times out of ten when a doctor says you or I think he or she detects a "murmur" when listening to the heart, it is insignificant and, in our opinion, the doctor should either not mention it at all or, if he or she does tell the patient or a responsible relative of finding of the patient about it it is his or her duty to give an opinion as to the significance of the murmur. That is, a diagnosis. If the doctor is uncertain about it he or she should say so and suggest consultation with another doctor upon the vital question of the kind of life the patient should lead.

In the C V D booklet about heart and other troubles (for a copy send 25c and stamped, self-addressed envelope) I explain that graduated exercise, under proper supervision, for the physically is the best way to develop reserve power when the heart is crippled by valvular leakage or other disease.

Even if the little girl happens to be one of the 119 out of 18,000 children with murmurs who really have valvular leakage or defect, I don't believe she would be at all likely to suffer "serious consequences," as the reader murmurs it, by cooperating with her swimming and tennis. Time to restrict her physical activities is when her physician finds her condition requires rest.

Former B.G.H. Nurses' Supervisor Describes Conditions in Pakistan

The monthly meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. George Stobbe, Front Rd., with Mrs. Stobbe presiding.

A letter was read from Miss Potts, former supervisor of nurses at the Belleville General Hospital, describing conditions as she finds them in Pakistan. Hospitals are primitive, understaffed and overcrowded. The nursing profession does not have the respected position it enjoys in western countries. In her endeavor to build up a nursing school she is frustrated by religious taboo, lack of a sense of time, lack of equipment and the general lowly concept of women who are merely considered instruments for propagating the race.

Miss Potts sent greetings to her many friends in Belleville and wished she might have the support of a women's auxiliary in her work.

$400 Cheque

The Opportunity Shop turned over a cheque in the amount of $400 to the auxiliary. This is the profit for the fall season which has been unusually successful in that people have generously contributed merchandise; come to buy, and donated their time in staffing the ship. A Christmas gift table is to be a feature this month and suitable articles would be welcome either as donations or on a consignment basis.

The Beta Sigma Phi acknowledged receipts of a cheque for $30 from the auxiliary, which will be expended on magazine subscription for the library cart at the hospital. Donations of current magazines are always welcome and may be left at the business office of the hospital.

Christmas Gifts

Mrs. L. Wilson was appointed convener of the committee to buy, wrap, and present Christmas gifts to ward patients and $50 was allotted for this purpose. This is an annual project of the auxiliary and is greatly appreciated by those unfortunate enough to be in hospital on Christmas day.

A regional meeting of women's hospital auxiliaries will be held before the second week in May and representatives from Trenton, Picton, Kingston, Bancroft, Cobourg, Campbellford and Belleville will be present.

Mrs. Stobbe announced her withdrawal from the presidency of the auxiliary due to the fact she will be out of town for an extended time.

Mrs. G. Scrimgeour moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Stobbe for her loyalty, help, encouragement and leadership over the years since the inception of the auxiliary in 1938.

Mrs. John Buchan is the new president of the auxiliary and she is also a member of the executive council of the Ontario Association of Hospital Auxiliaries. Mrs. Buchan was appointed to the latter position at the annual meeting held in Toronto in October, thus bringing honor to Belleville.

Following the business meeting tea was served by Mrs. Stobbe and a social hour was enjoyed by the large number of members present.

KILLED IN EXPLOSION

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—William McLaughlin, 46, was fatally injured Thursday in an explosion at the McCrae machine and foundry company. The explosion took place as employees worked on part of a stoker from the hospital.

Club Activities

MT. PLEASANT-RAWDON Y.P.U.

Mount Pleasant-Rawdon, Young People's Union held their Christmas meeting at the Allan School on Friday evening and a large number were in attendance.

The president, Mr. Ray Sharp, gave the call to worship and presided over the service. The pastor Rev. R. R. Bonsteel offered prayer following the reading of the Bible lesson.

Miss Betty McConnell presided at the piano and several Christmas carols were sung throughout the service.

Miss Ruth Linn read "A Comparison of Christmas Customs in Four Lands".

Mr. Ralph Johnson read "Silver Trumpet". Miss Ruth Sharpe contributed a piano solo.

Mr. George Scott and Miss Ina Scott gave two musical selections, violin and piano.

Miss R. McConnell read a Christmas poem, after which the president was in charge of a contest.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Bonsteel invited the Y.P.U. members to a New Year's Eve party at the parsonage.

The annual election of officers will be held at the Allan School on Friday evening, January 9, 1953.

STONE CHURCH M.B.

6th SIDNEY — The Stone Church Mission Band Christmas meeting was held at Mapleview school on Thursday afternoon.

The worship service, presided over by the president, Thelma Rushnell, taken from the "World Friends", included the singing of Christmas Carols and Scripture readings by several of the members.

It was decided to hold the next meeting on January 8th.

The program for the afternoon opened with the singing of "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." Mrs. E. B. Phillips read a Christmas story about the little child who wanted to see Santa. Mrs. F. Tucker, the Mission Band leader, reviewed previous chapters of the Study Book, "Nyanga and the two villages," and gave another chapter.

At the close of the story, Mrs. Tucker and Mrs. Phillips treated the children with candy and popcorn.

Mrs. J. A. Wright and Mrs. H. Gray were also visitors for the afternoon's program.

CIGAR STOVE BOLDUP

TORONTO (CP) — Benjamin Sable, 70, struggled with two armed men who held up his car store Thursday night. Before being knocked down by a gut butt, he managed to pull a coat off one of them. The thieves escaped with between $25 and $30.

WEDDINGS

SMEGAL—McAVOY

The marriage of Shirley Madeline McAvoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McAvoy and Stanley Thomas Smegal, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Smegal, all of Oshawa, was solemnized recently in Simcoe Street United Church, Oshawa.

White and chrysanthemums decorated the church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Phillip Coffey.

The wedding music was played by Miss Jean Clodds and Mrs. W. H. Gifford sang "Ave Marie" and "Panis Angelicus."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in Chantilly lace over slipper satin. A Queen Anne neckline and long sleeves styled the fitted bodice and the full skirt fell into a train. A corsage of pearls and rhinestones held her long veil and she carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and white chrysanthemums. She wore pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Betty McAvoy, sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor wearing gold velvet and net. The junior attendants were, Mrs. Dorothy McAvoy, sister-in-law of the bride; Miss Cecilia Casey, Miss Helen Roache, and Miss Leona Quinsmis, all in forest green. The junior attendants were, Miss Mary McAvoy, sister of the bride, and Miss Janice Smegal, niece of the bridegroom, in pansy corduroy.

The attendants' gowns were of ballerina length and identically fashioned with velvet bodices and net over taffeta skirts. Their headdresses were coronets of gold and they carried Talisman roses and yellow and bronze chrysanthemums.

Miss Betty Jarrell of Belleville, and Miss Gail Sawyer, nieces of the bride, were flower girls in floor length gowns of yellow taffeta with matching capes and mittens and carrying baskets of sweetheart roses and chrysanthemums. Master Michael Jarrell, Belleville, nephew of the bride, was the ring bearer.

Mr. Frank Smegal was best man and the ushers were Mr. Steven Smegal, Mr. Chester Bosche, Mr. Patrick McAvoy and Mr. Kenneth McAvoy.

A reception was held at the Welsh Hall, Olive Avenue, where the bride's mother received wearing mulberry lace and crepe. The bridegroom's mother, who assisted her was in green. Both wore black accessories and corsages of roses and chrysanthemums.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Smegal left for a wedding trip to Syracuse, New York and Watertown and on their return will live in Oshawa. For travelling the bride wore a gold-colored suit with a white feather hat and harmonizing accessories.

Guests were present from Hamilton, Belleville, Stirling, and Marysville.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Leona Loescher, 42, Thursday was committed for trial on a charge of trying to murder her seven-week-old baby, William Droppo. Mrs. Loescher's landlord, testified at a hearing that on Nov. 19 Mrs. Loescher burst into his bedroom to say that she had struck her baby with a hammer.

Wesley United Church Holds Yuletide Bazaar

The first bazaar and tea of Wesley United Church, Trent Road, was officially opened on Friday last by the Rev. R. W. T. Middleton, who most cordially welcomed the guests, who after being greeted by a silent welcome to the vestibule, were received by Mrs. Harry Rutter, the president of the W.A. and Mrs. Middleton.

The church was decorated with red and green garlands, pine boughs with silver and gold bulbs and a Christmas tree with colored lights.

The home cooking table enticing with its Christmas cover, centred with "The Nativity" scene, was laden with all kinds of good things in the pastry line, including, cakes, pies, cookies, tarts, cup cakes and bread. This was convened by Mrs. Burnette, assisted by Mrs. Fox and Mrs. Gunn.

The apron and novelty booth, convened by Mrs. Gooding, assisted by Mrs. Rush, was heavily laden with all sorts of pretty items in a variety of patterns and shades, while the novelty table displayed lovely crocheted edged centrepieces and handkerchiefs, chesterfield sets, pot holders, dish clothes and pillow cases.

Gorgeous Sight

The fancy good table was a gorgeous sight of Christmas wrapped parcels, looked after by Mrs. Charles Wilson.

In the choir loft, Mrs. Wright, assisted by Mrs. Calnan and Mrs. Frederick, displayed a lovely variety of homemade candy and plants, which were soon purchased.

The centre front of the church was used for the tea room. The tea table was lovely with its lace cloth and centre of Santa Claus with his sleigh and eight tiny reindeer, laden with toys, and flanked with crystal candelabra with red and green candles and silver tea service.

Mrs. Fred Wilson, Mrs. Denyes, Sr., and Mrs. Rutter, Sr., poured tea. Mrs. Saylor invited the guests to the tearoom.

Mrs. Downey, Mrs. Genesseaux, and Mrs. Bird served tea.

Replenishing the plates were Mrs. Walter Denyes and Mrs. Bulmer.

The general convener was Mrs. Windover, who deserves much credit for her work. Appreciation is also due to all the conveners for a delightful tea and bazaar, also to Mr. Gooding and Mr. Rutter, who lent their assistance in every way possible.

Tabernacle Keen Age Club Installs Officers

The Keen Age Club recently celebrated their fifth birthday with a turkey dinner in the church parlors with the president, Paulin Huddleston, presiding.

During a brief business period the treasurer, Audrey Davies, announced that the club had made $1,000 this year.

Mrs. Quinch of the O.S.D. was the guest speaker, who told of the work being carried on at the O.S.D. She was introduced by Clare Lathangue and thanked by Shirley Kelleher.

Jerry Jerome played several accordion solos and Mrs. Tinkess sang, accompanied by Dorothy Lockyer.

Audrey Davies moved a vote of thanks to the entertainers.

Miss Ethel Horton presided over the installation of officers which are as follows, president, Shirley Kelleher; 1st vice-president, Doris Davidson; 2nd vice-president, Keith Stanton; secretary, Nettie Shaw; treasurer, Keta Redner; devotional convener, Phyllis Rowley; program convener, Winnie McCrady, Gladys Robinson; Sick convener, Lil Wiley; press, Audrey Davies; lookout, Rose Coe, Ruth Pettifor; manse, Lil Hall; hostesses, Sicila Firth, Theone Godin; catering, Kit Cornish.

Pauline Huddleston, on behalf of the club, presented Katherine Alexander, who is leaving to reside in Port Hope, with an aluminum tray.

Shirley Kelleher presented the retiring president, Pauline Huddleston with a cup and saucer.

The usual free will offering was taken for the Children's Aid.

Gifts were distributed by Santa's helpers, Winnie McCrady, Nettie Shaw, Lil Wiley and Jo Douglas.

New Canadians Enjoy Christmas Party at Collegiate Institute

On Monday evening, over 80 new Canadians, following their night classes in English at Belleville Collegiate Institute, gathered with two of their teachers, Mr. M. Bliss, and Mr. W. J. Musgrove, in the gymnasium, as guests of the University Women's Club at a Christmas party.

Mrs. Dorland Houston, program director for the evening, greeted the guests with a warm welcome, and the party began with a merry-making dance of the Roger de, Coverly type, with Mrs. W. L. Langlois at the piano. After the dance, all settled down to enjoy favorite Christmas carols with six or more different languages blending in a harmonious whole.

Joachim Reimann, who has a fine tenor voice, and who has been here only 14 months from Germany, sang "Silent Night, Holy Night", in English.

Star of Program

Madam Katharina Hendrickse, opera singer from Holland, and star of the program, who is teaching singing at Albert College, appeared for her first numbers in a beautiful Dutch costume, complete with white headdress, flaxen curls, colorfully embroidered collar, shawl and apron, and wooden clogs.

Her first number was the Dutch national dance, followed by two amusing Dutch songs, which were so well interpreted that, in spite of the unfamiliar language, one could not fail to catch the meaning.

Madam Hendrickse's piano skill is as much a part of her as is her beautiful voice. Such talent as hers with her years of training and experience, caused each one to feel highly privileged to hear her.

Violin Solos

Joachim Reimann, with Mrs. W. N. Hurst as accompanist, played two moving violin solos, English "Czardas", by Monti, and "Serenade", by Toselli. Mr. Reimann is an earnest young new Canadian, most anxious to improve, and doing well in his English and violin study.

Teddy Szymczak, here also for 14 months from Poland, via Germany and prison camp, is skilled in harmonica playing, and found popular appeal with "South of the Border", a German sea-song, and to-tapping Polish polka. His second number was greeted with such a pleasant humming that he was requested to replay it in accompaniment to the singing of the song in German.

Madam Hendrickse delighted her audience for the second time with two numbers, one in Italian, depicting the naughty sailor, and one in French portraying the bergerette or shepherdess.

Square Dancing

Under the direction of Miss Dorothy Mattinson, several girls from the leader's group of the Collegiate gave a well-executed demonstration of square dancing. The girls taking part included: Alberta Fox, Anne Enright, Beth Wilbur, Margaret Anderson, Jean Frost, Violet Coulter, Myrtle Urea, Shirley Bird and Marjorie Kellett. Two of the leader's group, Mary Bertrand and Margaret Anderson, acted as callers for a number of square dances with Mr. L. D. Read at the piano.

Joachim Reimann, on behalf of the new Canadians, thanked the University Women's Club, in English, for their friendly hospitality which means so much to lonely new comers in this country.

Social Hour

Refreshments were served and a social hour spent with guests and hostesses enjoying the effort to converse together. The language gulf of these new Canadians must bridge is a wide one; may they, one and all, have every success in their endeavor to learn English.

Y.P.U. Officers Named for 1953

Officers for the new year were elected at the regular meeting of the Tabernacle Y.P.U. held early this week.

President is E. Lashway and Miss Ida Ketcheson is vice president. Honorary president is Rev. R. A. Rowley and councelor Robt. Hadcock. Secretary is Miss Joyce Moore.

Conveners are as follows, pub-lication, Meribeth Holgate; faith and evangelism, Ida Ketcheson; stewardship and training, John Hobson; citizenship and community, John L. Hanna; missions, Rosemary Hunter, recreation and culture, D. Wyman and Miss Beverly Digby; pianist, Meribeth Holgate.

MAIL COPTER GROUNDED

NEW YORK (AP)—Helicopter mail service between New York and Connecticut was inaugurated Thursday, but heavy rain grounded the flying windmill at White Plains N.Y., before it completed its first round-trip. The helicopter, with 200 pounds of mail aboard, left La Guardia field in a heavy rain at 7:39 a.m. EST and made six stops in Westchester county and Connecticut.

Much credit for this highly successful Christmas party goes to Mrs. W. J. Doyle, the general convener; to Mrs. Dorland Houston, director of the fine program, and to Mrs. P. T. Seibert and Miss Betty Monteith, who were in charge of the refreshments.

This second annual Christmas party for new Canadians was a project.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going out with a fellow who is eight years older than I am. We are very companionable, and have become quite dependent on being together; and, in fact, are quite devoted to each other. Yet we're not sure we're in love.

We enjoy doing the same things, and we have a great many mutual friends, and always have good times, whether out in a crowd or just by ourselves.

Do you think we are really in love? I don't quite know why it is that, when we are so fond of each other and would rather be together than with anyone else, we still seem to be so unsure of ourselves.—Patricia.

Dear Patricia:

I have an idea that you may be unsure of your feelings for each other because there is so much of an age difference between you. Of course, I don't know whether or not you may have thought of this yourselves, but, if not, you may have a subconscious feeling of insecurity about it. Talk this over with your friend and see if there may not be something in it.

As for the fact of that eight years' difference in age itself, it doesn't sound to me as though it constituted any barrier between you. On the contrary, everything you say makes it appear that you are quite happily suited to each other. When a man and a girl have been a good deal of each other over an extended period of time, when, in the main, their interests lie along the same paths, when they enjoy the same sort of recreation and the same kind of people, when their ideals and standards are essentially the same, and when, on top of all this, they find themselves increasingly happy in each other's company, then I would say they certainly were in love.

Family disapproved because he was divorced

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I was in high school, I went around with a boy whom I had very much and he liked me just as much. After graduation, he and his family moved away, and after awhile I heard that he had married.

Recently he came back to visit old friends in town, and, while here, he told me that he and his wife had never got along and that they were divorced. He took me out on a lot of dates, and told me he still thought an awful lot of me, but my family were angry about it because they disapproved of divorce, and didn't want me to go with him.

He went away again after a few weeks and I haven't heard from him, and I am afraid he thinks he shouldn't write to me because of the way my family feels. I fell for him rather hard, though, and I believe things could be worked out between us if we could only keep on seeing each other. The trouble is, I don't know his address, so I can't write to him. Please advise me about this.—L. R.

Dear L.R.:

The most sensible thing for you to do I think, is to wait and see if this man won't make some effort to get in touch with you himself. If he really thinks as much of you as you seem to believe, he won't give up so easily. Moreover, since he has friends in your town, he might communicate with you through them.

If he's serious about you, you'll hear from him all right. But if you don't hear, don't go on kidding yourself that he really was serious.

Readers' Friday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

At last I have a reason to sit down and pass along a recipe which I believe one of your readers is asking about. . . would like to tell you how much I enjoy your column. . . I think too few of us say "thank you" for a job well done. . . I'm a working mother, pressed for time, but tonight's dishes are being neglected to get this bouquet off to you.

LEMON SQUARES

(Contributed by C. G.)

Filling—1 cup white sugar, 2 eggs slightly beaten, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 cup water, 1-4 cup butter or margarine, 2 lemons, rind and juice. Cook until thick, set aside to cool.

Topping—10 soda wafers, 1-2 cup butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon baking soda, 1 cup shredded cocoanut, etc.

Method—Cream biscuits finely. Mix with butter and sugar. Spread 3-4 mixture in greased shallow pan, covering with filling. Finish by spreading remainder of mixture on top. Bake in moderate oven 30 min.

ANSWER:

Thanks C. G. This is a splendid recipe and I am glad to have it for my own files. The bouquet sheds a lovely fragrance.

QUESTION:

. . . pleased to report wonderful success with both your Streamlined cake recipes. Now two questions: (1) in the streamlined Chocolate Cake recipe what difference would milk make to the recipe instead of water? Could sour milk be used as well? (2) One day you mentioned offering a recipe for meringues. I have a satisfactory recipe but experience three difficulties with it: (a) removing them from the pan. Should I put wrapping paper on the bottom? (b) At what temperature should they be cooked and for how long? (c) How do you get them uniform size? —Mrs. C. E. M.

ANSWER:

I have to reply to you in terms of my own recipe for meringues (see below). All of your questions on meringues are answered in the course of the recipe.

MERINGUES

Sift sugar and measure 1 1-2 cups. Place on a platter 7 egg whites which have been warmed to room temperature and add 1-8 teaspoon salt. Beat them with flat whisk or beater until they are very stiff. Add the sifted sugar very slowly, 1 teaspoon at a time, beating constantly. Continue to beat for 2 minutes after last sugar is added and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Fold in another 3-4 cup sugar with a folding motion. To keep them of uniform size shape through pastry bag or tube. Cover baking sheet with moist sheet heavy brown paper and shape meringues directly onto it. If you do not have pastry tube drop from teaspoon. Bake at 225 deg. Fahr. very slow oven, from 45 to 60 minutes, then turn off heat and permit meringues to dry in the oven with oven door partly open for 10 minutes. If meringues are to be filled with whipped cream or ice cream or frozen fruit mix them 2 inches in diameter and crush tops with ball of thumb while they are warm. If to be put together with filling, crush bottoms with thumb while warm, and when filling is cold and press bottoms together.

As for the Streamlined Chocolate stick strictly to the recipe—the research done on these cakes was very painstaking and no change may be made if you expect a perfect cake every time.

QUESTION:

I need your help again, . . . thanks for cake recipe and information about potted meats. Can you tell me the reason for watery custard pies? and also why my crust in same rises to top of filling? . . . thanking you.—Mary S.

ANSWER:

As usual I would like to give you my recipe for Custard Pie, then I know what ingredients are going into it and do not have to guess about what is going wrong.

CUSTARD PIE

Line pie pan with good pie pastry, building up fluted rim. Prick the crust at 2-inch intervals with tines of fork and bake for 10 minutes at 500 deg. Fahr. Pull oven rack out part way and carefully fill crust with

Filling—Beat slightly 2 large eggs or 4 yolks (yolks make pie creamier), then add and stir well, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 cups scalded milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. When poured in shell sprinkle top with about 1-4 teaspoon cinnamon. Reduce heat to 325 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes or until custard is firm to touch.

EXECUTION DELAYED

QUEBEC (CP)—Roger Lizotte, 33, whose appeal against a conviction of murder now is before the Supreme Court of Canada, has been granted a stay of execution until June 12. It was announced Wednesday. Lizotte was scheduled to be hanged June 13 for the beer-bottle slaying of Gerard Beaumont, a lumberjack, June 14, 1947.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"The kings brought presents for the new-born Jesus."

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER II

One angel spoke to the shepherds:

"Great news. A Saviour is born . . . Christ the Lord."

The shepherds could hardly believe their ears. Christ was born! This was the first Christmas Day. And the angels told the shepherds that the little Boy was in a stable not far away from them and their flocks of sheep, and that He was the Son of God.

This was great news. And the first to know it, outside of Mary and Joseph, were the shepherds, the poorest and gentlest of men. They were the first strangers to understand that the little Son of God was going to grow up and be a man and show people how to be kind and happy as God loves us all to be, before He'd go home to His Father in Heaven.

Joseph told the shepherds the name of the Baby. It was Jesus. The name Jesus means Saviour. Jesus who was Christ the Lord came to the world to save us all from our mistakes.

The shepherds wanted to see Jesus, so Joseph let them kneel down by the manger and look with wonder at the tiny Boy with hair like golden fire lying asleep in the oats and barley. And the shepherds thought:

"This is the most wonderful Baby ever born. With Jesus the Son of God as a Friend, no one need ever be afraid of anything again."

The shepherds laughed with joy and hugged Joseph before they went back under the starry sky to tend their sheep.

Another night, Joseph heard three knocks at the stable door. Three kings from far away wanted to see Jesus, because they too, knew that the little Boy was the Son of God. They had come a long distance on camels because they had seen a great star in the East and followed it. They were sure the star would lead them to where the Saviour of the world was born. And it did.

The kings brought presents for the new-born Jesus: sweet-smelling little boxes and a big bag of golden money — and laid them beside the manger. Those were the very first Christmas gifts in the world.

Then the three kings climbed up on their camels and rode away.

That same night the angel came again to Joseph in a dream. The angel said that the Boy Jesus was in danger. Joseph must take Jesus as far away as he could from another king who lived nearby. That king's name was Herod. Herod was not brave like the three good kings. Herod was a big coward. He was afraid of the Baby in the manger. When people are afraid they often do cruel things. When Herod heard that a Boy was born in the stable under a bright star, and that angels in the sky sang about His birth, he said:

"This little Boy is not like other boys. He might grow up and be king instead of me. I'd better send my soldiers after Him now."

But Herod was too late. The angel told Joseph just what to do. He must lead Mary and her little Son to a far-off land. It was a still dark night when the little family packed up to go. Mary, with Jesus in her arms, rode on the old gray donkey while Joseph, as always, walked alongside. Soon they left the sleeping town far behind in the night. When daylight came, all around the little family was dry land, with no grass, no trees, no water at all. The land was called a desert. For many days that you have fingers and toes the family went across the desert until at last they came to another country called Egypt.

Tomorrow: Jesus, Mary and Joseph return to Nazareth.

EARLY EVILS

All this was delivered with the politeness and smoothness which only Orientals seem to be able to master.

So I really can't say I was refused permission to visit the Canadian missionaries. The Chinese never say no. If they don't want to do a thing, they just keep putting it off until "later."

There is, however, no need to have experienced it personally to understand the misery of the persecution which missionaries have suffered in China. The stories of the thousands who have managed to get out are proof enough. So many men and women could not all be telling lies at the same time in the same way.

I wanted to find out from the Chinese themselves the reasons why they had expelled the missionaries. I'll give you for what they are worth, the answers I got.

First, the missionaries have made the mistake of being foreigners. In New China this is a capital sin. The Chinese under Mao-Tse-Tung are even more ferociously nationalistic than those under Chiang Kai-Shek. This hatred of foreigners is nothing new. It has always been present in one form or another during the 4,000 years of China's history.

Although Buddhism was imported from India almost 2,000 years ago, it is still considered something of a foreign religion. It is not so strange, therefore, that Christianity which is still so young in China has affected less than one per cent of the Chinese people.

Missionaries are white. And white is synonymous with exploiter. Businessmen and industrialists from America and Europe who set up shop in China did not make Christian civilization look its best. They are the white men who introduced opium and prostitution to China. Most of these western merchants cleared out of the country with Chiang Kai-Shek. The only ones who stayed behind were the missionaries and the injured.

Government Atheistic

As a final point, it must be that the Chinese government is a Marxist government and therefore officially atheistic. It is not surprising that the whole religion the same way the other People's Democracies do. The first victims, of course, are the missionaries but the Chinese clergy has its own troubles.

No matter what happens it looks as if the missionary era has been interrupted, at least for some time. This is as true for Protestants as it is for Catholics. The few hundred missionaries still left in China will be deported—next month, or next year. This fact is obvious if you talk about it with any of the Chinese authorities.

All this doesn't mean that Christianity is destined to disappear in China. But certainly its expansion is going to be delayed for a long time.

LONDON PAPERS

"This is a sad moment for those who believed in the empire. A sad moment and a shameful one."

The Express criticized the conference particularly for not wanting to seek extension of imperial preference in trade.

The Times said the communique was vague but conceded that its generalities might do "less than justice" to the real achievements of the conference.

The Communist Daily Worker's headline was: "Empire Premiers Say More Sacrifice."

What the Commonwealth plan will mean in specific policies was left in the broadest terms, because it depends on many imponderables such as Commonwealth - United States - European co-operation and because internal decisions of individual governments are involved.

Need Co-Operation

The plan cannot be fully implemented without co-operation of the U. S. and Western Europe. Their collaboration is "essential," the communique said.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain said that the timing and procedure for approaching the Republican administration of U. S. President - elect Eisenhower has not been decided. Previous reports said Prime Minister Churchill would visit Washington next spring.

The communique probably foreshadows:

1. A world economic conference next summer, aimed at normalizing Commonwealth policies with those of the U. S. and Western Europe.

2. An intensified development program within sterling - area countries, designed to save dollars and increase dollar earning.

3. Stricter domestic policies to curb inflation within some Commonwealth countries.

4. An effort to stabilize prices for primary commodities.

On the question of sterling convertibility, the communique said it depends on internal policies of Commonwealth countries, favorable world trading policies and "the availability of adequate financial support through the International monetary fund, or otherwise."

FOXBORO

Ladies Guild W. M. S. Holds Yuletide Service

FOXBORO — Foxboro Ladies' Guild W.M.S. held its final meeting of the year in the form of a Christmas service at the home of Mrs. Roy Bertrim. Owing to the inclement weather, only eight members were present. The president, Mrs. Watt, presided, and opened the meeting with the reading, "There's a Song in the Air."

Mrs. Bertrim read a piece about "Bethlehem" and the Nativity story was read from Luke 2 by Mrs. Bartlett, while Miss Bell read the story of the messenger seeking some one to whom he might tell the good news of the Saviour's birth.

Mrs. Johnston read the story of the Wise Men who brought the gifts to the baby Jesus, and mentioned that each one, today, could bring his and her gifts and honor Him as King of Kings and Lord of lords.

Reports dealing with the year's work, were most encouraging.

Readings were given by Mrs. MacPhee, "Twas Still Always be a Christmas"; by Mrs. Ketcheson, "No Room"; and a lovely duet, by Mrs. Barrie and Mrs. Johnston, entitled "Christmas Angels." Several beloved Christmas hymns were used during the service in keeping with Christmas.

A letter, from the Glad Tidings telling of "Christmas in India," was given by Miss Bell, after which his Christmas contest was held with Mrs. Barrie as winner.

Words of appreciation were voiced for cards and baskets of fruit sent to sick members and friends.

The meeting closed with the singing of "Silent Night, Holy Night."

The remainder of the evening was spend around a social cup of coffee, and watching television.

Appreciative thanks were tendered Mrs. Bartlett for her hospitality and for a well-spent evening.

CROFTON

CROFTON — Mr. and Mrs. William Dempsey and Terry of Rosemore, were Sunday tea and evening guests of Mrs. S. J. Munro.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Crook were Saturday dinner guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Crook.

FEDERAL BAN

Lifting of the steel controls was announced in the Commons by John Dickey, parliamentary assistant to Production Minister Howe, as he reviewed Canada's arms production program.

He noted that the world scarcity in essential materials — one of the major problems in the Western world's arms build-up against Communism — was virtually over.

There now were more plentiful supplies of sulphur, chemicals, nickel, aluminum, copper, zinc, tin and newsprint. Controls on many of these items had been lifted.

As for steel, Mr. Dickey said: "Last month a new steel finishing mill came into production at Sault Ste. Marie, which will give us an additional 250,000 tons of rolled steel products annually.

"In addition, new facilities came into production this week at Hamilton, and will add 650,000 tons of steel ingots a year to current production.

"However, in spite of this increase in Canadian production, the demand for steel is growing steadily so that we expect to maintain our level of imports from the U. S., the United Kingdom and other countries."

Canada's steel production before Korea was about 3,000,000 ingot tons a year. Another 1,000,000 tons —especially of types not produced in Canada—were obtained annually from the U.S.

Canada's production currently is about 3,200,000 tons a year and still climbing.

CCF-SC FEUD

The throne speech debate also unexpectedly produced an important CCF armament announcement. John Dickey, parliamentary assistant to Defence Production Minister Howe, announced that effective Dec. 31 the government will lift control on steel for non essential construction.

Conservative member for Peel and party foreign affairs spokesman, said Russia is using the United Nations for propaganda purposes and to make trouble among the Western allies. But he believed the UN might yet become the foundation for a lasting peace and should be supported.

He also said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization should have priority attention and Canada and Britain should have a part in an over - all Pacific defence pact.

One Liberal, James A. Byrne from Kootenay East constituency, got in on the fringes of the CCF-Social Credit scrap. He said Social Creditors were hiding their political ambitions under a cloak of religion and he was not going to be converted by "a politician in the guise of a prophet."

Mr. Coldwell's submission was in reply to charges made by Mr. Low in the House several days ago. The CCF leader said the Social Credit founder, Maj. Douglas, was well-known for his anti-Semitism. And in 1945 Mr. Low criticized people who promoted the idea of world federation and singled out "only Jewish persons for condemnation." In 1938 Mr. Low had accused Wall street bankers of financing communism's rise to power in Russia and had named virtually only people of the Jewish race.

He also said that Social Credit members of the Alberta legislature had advocated the end of the secret ballot, condemned majority rule and organization of political parties.

Mr. Low, replying, said Mr. Coldwell shoved himself to be "in addition to a master of the smear technique out on the hustings, a master of evasion in the House."

Mr. Coldwell objected and the deputy speaker, Rene Beaudoin, termed Mr. Low's remark about "master of evasion" unparliamentary.

Mr. Low said he didn't wish to overstep the rules, but wanted to make his language as strong as he could in "condemning a practice which I think certainly has no place in our Canadian life."

Mr. Low said Mr. Coldwell's accusations didn't make sense because the facts were that on not more than one or two occasions had Social Creditors mentioned Jews and never to hold them up to ridicule as a race.

Various CCF members had made anti - war, pro - revolution and other statements. For instance in 1942, Harold Winch, CCF leader in B. C., had said he would use force to implement CCF policies if his party came to power.

Could such statements be charged against the whole CCF movement? Mr. Low asked.

Mr. Coldwell interjected twice to say that his party didn't embrace proposed tax cuts for business and the views of CCF adherents who

No Forest Fire in your Home this Christmas
When you bring Christmas trees into your home to gladden hearts at the holiday season—take all normal precautions. As a tree dries out it becomes highly inflammable and constitutes a very real fire hazard. So never use candles for decorations. Keep lamps or open flames well away from your tree; don't even strike a match too close to it. If the tree is set in a bucket of water, and kept watered, it will hold its needles longer, remain green longer, and be slightly less of a fire hazard. And above all—warn the children.

Sunday School Lesson:

The Conquest of Fear

By ROY L. SMITH

Psychologists, sociologists, physicians and clergymen alike all agree that man is confronted by no greater terror and no more serious enemy than fear. Each offers his "cure" of the malady, but when they are stripped of their differences in vocabulary they all mean about the same thing — Faith.

The problem of life, however, is very simple. In what are we to have faith? It is at this point that good religion offers a very positive answer. We still find our life stripped of its fears if we will put our faith in the kind of God Jesus taught men to Trust.

The Lesson Story

After a period of extreme activity which had resulted in complete exhaustion, Jesus managed to excuse Himself and escape to some quiet place, where He proposed to renew His soul by praying. In the meantime His disciples crossed over the lake in a boat, and were caught in'a storm. At the moment when they were in the grip of terror a shadowy form appeared, walking on the surface of the water, approaching them. When it came nearer they discerned it was Jesus Himself. With that, one of the disciples attempted to walk out on the water toward Him, and sank and would have drowned except for the Master's kindly hand extended. Thereupon He upraided them all for their fears, and proceeded to instruct them that men who believe in God need have no fear.

The Lesson of the Story

Skeptics, and rationalists, have attempted to explain the story away, saying that it was a bit of imagination, an illusion, or a myth which grew up about the miraculous personality of Jesus. But none of this need give us any particular concern. Men do not invent myths and drape them about ordinary men. There must have been something amazing about the Master to have made such a myth appropriate. The greatest miracle related to Jesus was not something He did, but what He actually was.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for December 14: "Jesus Dispels Fear," Matthew 14.

But all of the above is pure speculation. The scripture story is perfectly plain, perfectly honest, and perfectly understandable. Faith, such as Jesus had, will dispel any fear. That is the profound inner meaning of the story.

The Faith of Jesus

The faith of Jesus was organized about three centres: (1) His faith in God; (2) His faith in life, and (3) His faith in man of whom He was one, Himself.

He believed in a God who was a Heavenly Father, intent on working life out to the very best possible advantage for every individual.

He believed that life could be made to work for any man, and He believed He had the secret for making it work. That is the reason He said, "I am the way."

He believed in man, as one made in the Divine Image — infinitely valuable, wholly sacred, and altogether worth the divine love of such a heavenly Father.

Let any man rest his back upon three such basic propositions as that, and I e will soon disprove that his fears are dissolving into confidence.

After He Had Prayed

It is worth noticing that this strange happening took place following a period in which Jesus had been off by Himself praying. certainly if Jesus of Nazareth found it helpful to pray, then ordinary men can well seek help in the same way. It is quite evident that some strange confidence had taken possession of Him during that solemn experience Perhaps all of us would find our fears losing their venom if we spent more time in prayer.

Wonder Horse Tells Reporters Liberals Will Win

TORONTO (CP)—Dorothy Howarth, reporter for the Telegram, interviewed Lady Wonder, the talking horse at Richmond, Va., whose predictions have become famous.

Among the information Miss Howarth gleaned from an interview with the prophetic mare, told Wednesday in a copyright front-page story:

"Ambrose Small was murdered. Mabel Crumback is in Maine. Mickey McDonald is dead, Canada will have an election next year. The Liberals will win it. Edwin Alonzo Boyd will not try another jail break. The Korean war will end in 13 months and I'll be married in a year's time."

Ambrose Small was a Toronto theatre owner whose disappearance in 1919 has never been solved. Mabel Crumbeck's disappearance about two years ago from her Toronto home also is a mystery. Mickey McDonald, long viewed as Canada's No. 1 criminal, escaped from Kingston Penitentiary Aug. 14, 1947. Boyd escaped from Toronto's Don Jail a couple of times in recent years; he's now in Kingston serving a life term for bank robbery. The Korean war has been under way since June, 1950. The Liberals have been in power in Ottawa since 1935.

Nothing is known publicly about Miss Howarth's matrimonial prospects.

Railways Put Wage Hike Into Effect on Dec. 1

MONTREAL (CP)—The railways announce they are putting into effect as of Dec. 1 the 16-cent-an-hour pay increase recommended for 144,000 non-operating railway employees by the majority report of a federal conciliation board.

"Appropriate action" will be taken for employees not covered by union agreements.

The Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways said Thursday they gave notice to that effect to leaders of the 17 railway brotherhoods with whom they are seeking to negotiate settlement of a wage dispute hanging fire for five months.

The unions, seeking a 45-cent-an-hour raise, rejected the majority report of the conciliation board, though they indicated they favored a minority report recommending a pay boost of an average of 26 cents.

ASTHMA DEATH CAUSE

SARNIA (CP) — A Lambton county coroner's jury Thursday night ruled the death of 19-year-old Dianne Rose Daymond Nov. 8 was caused by bronchial asthma.

Dr. W. W. Holland, St. Joseph's Hospital staff pathologist, testified he had performed an autopsy on the child and concluded death was due to "anaphylactic shock following penicillin injection." The injection was administered for the relief of a throat infection.

QUEEN MARY — Queen Mary has lived to see the close of five reigns and her grand-daughter Queen Elizabeth II ascend the throne of Britain. Now 86 it has been announced she will not attend the length coronation service next June 2 but probably will watch it on television. Born May 26, 1867, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck she outlived her husband, King George V., to become one of the Commonwealth's three living queens. (CP Photo).

QUEEN MOTHER — The Queen Mother, from the moment she assumed the throne May 12, 1937, as the consort of King George VI., has shown a sure touch in an exacting position. Largely through her influence the Royal Family served all Britain as a model of happy domesticity. Her gentle smile and the graceful wave of her hand have become known throughout the world as outward expressions of a personality that helped to put the British Crown and people in closer touch than ever before. She endeared herself to Canada during the Royal Tour of 1939. (C.P. Photo.)

Stately Young Queen Elizabeth Remembers Happy Childhood

As Queen Elizabeth II prepares for the ordeal of the Coronation, she probably thinks wistfully of the time when few dreamed she would one day be sovereign. This story, one of a series, is about her happy childhood.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—"In the days of my childhood," young Elizabeth once said, "the sun seemed always to be shining."

Now, as she prepares for next summer's Coronation, the Queen must often think nostalgically of an upbringing modelled on her mother's ruling:

"We want Elizabeth and (her sister) Margaret to have a happy childhood, which they can always look back on."

The wish was fulfilled. Elizabeth Alexandra Mary Windsor, born April 21, 1926, in the Bruton street home of her maternal grandparents, the Earl and Countess of Strathmore, was reared in an intimate family atmosphere, in a household where doors were never slammed in anger.

Throne far Distant

Though she was christened with the names of three queens—her mother, grandmother and great-grandmother—the throne seemed far away.

It was as the child of a country gentleman, rather than as a possible future monarch, that the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York lived at Bruton street, at the Royal Lodge in Windsor, at 145 Piccadilly near Hyde Park, and finally at Windsor Castle during the Second World War.

Some of her happiest moments were spent in the tall house on Piccadilly, with its top-floor nursery and the room with her "stable" of three dozen toy horses. There she and Margaret played and took lessons from Marion Crawford, a young woman from Edinburgh University who was their governess and companion for 17 years.

It was there she developed a passion for comic strips, numbering among early favorites "Li'l Abner" and "Mutt and Jeff." Once a policeman guarding a royal train heard a peremptory tap at a window behind him. It was Lilibet, as Elizabeth was called then, holding out a shilling for comics from a nearby newsstand.

Weekly Allowance

In many ways her childhood was like any other "youngster's. Her pocket money was a shilling a week. Though as a princess she had a large income, her private bank account was small. She thought it excitingly large. Her gifts at birthdays and Christmas were simple. When in doubt, donors were always safe in sending another horse for the top-floor stable.

Elizabeth loved horses and became a good rider. She frequently visited race courses. Once at a circus she surprised experts by her knowledge of breeds.

"If I am ever Queen," she said, "I shall make a law that there must be no racing on Sundays. Horses should have a rest, too. And I shan't let anyone dock their pony's tail!"

Another favorite toy was the Little House (Y Bwthyn Bach), a present from the people of Wales. It was furnished in every detail from plumbing to a miniature package of headache powders. Elizabeth spent hours in it and, with characteristic care, always left it spick and span.

During the war, at Windsor Castle, she showed a flair for dramatics. She and Margaret organized annual Christmas pantomimes of near-professional calibre, spiced with sly jokes about royalty. One such production was called "Old Mother Red Riding Boots."

Grandma Was Stern

Queen Mary had a powerful influence on the children. When the King and Queen were on the royal tour of Canada in 1939, she took the sisters on a series of public visits. Once, earlier, Queen Mary had put Elizabeth smartly in her place. When the Princess clamored to leave an event because people outside were "waiting to see me," Queen Mary hustled her out a back door with an attendant and sent her home by taxi.

In all, Elizabeth was a princess in the modern manner. Her early training and education were influenced by a 20th century concept that members of the Royal Family should enjoy some freedom and informality. Her studies covered a wide range, but as Louis Wulff wrote in "Queen of Tomorrow," she was "never forced precociously in a hothouse of royal learning, nor circumscribed in her studies and entertainment when she grew older."

Her favorite subjects were history, literature and languages. She disliked arithmetic and algebra. She never took a formal examination, although if the war had not intervened she might have been the first British princess to go into residence at a University.

PICTON

Calvin Hughes Host to 200 At Warden's Banquet

PICTON — County Warden Calvin Hughes was host to 200 friends at the annual Warden's banquet, Wednesday night. Ladies were included and all enjoyed a turkey dinner served at the Anglican Parish House.

Sheriff H. J. Colliver was toastmaster. Sydney Cullum of Kingston gave several groups of outstanding vocal solos. Mrs. Hughes was presented with roses.

Welcoming the guests, Warden Hughes expressed appreciation of the co-operation he had received from council members.

Many tributes to Warden Hughes were paid by speakers, his able handling of these duties, the impartial manner in which he presided and the dignity he has shown being mentioned.

Toast To Province

Toast to the province was proposed by Judge W. S. Lane, with response by Norris Whitney, MPP.

Mayor J. H. McFarland's toast to the local municipalities was responded to by the reeves and deputy reeves George Tustin, M.P., and Warden Lee Grills of Hastings County also spoke. Toast to the County of Prince Edward, proposed by J. Arnaud, was replied to by Crown Attorney G. T. Walmsley, Q.C.

Mr. Walmsley said the Hughes family had been represented on County Council for three generations. The present warden's father, James L. Hughes, is a former warden, while a fourth generation had served as township councillor.

Judge Lane said that the Province of Ontario must find a way to solve the labor unrest and disputes which are "progressing on a path which may lead to disaster." For, he said, every time that wages go upward, so does the cost of living.

100th Anniversary

Mr. Arnaud said that 1952 marks the 150th anniversary of the establishment of Prince Edward County by proclamation by Governor Simcoe.

County councils were set up in the Province of Upper Canada in 1842. First warden here was John P. Roblin. Warden Hughes is the 101st warden to occupy that position.

G. T. Walmsley said the county's income now approaches 20 million dollars annually; there is an existing county debt of less than $2 per person, compared to over $1,000 per person with the national debt.

Mayor McFarland deplored criticism of municipal council members. Much of it, he felt, is due to petty jealousy.

Mr. Tustin spoke of Canada's abundance of wheat, the great problem being the means of distributing it to starving millions, which he felt would be a step toward world peace.

Canadian Engineers Dropped From Air, Build Bridge In Isolated Area of the Yukon

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ALASKA HIGHWAY (CP)—A dozen snow-bound Canada's outlying areas yesterday with a building bridge in an isolated corner of the Yukon wilderness using only natural resources for material.

Lieut.-Colonel Webb of Ottawa, said, says the bridge when completed could carry up to 15 tons. Lieut. Webb said more than 50 per cent. 1 strong troops of the Royal Canadian Engineers were given that assignment for exercise Snowtest Reindeer in the Kluo Lake area 1,500 miles northwest of Edmonton.

The bridge is part of a 50-mile access road to an ice airstrip being constructed on Kluo Lake by other members of the same troop for exercise designed to test the engineering unit.

Dropped by Parachute

The men were dropped by parachute on the Lake more days ago. They set up a tent camp near Mile 1834 of the Alaska Highway, several hundred miles from the nearest creek, and set to work spanning the brook.

Men like Spr. R. L. Cullerier of Kapuskasing, Ont., and Cpl. Arnold Kraus of Rock Mills, lived in five-man arctic tents, ate rations from a parachute-dropped box that contained everything from cigarets and chocolate bars to bacon, beans, tack lumber and raisins, and explored it.

"It's a healthy life," Spr. Cullerier said. "There's plenty of fresh air and lots of exercise."

The tents, heated by small, gasburning camp stoves, were warm enough for comfort. Mail addressed to Nations were dropped by parachute and each man was due to turn at cooking for his tent mates.

Men Never Shave

Neither officers nor men bothered to shave. They said they'd be bearded helped keep them warm in the zero-to-30-below temperatures. Water for drinking and cooking was obtained through a hole in the ice on Jarvis creek.

Every man had his job. Spr. R. Sayers of St. Catharines, Ont., helped chop logs in surrounding woods. Spr. J. R. Heal of Winnipeg dragged them to the bridge site by tractor. Among spike drivers after the logs had been set in place was Spr. D. Beeton of St. Catharines.

Others, men like Spr. C. P. Mallard of St. John's, Nfld., operated air jacks and hammers to remove ice so support beams could be set solidly on the bottom of the stream.

Spr. J. F. Hughes of Dartmouth, N.S., who kept the air-compressor throbbing all running, said: "It'll up here, but after awhile, it gets boring. Most of the men will be glad to return to camp."

Highsy said back home if the temperature was below zero "you'll be afraid to go outside the house." But here in the Yukon, it "wasn't bad at all."

Canadian Hay Can be Shipped To U.S. Points

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has opened its borders to importation of Canadian hay intended to help supply livestock farmers in drought-affected area of the north and southwest.

The U.S. has not permitted hay or straw to be imported since the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in Western Canada last February. The disease is not known to exist in these materials.

Canadian hay which may be imported must come from areas east of the 98th meridian, west longitude. The 98th meridian cuts north through central Michigan and northern Ontario.

Formal opening of the border to the hay probably will be on Saturday.

Senator Proposes Session to Hear MacArthur Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Lester Hunt (Dem.-Wyo.) proposed today an immediate joint session of the Senate armed services committee to look into Gen. MacArthur's views on ending the Korean war.

President Truman, with some barbed remarks about both MacArthur and Republicans, held the floor. Hunt's suggestion that the call be issued from the White House to discuss Korea.

Truman said, among other things, he doubts MacArthur has hit upon any new way to peace, and that he still thinks Eisenhower's campaign announcement that he would go to Korea "was some wag demagoguery.

Drew Republican Cries

Truman's words drew some Republican cries of "arrogant" and "disorderly" on Capitol Hill. Hunt, taking no part in that row, told a reporter:

"I would like to see Senator Richard Russell (Dem. Ga.) call either or both generals to Capitol Hill to brief the armed services committee."

Russell, the committee chairman who presided over the first investigation of the president's firing of MacArthur as field commander in Korea and the Far East, is out of the city.

The committee member of Russell's committee, said he thought Congress should be "consulted and informed" at once if there is any new plan to end the war.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Republican Mass., said he doubts the plan if Senator Russell sees fit to call a meeting of the committee."

Thomas Stennis (Dem.-Miss.) declined to comment specifically on Truman's and Republicans about MacArthur and Eisenhower, but he said he disapproves of "any time" that differences have been handled.

Eisenhower, now en route back from Korea, has disclosed he intends to meet MacArthur, in Tokyo, to discuss what qualities behind the latter's declaration that the war can be confended there is a clear and definite solution to the Korean conflict" without carrying the fight and held their Christmas meeting.

MUST STOP ACCIDENTS

LUCAN (CP)—Traffic accidents are "draining the life blood" of Ontario and must be stopped, Attorney-General and Highways minister, said Thursday night at the annual Middlesex warden's banquet here. Harold Corbett, reeve of Lucan and retiring chief magistrate of Middlesex, was host.

Witnesses Outline Beliefs Before Nine-Member Court

OTTAWA (CP)—Jehovah's Witnesses, appealing to the Supreme Court of Canada for a declaration that they form a religious denomination, outlined their beliefs to the nine-member court.

The outline was given Wednesday by W. Glen How of Toronto, counsel for the Witnesses, during a hearing on the validity of a Quebec City by-law prohibiting distribution of pamphlets without a permit from the chief of police.

Mr. How said the beliefs of the Witnesses are based on the Bible. They believed in a supreme being but they differed from other religions in that they look forward to the establishment of God's kingdom on earth rather than in Heaven.

Mr. Justice Ivan Rand asked if the Witnesses observe Sunday as a day of rest. Mr. How said they do not, taking no part in that row, told a reporter:

"I would like to see Senator Richard Russell (Dem. Ga.) call either or both generals to Capitol Hill to brief the armed services committee."

Russell, the committee chairman who presided over the first investigation of the president's firing of MacArthur as field commander in Korea and the Far East, is out of the city.

The committee member of Russell's committee, said he thought Congress should be "consulted and informed" at once if there is any new plan to end the war.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Republican Mass., said he doubts the plan if Senator Russell sees fit to call a meeting of the committee."

Ontario Ready To Start Project Says Saunders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The province of Ontario is ready to start work on the St. Lawrence River power project as soon as the American partner is designated, a Canadian official says.

Robert H. Saunders, chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, testified Thursday at a federal power commission hearing on the New York state application for a 50-year federal license to join Ontario in the venture.

The hearing resumes today.

Saunders told Examiner Glen H. Law that his commission is ready to start work as soon as the American partner is picked.

"We are only ready and willing to get started," Saunders said, "but we are extremely anxious to do so. If New York should get a licence today we'd be ready to start tomorrow."

Saunders said his commission had spent about $25,000 and produced 86.3 per cent of all power produced in Ontario.

He said, however, that a power shortage is in prospect. "Along about 1957 we'll be in trouble with the St. Lawrence project is not built."

Saunders estimated that actual power production would follow that start of construction by five years. It is estimated that eight years would be required to complete the hydro-electric development on the International Rapids section of the river.

Saunders said that if the New York application is not granted, Ontario hydro would have no alternative but to curtail its use of power and would also need to build more expensive steam generated plants "increasing demands."

He said it costs 7.5 mills to produce and allowat hour of steam generated energy compared to three mills for hydro energy.

"Failure to construct the project," Saunders said, "would very adversely affect many highly essential manufacturing plants in the area served by the grid of the Ontario hydro commission."

Hydro-Q. D. Fraser, canadian minister in Washington, joined Saunders in the plea for quick action.

Fraser said that nearly half of Canada's current defence production comes from the area served by Ontario hydro.

He said United States formed a "very considered" number of orders in the area, for aircraft, automobiles, engines and turbine blades and aircraft parts.

Also from the area, Fraser said, comes all the nickel mined and treated in Canada—from which the United States obtains 70 per cent of its supply.

The project, which would cost an estimated $530,000,000, would produce approximately 12,000,000, horsepower, enough for a year. The power would be shared equally between the two countries, Saunders states.

New York's share of the cost is estimated at $295,500,000. Ontario hydro would pay the balance.

Red Delegation Told to Stick To the Point

OTTAWA (CP)—Communists and left-wingers appearing before a Senate committee were told to cut out political speeches and to stick to the point.

They appeared Thursday before the Senate banking and commerces committee to present objections to proposed changes in the Criminal Code.

The group included Tim Buck, national leader of the Labor-Progressive (Communist) party; Ed Carcia, Quebec LPP leader; William Kashan, LPP labor secretary; and Stanley Knowles, of Windsor, Ont., co-h a i r m a n of the League for Social Reconstruction which Justice Minister Garson has described as Communist-inspired.

Interrogation by members of the committee was frequent when Mr. Buck said the powers of civilian authorities in the code for treason was written at the United States' request and that freedom was being tampered with.

Should Confine Remarks

After Mr. Rodd said the language of the code should be kept to "repression similar to that in the U.S.," it was told by Senator J. W. de B. Farris, acting chairman, to stop attacking the U. S. and confine his remarks to Canada.

Mr. Buck was told by Senator John T. Haig, Senate opposition leader, that he insulted the government by his remarks.

Mr. Buck claimed that Canadian democracy was being "undermined in a manner to facilitate suppression of criticism." He charged repeatedly that U.S. were being written by the law officers of the crown, "in other words, they were produced by the cabinet."

Mr. Buck read a section which bans advocating the forcible overthrow of the government could be used to suppress anything "agitation "against the presence of foreign troops in Canada or use of Canadian troops contrary to government direction like the Korje incident."

Senator Arthur. Roebuck (L.—Ontario) said the section doesn't interfere with common law rights such as the right of free speech.

Picketing to Cease at Textile Plant at Louiseville, Que.

After Reading of Riot Act

By STEWART NEESS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LOUISEVILLE, Que. (CP)—Any fears that violence would flare up again in Louiseville's nine - month textile strike appeared ended today with announcement that picketing would cease.

The announcement came in the early morning from Rene Gosselin, secretary of the provincial executive of the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor. It was said the action was in accordance with provisions of the Riot Act, read to strikers yesterday.

Mr. Gosselin said no pickets will be stationed at any entrances of the plant of Associated Textiles of Canada, where the first of two groups of strikers with provincial police occurred.

Special Meeting

Mr. Gosselin also confirmed reports that a special meeting of the CCCL executive and the local textile syndicate will be held in Montreal Saturday.

In attendance will be Gerard Picard, Conservative MP (Bellechasse), and Jean Marchand of Quebec City, who previously had marched and arrived in Louiseville early today.

Provisions of the Riot Act authorize a curfew were still in effect and provincial police continued to patrol streets after dark became practically deserted Thursday night.

There was no statement from Associated Textiles. The first clash, which resulted in a ball, where provoked a burst of tear gas from provincial police and reading of the Riot Act.

Many Injured

The second clash followed later at the company's mill, where more than a dozen strikers or sympathizers were injured. Five were taken to Hospital, one suffering from a bullet wound in the jaw and lower neck. The others suffered largely from blows about the head and body from police sticks. Between 20 and 30 men were arrested and taken to Montreal to face charges of violating the Riot Act by assembling at the union hall.

Thursday night's 9 p. m. curfew passed quietly. It was clear that scarcely any pedestrians could be seen on the streets. Louiseville, 60 miles northeast of Montreal, has a population of 3,500.

Statements Given

The strike violence brought statements from Premier Maurice Duplessis and Magr. Donat Barli, Louiseville parish priest.

In the legislature Thursday, Mr. Duplessis hinted at "bolshevism" in the strike and declared he would see that order is maintained.

Magr. Barlin, in a short direct reference to the violence, said "a grave injustice" is being committed in Louiseville and that there is no solution except for the government, "to take the situation in hand."

He said if no law now exists, there should be one to permit intervention in long and unsuccessful disputes "where public interest is involved."

About 600 employees walked out when the strike was called last month following a dispute over wages and working conditions. A company spokesman said that when the plant was reopened July 21 only 111 persons reported for work. The number had been increased to 506.

Farm Workers Insurance Plan Being Studied

OTTAWA (CP)—The labor department will study the question of extending unemployment insurance coverage to some groups of farm workers, the national advisory council on insurance was told.

Gordon Cushman, deputy minister of labor and co-chairman of the council, gave the assurance Thursday as the 15-member body—which advises the government on manpower problems—ended a two-day session.

Mr. MacNamara spoke in reply to a suggestion from R. A. Stewart, director of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, that some farm employees doing specialized work—such as mechanics—might be insurable. Because of the seasonal nature of farm work and other complications, this occupation is not covered by unemployment insurance.

Mr. Stewart said it would be impossible to provide Commonwealth units with the stores they men want to buy. For the fans: Ice skates, hockey sticks for such items as anchovies, stuffed olives and lipsalve.

But NAAFI also runs a fleet of canteen trucks which take hot tea, sandwiches and cakes from unit-shelfire, to troops in forward areas. The NAAFI has also become, as one officer put it, "go up as far as they are allowed and a bit further."

So highly organized is the service that even the lonely soldier in a battlefront even get periodic visits from mobile NAAFI shops. A typical man can sign an order form and have delivered to his family at home in the U.K. such articles from Japanese dolls to fresh-cut flowers.

In Seoul, the U.S. post exchange store provides an excellent service for the soldier-shopper. There is a constant stream of U.S. troops from the front lines passing through the Seoul NAAFI every day.

For the Canadian soldier in Korea, NAAFI supplies whisky and cigarets from Canada so that Canadians can enjoy some of their favorite brands.

Dollars earned from sales to the Americans and Canadians are credited to the British treasury in London and are, in effect, a gift in exchange. All profits are used for servicemen's welfare and service charities.—

VALLEYVIEW, Alta. (CP)—Farmer Henry Cavilian didn't lose any money when he left his oats standing uncut this fall. An oil-hunting party, who were unable to move motor vehicles over the muskeg, brought 60 horses into the area and gave Cavilian a contract to winterfeed them in his oats field.

NAAFI Organization Doing Booming Business in Korea

By CORLEY SMITH

SEOUL (Reuters)—The British NAAFI organization, equivalent to the Canadian Ory canteen system, is doing a booming business in Korea with four static and mobile roadside stores, designed to look like American-style drug stores.

At the NAAFI roadside stores, troops of all the UN fighting forces can buy tax-free cigarets and tobacco—at between a third and a quarter of the prices in Britain as well as candy, chocolate, toothpaste and a score of other items.

With a long tradition of servicing Commonwealth forces behind the NAAFI brings the solid comforts of a good general store and inn to British forces whether they be in the heart of London or the Korean front line.

Its full name—seldom used—is the Navy, Army and Air Forces Institutes.

Here in Korea, the NAAFI's biggest job is to provide Commonwealth units with the stores they men want to buy. For the fans: Ice skates, hockey sticks for such items as anchovies, stuffed olives and lipsalve.

But NAAFI also runs a fleet of canteen trucks which take hot tea, sandwiches and cakes from unit-shelfire, to troops in forward areas. The NAAFI has also become, as one officer put it, "go up as far as they are allowed and a bit further."

So highly organized is the service that even the lonely soldier in a battlefront even get periodic visits from mobile NAAFI shops. A typical man can sign an order form and have delivered to his family at home in the U.K. such articles from Japanese dolls to fresh-cut flowers.

In Seoul, the U.S. post exchange store provides an excellent service for the soldier-shopper. There is a constant stream of U.S. troops from the front lines passing through the Seoul NAAFI every day.

For the Canadian soldier in Korea, NAAFI supplies whisky and cigarets from Canada so that Canadians can enjoy some of their favorite brands.

Dollars earned from sales to the Americans and Canadians are credited to the British treasury in London and are, in effect, a gift in exchange. All profits are used for servicemen's welfare and service charities.—

New A-Subs Will be Stealthy And Deadly Ships

WASHINGTON (AP)—The new atomic submarines will be the most stealthy and deadly ships of the United States Navy.

Rear-Admiral Homer N. Wallin, chief of the navy's bureau of ships, said in an article written for the Navy Department that this is say of the commander of the USS Nautilus, one of two nuclear-powered subs now being built:

"He will be able to cruise so deep and silently that an enemy will have great difficulty locating him, and with great difficulty damaging him. There will be no whistling of propellers, exhaust bubbles, no surface wakes to disclose his whereabouts. Even the sonic detection by utterly still for long periods of time longer, certain, that any moving surface ships are likely to cruise around exposing themselves to detection that acoustic (sound-tracking) torpedoes"

The navy is working on devices to enable the crew to stay underwater for days and weeks.

He also reported the Nautilus will have three power systems: her engines, and Mrs. Charity Tozier, is within 100 yards of the river.

Brantford firemen dragged the river for the body.

Drowned in River

BRANTFORD. (CP) — Susan Torion, 3, was drowned today while making mud pies.

She slipped into a deep spot in the Grand River while at play with her brother, Stephen, 5.

The home of the children's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charity Tozier, is within 100 yards of the river.

The admiral called the craft "the deadliest submarine of all time."

Canada World's Third Largest Trading Power

OTTAWA (CP)—Expanding exports may enable Canada this year to the world's third largest trading power, government trade experts say.

Biggest power is the United States, with Britain second. Canada and France have tussled for the third spot for a number of years.

Canada, with just about one-third of the British population of 43,000,000, held third place for most of the post-war period until France recovered its pre-wartime productive and recaptured it in 1951.

This year, however, the French grain crop was slim while Canada's soared to the biggest in history. Canada also has boosted sales of newsprint, metals and flour and other goods.

The possibility that Canada may overtake France was raised Thursday in the first issue of statistics of exports review of foreign trade for the first half of 1952. The report showed these developments:

1. Canada's exports for the half-year climbed to a peak $2,114,000,000 from $1,762,000,000 in 1951. The boost was mainly in increased shipments to Commonwealth and Latin-American countries. Imports dropped to $1,930,000,000 from the record $2,102,000,000 in 1951.

2. World prices, inflated in 1951 because of Korea, dropped steadily in 1952, with prices for Canada's imports falling more rapidly than those for exports. Sharpest declines were for livestock, which Canada normally exports, and jute, wool, natural rubber and tin, which Canada imports.

3. On imports, the U.S. supplied 74.9 per cent of Canada's needs, up from 70 per cent in the previous year, while Britain's share of imports dropped to 8.3 per cent from 16%.

Six Centres Show Index Decline In Living Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Living costs as reflected by the bureau of statistics cost of living index declined during October in six financial centres and advanced in three others, the bureau reported today.

The indexes, based on August, 1939 prices equalling 100, dropped at Edmonton, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Saint John. The index for St. John's, based on June 1951 prices equalling 100, also declined. Rises were recorded in Halifax, Saskatoon and Vancouver.

Mixed changes in food prices were recorded in all centres. Highest prices for eggs and butter and lower prices for beef and lamb were general. Cooking indexes moved down in eight cities due mainly to lower prices for men's overcoats and women's footwear. Fuel and light indexes were unchanged in eight cities while coal increases were higher in Montreal and Saint John.

The indexes by cities at Nov. 1, with Oct. 1 figures in brackets, were: Halifax 187.8 (187.3), Edmonton 176.7 (177.0), Saskatoon 182.1 (181.5), Winnipeg 177.8 (177.5), Toronto 181.1 (181.8), Montreal 186.8 (188.8), Saint John 181.4 (181.4), Fredericton 174.7 (174.7), St. John's 102.5 (103.0).

The indexes indicate only price movements in each city and are not an indication whether it costs more to live one city than another.

NEW CONDUCTOR

CHICAGO (AP) — Fritz Reiner of the New York Metropolitan Opera Company Tuesday was named musical director and conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Reiner, who will succeed Rafael Kubelik, 38, will take over his new post with the opening of the 1953-54 season. Kubelik resigned, effective at the end of that season.

ONLY NEXT TO WAR IS THE ISSUE
Shall We Support Weak Municipalities
— OR —
Strong Municipalities
Representative Govt.

To what extent are the Federal and Provincial Govt's. obligated to Municipalities and in what manner can those obligations be best met?

The recent appeal of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities as published in your local paper Dec. 6 has one redeeming feature, namely, that included in the requests made is the appeal "for a standing committee of Federal Provincial and Municipal authorities to review the functions and responsibilities of the three forms of Government."

The man on the street is not fully informed of the issues involved and feels disinterested or provoked because of his ignorance or because he feels he has no way of expressing what he thinks or wishes.

The last Municipal elections here and elsewhere showed clearly the repugnance with which voter group will vote for the "immediate friends and relatives of the candidates voted.

Apparently the elected representatives are either themselves ignorant of the magnitude and importance of the issues facing Municipalities today or disinterested or fail to see the importance and value of the public support, the knowledge and confidence of the Council on these important issues and of obtaining the best advice and information for the Mayor in his appeal to Ottawa. (I assume our Mr. Mayor was party to the appeal).

An advertised full public debate or discussion of this one issue with sides on the issue being taken by opposing candidates for election, or a referendum submitting the issue themselves as to what appeal our Mayor should make to Ottawa, would have created a flood of voters anxious and glad to express themselves.

To my way of thinking the Council are elected to carry out the wishes of the majority of the people being kept in the dark and not being consulted, how can a Council or Mayor act according to the wishes?

The apparent general disdain practised by the elected representatives for the people over the year brings apathy, distrust and reversed to

We are faced with a Big Issue and it is now Hot. The outcome seriously affects every one of us only second to actual war.

What is our Mayor doing? What is he advocating for us? Is what he is asking for that which we want? We want to know. We are entitled to know. It is high time that we as voters and Municipality makes to higher up Governments on our behalf.

There is no matter of business more important for our Council to discuss at its next meeting than this issue and nature of appeal. Give the subject air. Let the public in on it.

Public opinion is powerful and when such a request as is now being made by a group of Mayors has the support of public opinion, it will get results but without public opinion being aroused and in support of the request it is just another appeal.

Thomson Denies Reports Made By Reporters

TORONTO (CP)—James Thomson, deputy high commissioner for the United Kingdom, denies saying the British government regrets the ban by Canada on the awarding of titles to Canadians.

Newspaper reporters quoted him Tuesday as saying at an armed forces conference on foreign affairs here the ban "is a matter of some regret on the part of the United Kingdom government."

He said Wednesday he made his remarks during a question period which followed his speech. An officer asked him to describe the system of distributing military and civil honors.

"All I said was that the effect of this Canadian decision, which was entirely accepted by Britain as something for Canada to settle, was that there can never be another case like that of Banting," he said in an interview.

"The late King George V conferred a knighthood on Canada's Dr. Frederick Banting, one of the co-discoverers of insulin, on the suggestion of the Canadian government.

Price Reductions On Tires, Tubes Are Announced

TORONTO (CP) — Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada Ltd. yesterday announced price reductions in tires and tubes amounting to approximately $1.50 on the most popular sizes of first-line tires.

Officials of Dunlop Tire and Rubber Goods Company Ltd., said consideration is being given to downward adjustment of price.

R. G. Harper, vice-president in charge of sales at Goodyear said the price adjustment is a result of lower costs in raw materials, particularly rubber, textiles and some compounds used in the building of tires. The reduction does not extend to second-line tires.

The price reduction in tires for farm tractors and implements will average between 25 and 34 a tire.

Accused Given Two Years, Fined $200

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Arthur McKay, 24, one of three men charged in connection with the Nov., 13 attempt to rob a bank here, was sentenced to two years and fined $200 for illegal possession of narcotics.

Crown Attorney Bruce J. S. Macdonald said Wednesday a fourth man, Norman Quinlan, 41, also will be charged with attempted robbery. He now is charged with conspiracy.

The attempted robbery was frustrated when two employees of Brinks Inc. entered the bank after two men, wearing rubber masks, had handcuffed 23 bank employees and customers.

Others charged with attempted robbery are Robert Woods, 37, and William Buckley, 24, both of Toronto.

Premier Frost Stresses Need For Religion

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Premier Frost stresses the need for religion in education as the key to "real progress in the moulding of morals."

Speaking Wednesday night at ceremonies to mark the installation of Rev. Dr. W. R. Coleman as principal of Huron (Anglican) College, Mr. Frost said:

"In our educational processes we must build up a solid core of something which might be called 'The way of the spirit.'

"I would hope that more young people would turn to the study of religion rather than to the study of science as they are doing today."

Given Year in Jail

FORT ERIE (CP)—Fred Taylor, 48, of Toronto was sentenced to a year in jail on a charge of possessing $1,777 worth of goods illegally imported into Canada. Taylor's brother, Victor, 41, was fined $200 on a similar charge.

The same charge against Mrs. Victor Taylor, 41, was withdrawn Wednesday.

RCMP officials took the trio into custody Sept. 25 after Victor's automobile crashed into a tree.

Found in the Taylor car were 121,800 cigarets, a rifle, ammunition and other goods.

Variety of Sewing Stitches Shown W.I.

UNIONDALE — The December meeting of Uniondale Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carman Frost, 5th concession of Sidney, with a large attendance.

The program was put on by Mr. Rohrer and Mrs. Beckwith from the Singer Sewing Centre, Belleville. This consisted of demonstrations of adjustable ironing boards, steam irons, dress forms, sewing machines and sewing cabinet.

Mr. Rohrer demonstrated on the sewing machine different fashion stitches, Bouclé stitch, for a fill-in design which is done with a circular motion and using of pearl cotton and silk thread; signature stitch for script monogram signatures and running designs and the spark cession of Sidney. The topic will be stitch for solid and border design.

He also demonstrated six gear attachment and button-holer, both are most useful in sewing.

A lucky draw of skirt hemmer was won by Mrs. David Ross.

The members and visitors had a Christmas exchange of gifts.

Refreshments were served by the December hostesses.

The January meeting will be at the home of Mrs. H. Richards, 4th concession of Sidney.

Fred Bateman Installs Officers

R. W. Bro. Fred Bateman, Stirling, Grand Master of Ontario East Loyal Orange Lodges recently conducted the election and impressive installation service of his own lodge No. 34, Springbrook L. O. L.

During the evening Harry McAdam, Mount Pleasant, district master, spoke briefly and brought greetings.

The 1953 officers are: Wor. Master, Rev. H. Beare (re-elected); Deputy Master, Elwood Johnson; chaplain, Chris Bateman; recording secretary, Clayton Burkitt; financial secretary, Gordon Webb; treasurer, Orrie Barton; marshal, Alex Grabowski; first lecturer, Byron Seeley; second lecturer, Arthur Broadworth; first committee man, Jack Sharp; tyler, Thomas Webb.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting and a social half hour enjoyed.

Visits 18 Lodges

R. W. Bro. Fred Bateman will soon complete his two-year term of office which expires in April 1953 and by that time he will have visited 18 lodges in Ontario East during the year. Last year he visited more than that number.

On Tuesday evening R. W. Bro. Fred Bateman, Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Lodges of Ontario East and Mrs. Bateman attended an open meeting at Norwood sponsored by L. O. L. No. 34. A large audience was in attendance and all enjoyed films of the royal tour.

The guest speakers were Brother Bateman and Dick Sanderson, Deputy Grand Master.

Mr. Bateman presented a certificate of honor to Mr. Ernest Baptie, who has been a member of Norwood L. O. L. No. 34 for the past 50 years as the officers and members of the lodge wished to honor Mr. Baptie on this auspicious occasion.

At the close of a delightful program members of Norwood L. O. B. A. catered for a luncheon.

H-S Assoc. Hears Reports On Recently Formed Night Classes

BANCROFT — The regular November meeting of the Bancroft Home and School Association, which was cancelled due to the recent High School Commencement Exercises, was held at the Public School on Friday evening. Mrs. A. Goodkey, the president, was in the chair.

Mrs. G. Wragg and Mr. G. McKelvey addressed the meeting in regard to the recently formed night classes at the High School and the many subjects being taught. A great interest is being shown in these classes and nearly all classes are filled.

The report of the school nurse was given by Mrs. T. W. Tryon in the absence of the nurse, Mrs. E. Hattin, who was unable to attend.

Reports were also heard from committees in charge of the rummage sale and the Hallowe'en party.

The attendance prize was won by Mrs. D. Breighton's class.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

ASK WAGE INCREASE

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—Employees of the Humberstone Shoe Company, members of the International Fur and Leather Workers' Union (CIO-CCL), have voted to ask the company for a wage increase of 20 cents an hour, it was announced Wednesday night. Steve Antal Jr., president of the local union, said they would also ask a reduction of the work day to eight hours without loss of take-home pay.

Atom-Smasher Goes to Work At Stanford U.

By RENNIE TAYLOR

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—An atom-smasher using bullets which travel almost at the speed of light has gone to work at Stanford University. The machine offers new ways to learn the nature of matter.

It will be used to measure the incredibly-small distances between particles which make up the nucleus of an atom. It will seek to discover new particles within the nucleus. It will serve as an instrument for further clarifying the nature of electricity.

Most spectacular feature of the instrument is the speed and weight of its ultra-tiny bullets. The bullets are electrons, the smallest known particles of matter. They streak through a copper tube 200 feet long at about 186,000 miles a second. Light travels only a few feet a second faster than that.

The speed of the bullets is so great that the electrons increase their weight or mass 2,000 times during the trip. This gives them terrific striking power—the ability to smash atoms in possibly new ways.

The Stanford machine, shown for the first time to reporters Tuesday, hasn't been turned on full force yet. Its bullets now have a striking power of about 250,000,000 electron volts. Its builders said, however, that it soon will be operating at 1,000,000,000 volts.

Detroit Blasts Boston 10-1 To Take Over National League Leadership

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ON THE UP-AND-UP!

Michael J. Rodden, sports editor of the Kingston Whig Standard, who has dubbed and "re-dubbed" this department the "Cub-Chomper of the Glen Keys", merely because we figured the Glens are as good as any in the loop, plus the fact we get our mail in the Maire village, plus the fact they're the home-town team, is not doing so badly, of late as a columnar Gene Krupa for the Kingston Goodyears.

Michael J., never an "Alibi Ike," gritted his teeth, growled in his tonsils, "it's gotta be done" and came forth with the following statement:

"Belleville Glen Keys' triumph here last Friday may have been a sports blessing in disguise as it did draw attention to the fact that there were weaknesses in the Goodyear squad that needed adjustment." No alibi was offered in sincerity. On the night's play the Belles were clearly entitled to the verdict and the Goodyear board of strategy decided that steps had to be taken at once to make the Glens a strong contender for the group title."

Michael did not mention the fact that his Goodies were on the short end of the score three times in succession, two of them to the Glens, and this trio of setbacks following a four-game winning streak clearly denoted that either something was slipping in the Goodyear forces or the other squads were girding their loins and building up strength.

However, the Goodyears did rear back into some kind of form Wednesday night when they defeated the Peterborough Petes 5-1 in a no-ad-lib display of hockey. They have bolstered their defence with one Ted Nicholson, formerly of pro vintage who played his first game against the Petes. Whether he can help to keep Eddie Pisanh in harness but a Kingston report says it is not likely he will report until after the New Year.

Meanwhile, the Petes, who at the moment are in the cpuon cellar, are striving desperately to strengthen their forces. They have added Keith Kinnery, "Doodle" Creenlaw and Gordon Fryia, Doug Mortimer and possibly Jim Munro to their roster, and that should make some difference. Arnie Dugan and Jake Wilson have moved to Stratford at the beginning of the season, and who are doing quite well, up thataway, thank you, are sorely missed in the Petes ranks.

Tonight the Petes keep an engagement with the high-flying Glens in Peterborough and "Red" Dornan's crew will be gunning for their fourteenth consecutive win. Then on tomorrow night they take on the pace-setting Stouffville Clippers in Memorial Arena in what should be the senior "B" game of the week.

The Clippers, last year's senior "B"-Ontario champions, are pacing the group pack, but just to show they're not invincible, the Oshawa Truckers got their rolling stock really rolling Wednesday night and plastered an 8-3 defeat on the Clippers right in Clippersville. And a better thing couldn't have happened to the group. Box office interest is much more easily sustained with a four or six-point margin separating the first four teams than have the top two leaders waltzing along in a group all of their own, several points ahead of the pack.

With the Glens travelling at top speed (of course that Petes-Glens game hasn't been played yet) the Stouffville-Belleville game tomorrow night in Memorial Arena should bring the faithful out in droves. It is the first visit of the senior "B" champions to this village and the first clash between the teams. Should be a mighty interesting joust.

HAWKS, TOO!

Not only the Glens, but Don Barrett's Junior Black Hawks face a severe test over the weekend for next Monday night the group leaders take on the highly-touted Oshawa Reps in the Motor City. The Reps, who are yet to meet defeat, but Maxie Jackson's Kingston Vics refused to be daunted by the Oshawans' record and held them to a three-all tie right in the shadow of General Motors.

Der Maxie said his youngsters came up with the best performance of the season and the game was one of the best yet. However, the Hawks are due to encounter, from reports sifting in here, they'll have to be riding their best hockey horses Monday night in Oshawa. They've won eight and lost two for sixteen points, and they be squeezing for their sixth straight victory on Saturday. They'll work out tonight from 8.30 to 9 and again tomorrow night from 6 to 7.

HOW THEY STAND!

And just to set Benny Morgensen and his Clippers' records straight, following the defeat of Orillia last night by Oshawa 4-3, the Motor City crept to within one point of the pace-setting Stouffville team. The Clippers have seven wins, three defeats and a tie for fifteen points. Oshawa has seven wins, four setbacks for 14 points. Kingston Goodyears are in third slot with 12 points with the Glen Keys next with 10. Orillia is in fifth spot with seven points and the Petes trail with six. These figures include games played up to and including last night.

The Glens by defeating the Petes tonight and the Clippers tomorrow night can pull up on even terms with Oshawa in second place providing, of course, Orillia knocks off the Goodyears in Terrierville tomorrow night.

Marlboros Bow To Citadelles By 4-1 Score

QUEBEC (CP)—Camille Henri scored two goals to pace Quebec Citadelles to a 4-1 victory over Toronto Marlboros in a junior hockey game of the Quebec-Ontario interlocking schedule.

Thursday night's result moved Citadelles into a first-place tie with the idle Montreal Canadiens in the Quebec section. The Marlboros still lead the Ontario loop.

Michael Labadie and Adolph Kuklowicz notched singles for Quebec. Johnny McDonald scored for Toronto late in the first period.

SKATING TONIGHT at THE ARENA

Worst Bruin Defeat in Decade; Hawks Bow to Canadiens 3-2 For Fourth Straight Setback

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit, Red Wings, defending champion of the National Hockey League, are finally in their usual spot—at the top of the league standings.

A few weeks ago the Wings were in fourth place and their followers were skeptical of the Stanley Cup backers' chances.

But within the last two weeks the Wings vaulted into contention and during the week-end moved into a deadlock with Chicago Black Hawks for the league leadership.

A Detroit victory and a Chicago defeat Thursday night did the trick.

First In Eight

The Wings routed Boston 10-1 in Beantown—the Bruins' first defeat in eight games and worst in 10 years. In Chicago Red Curry scored twice in the first 12 minutes to lead Montreal Canadiens to a 3-2 win over the Black Hawks.

The Hawks now have dropped four in a row and are two points behind Detroit. Montreal moved into third place one point behind, to point up on the idle Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bert Olmstead scored the other Montreal goal, Maurice Richard getting an assist. Jim Peters of Chicago beat Gerry McNeil early in the game and Pete Conacher scored in the third period.

Detroit set the pace early by scoring three goals in the first period. Terry Sawchuk held his shutout until the eight-minute mark of the third period when Jerry Toppazzini, with his team a man short, broke away to score. Then he set up John Wilson, Gordie Howe, Tony Leswick and Metro Prystai each scored twice for the Wings. Glen Skov and defenceman Len Kelly accounted for the other two.

Couldn't Make It

The big lead gave the Wings a chance to give Terry veteran Ted Lindsay for his 200th NHL goal. Although his teammates did everything but roll out a red carpet, Lindsay had to be content with a pair of assists.

Lindsay moved ahead of Wally Hergesheimer of New York in the scoring race as a result of the two assists to take over second place with 27 points.

Howe's two goals gave him a firmer grip on first place with 31 points.

No games are scheduled tonight.

Mixed Commercial Bowling League

The Short Circuit Club was the only seven point winner in the games played last night in the Mixed Commercial Bowling League. The circuit bowlers knocked off Power Pins in all three games.

Wonder Workers, Bangs, Jets, Fly Liners and Sun Rays emerged with 5-2 victories over Smashemroe, Strikeiters, K.V.A.'s, Eggheads and Live Wires respectively. Strikeiters were two games but lost out in total pins in racking up a 4-3 win over Symons.

Merle Simpson was high scorer for the ladies with 706. She was followed by Marg Fairbairn, 697; Ann Pullman, 653; Phyllis Graham, 649; Hilda Meens, 623 and Olive Jarvah, 617.

George Bell led the men with 771. He was trilled by Art Whalen, 763; Ed Bowers, 732; Jack Fitzgerald, 711; Ron Mayfield, 710 and Gar Anderson, 706.

League standings: Short Circuits, 70; Symons, 61; Jets, 59; Bombers, 55; K.V.A.'s, 52; Sun Rays, 53; Whit Banes, 52; Marbelieve, 52; Live Wires 52; Fly Liners, 52; Smashemroe, 29; Eggheads, 24; Power Pins, 14 and Wonder Watts, 8.

Solomons Says Fight Is On

LONDON (AP)—British promoter Jack Solomons kept the middleweight boxing controversy going by declaring that Sugar Ray Robinson had "definitely agreed" to defend his world middleweight crown against Randy Turpin June 9 in either London or Dublin.

To back up his statement Thursday, Solomons journeyed to the British Boxing Board of Control the signed contracts of Robinson and his manager, and cablegrams from George Gainford, Robinson's manager.

That constitutes a binding agreement, said Ted Waltham, secretary of the BBBC.

In New York, however, chairman Bob Christenberry of the New York state athletic commission said he isn't impressed.

"I don't think we can wait until June," he said. "Robinson has been given enough consideration. If he fights in June it will be much more than a year between title defences."

The New York commission vacated Robinson's title in the state last week, subject to review Dec. 15.

Bruins' Peirson Has Broken Jaw

BOSTON (AP)—Boston Bruins Thursday lost the services of right wing Johnny Peirson who has a broken right lower jaw.

Peirson played Wednesday night's 4-1 National Hockey League win over the Rangers in New York and thought he had a troublesome tooth. A visit to the dentist disclosed the broken jaw.

Peirson said he thinks he suffered the injury Sunday night when he was elbowed by Detroit's Tony Leswick.

Despirito's Mark Hopes Blasted, Draws Suspension

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Tropical Park's racing stewards blasted Tony Despirito's hopes for a new American winning record by suspending the leading jockey for 15 days. They will decide today whether to extend the suspension for another faulty ride in Thursday's sixth race.

The 19-year-old apprentice jockey was grounded Thursday until Christmas eve for allowing his mount to interfere with another horse in Wednesday's fourth race. That virtually wiped out his chances of breaking the record of 388 winners in a year.

Despirito was allowed to ride out his mounts Thursday. Three hours after the suspension was announced he was disqualified in the sixth race for allowing his horse, Nightown, to interfere with Dom W., ridden by Freddie Olsen, about 70 yards from the finish line.

Nightown finished third but was disqualified and placed last in the field of 12 two year olds. Dom W. was out of the money.

It was Ryan who lodged a claim of foul against Despirito Wednesday which brought about his 10-day suspension. Despirito has ridden 370 winners this year.

Shore Charges Referee Lax

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—The executive vice-president of the American Hockey League says the referee lost control of the Syracuse and Pittsburgh hockey game here Wednesday to such a degree the players could have been seriously hurt.

Eddie Shore, also owner of Syracuse Warriors, said Thursday night that the officiating of referee Red Story hurt both teams. He said he had no complaints about favoritism.

Chuck Blair of Pittsburgh is being treated in a hospital here for a facial fracture suffered in the game.

"The referee just let the players go," Shore said, "and did not call obvious violations for slashing, interference, tripping and one case where a player hit another over the head with a stick."

Italy's Veteran Davis Cup Stars Snatch Victory from India's Team

By GAYLE TALBOT

BRISBANE (AP)—Italy's veteran Davis Cup tennis pair of Gianni Cucelli and Marcello Del Bello rallied from the brink of defeat today to defeat India's stubborn combination of Sumant Misra and Naresh Kumar in a five-setter and give their country a 2-1 lead in the interzone semi-finals.

The score of the match, played under a blazing sun, was 1-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-2, 13-11.

All the thrills were packed into the final set. The Indians reached match point three times in the 14th, 16th and 20th games, but couldn't get the winning point.

Need One Staple

Italy now needs to win only one of Saturday's concluding singles to qualify for the interzone finals against the United States next week at Sydney. Misra is scheduled to meet Fausto Gardini in the first singles. Kumar and Roberto Del Bello finish it off.

It was learned after today's match that Misra suffered either a hernia or rupture in the closing stages and probably will be unable to play Saturday. In that case his place will be taken by George Bassot, originally brought along as manager. Misra was taken to hospital for diagnosis.

Seldom is such a radical reversal of form seen in first-class tennis as befell each pair in turn in the first four sets today.

The Italians couldn't play a lick at the outset and were two sets down before they knew what had hit them. Then they started playing and the Indians couldn't do anything right.

Unexpectedly all four players found their games at once in the fourth set and for 56 minutes, until Kumar netted the decisive point, it was thrilling tennis.

Journal Wants Re-Designed Glove To Reduce Boxing Deaths, Injuries

CHICAGO (AP)—The Journal of the American Medical Association calls for an all-out effort—including a "re-designed boxing glove—to cut "the high incidence of deaths and injuries" in the ring.

It urged, research and renewed action all along the line to protect professional fighters in their careers.

In a swing at the National Boxing Association and most state boxing commissions, the Journal said Thursday professional boxing deserver to be labelled "the nation's most dangerous trade." It added:

Be Made Safe

"Boxing can be and must be made a safer sport."

The Journal said in an editorial that the NBA should "immediately establish" an accident and fatality committee. This body, the Journal added, would "record the annual (boxing) death rate, conduct precise analytical studies of the causes of death in the ring and institute remedies to improve the protective environment."

In Washington, Col. Harvey Miller, executive secretary of the NBA, told a reporter that the "NBA has always stood ready to fully co-operate in any move toward greater ring safety."

Miller said the NBA had co-operated in the development of such safety measures as:

The compulsory eight-count which requires a boxer to wait until the count of eight before resuming after he has been knocked down; a new safety mat, light weight headgear, cloth instead of resin in the ring, and safety guard gloves.

The Journal said no official effort is being made to compile the annual death rate from boxing. But it said that Dr. Vincent A. Nardiello, physician at Madison Square Garden, reports that 87 boxers are known to have died throughout the world since 1946, 47 of them in the United States.

Providence Reds Break Lengthy Losing Streak

By The Canadian Press

Zellio Toppazzini ended a seven-game Providence losing streak by scoring the winning goal at 1:39 of overtime to give the Reds a 4-3 American Hockey League victory over St. Louis Flyers.

The Reds came from behind twice to tie the game Thursday night, the second time with just 10 seconds left in regular playing time. Jean-Paul Denis hit that goal.

The Flyers grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Joe Lund and Gayle Fielder. Pete Kapusta started the Reds' comeback in the second period and put them in even terms midway in the third. Then Ed Stankiewicz notched a goal to make it 3-2 for the Flyers.

Ford Leads Miami Open

MIAMI, Fla. (CP) —Doug Ford, 30-year-old Harrison, N.Y., professional, shot a three-under-par 67 to snatch the first-round lead in the $10,000 Miami Open on the Miami Springs municipal golf course.

Ford scored 33-34—67 Thursday to move out in front of a field of 144 players.

Stan Horne of Montreal shot a 37-34—71, one over par to rank in the first five starters. Stan Leonard of Vancouver shot 39-36—75 and Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon shot 38-38—76.

Ford, aided by ace stroke were Art Wall, Jr., 29-year-old Honesdale, Pa., pro, and the veteran Johnny Palmer of Charlotte, N.C.

Vancouver to Have $1,250,000 Bowl Biggest Sports Stadium in Canada

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver is to have a $1,250,000 athletic bowl, the biggest sports stadium in Canada.

It will be built for the 1954 British Empire Games. It will be designed to seat 32,000 under covered stands and at least another 30,000 in temporary bleachers. There will be standing room for thousands more.

Oshrack Tornado

Four miles from downtown Vancouver, it will be on the spacious grounds of the Pacific National Exhibition, with nearby mountains events.

and Burrard Inlet as a background. The big stadium will far outclass that of the University of Toronto, now the biggest in Canada with a seating capacity of 27,500.

Vancouver voters Thursday approved a $750,000 by-law to assist in the stadium's construction. The remaining $500,000 will be supplied by the British Empire Games Society through public subscription.

The stadium is expected to open the door to the entry of Vancouver into the Western Interprovincial Football Union, and to bring it many other big-time sporting events.

Hockey Teams, Angels Need Wings To Get Anywhere Says Minister

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Frank Boucher and coach Bill Cook of New York Rangers along with reporters were as gloomy as the weather at the weekly luncheon of the New York Hockey Writers' Association.

The Rangers, mired in the National Hockey League cellar, had lost another game to Montreal Wednesday.

While the group was pecking at the food Thursday, an unexpected visitor, a minister, came in out of the rain.

A startled scribe remarked: "He must be here to administer the last rites."

Ordinarily the luncheon is restricted to the writers and hockey officials but this time Rev. E. S. Harper, retired rector of All Saints Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, was invited.

After Boucher said a new left winger, George Senick of Saskatoon in the Western League, was expected to join the club in time for Sunday's game against Toronto the clergyman was asked to speak.

Mr. Harper said: "I don't know anything about hockey but I do know that angels can't get to heaven on a left wing only, he needs a right wing also."

Canadian Boxers, Mgr. Suspended

QUEBEC (CP) — Two middleweight boxers and the manager of the Canadian bantamweight champion, Fernando Gagnon, have been suspended by the Canadian Boxing Federation.

Leo Bouchard, Gagnon's manager, Thursday was given a six months suspension for insulting a referee and action detrimental to the best interests of boxing.

Middleweight Whitman Burgess of White Plains, N.Y., was suspended for 60 days for failure to fulfill a contract, and Roland Lemoyne, Quebec middleweight, received a 30-day suspension for hitting a referee during a boxing match.

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Otty Stevenson, Saint John sports promoter, and Murray W. Long, operator of the Forum, announced Thursday night they will act as co-managers for Saint John Beavers in the New Brunswick Senior Hockey League. The action followed near collapse of the Beavers. Lacking other support, the players had been operating the team themselves. They iced only 10 men in a game Wednesday night and have suffered a string of defeats.

Royals Place Three Players On All-Star Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Montreal Royals placed three men on the International Baseball League's all-star fielding team although Springfield Cube had the best team defensive record.

Official league statistics released Thursday showed Montreal's second baseman Jackie Holland .988, outfielder Walt Moryn .994 and catcher Charley Thompson .981 in front at their positions.

Other leaders, by positions, were: First baseman Harvey Zernia, Buffalo .995; third baseman Bob Ludwig, Springfield .961; shortstop Gene Corbitt, Syracuse, .961; and pitcher Al Hyde, Springfield, 1.000. Twenty-one pitchers fielded perfectly but Hyde accepted the most chances, 62.

Peewee Hockey Schedule Revised

The peewee hockey league's revised schedule for December was presented Tuesday in Memorial Arena. The new set-up calls for the first game of the original schedule to be played on Thursday nights with the remaining games played Saturday mornings.

And Saturday morning games will start at 7.30 instead of the former time.

Tomorrow morning's games see the Bantams meet the Maple Leafs at 7.30, Canadiens and Black Hawks follow and Barons and Bruins play the third tilt.

The schedule for next week calls for Barons to play Maple Leafs and Barons playing Thursday afternoon at 4:30 while on Saturday, December 20th, Red Wings meet Hornets, Hawks meet Bruins and Rangers meet Canadiens.

ANNOUNCE NIGHT GAMES

BROOKLYN (AP) — Brooklyn Dodgers will play 36 night games on their home ice season. The Dodgers home schedule, released Thursday, showed they will play four each with the Giants, Cardinals, Reds, Cubs and Pirates, three with the Phils and one with the Braves.

Haney Named Bucs' Manager

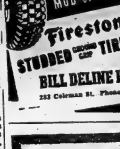
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fred Haney, skipper of the Hollywood, Calif. Stars, winners of the Pacific Coast League last season, signed a one-year contract today to manage the hapless Pittsburgh Pirates.

The announcement came after a morning conference between Haney and general manager Branch Rickey. The two arranged a new conference later in the day to discuss the matter.

Haney succeeds Billy Meyer who resigned at the end of the 1952 season after his team wound up with the worst record in more than 60 years. The Pirates lost 112 games one short of tying the club mark set in 1890.

The 53-year-old skipper blamed ill health and said he couldn't take another tough season at the helm of the rookie-dotted Pirates.

PRO BID FOR AUSSIES



LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Schroeder, the former U.S. Davis Cup star, is en route to Australia and is reported carrying attractive offers for Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor to turn pro. A sports publicity man told a reporter that Schroeder will approach the two Aussie tennis stars after the upcoming Davis Cup matches.

The Kibitzer

Bridge is a game of comparative figures. What you gain is what your opponents lose. Rather than play you next at your bid the adept players prefer to lose less at their own bid.

Such a deliberate loss is known as a sacrifice bid. In its try, however, it stay result in a bigger loss by losing more in tricks than expected. Or, by driving the other side into a better contract.

There was this deal:

NORTH
♥ J 9 8 7 6
♦ A
♣ 7 6 4 3 2

WEST
♠ A K Q 9 8 6 4
♦ 7 6 2
♣ A K 10

EAST
♠ 7 5 2
♥ K 5 4
♦ 8 5 4
♣ Q 9 8 5

SOUTH
♠ 10 6 5
♥ A K Q 10 3 3
♦ Q J 10 9 3
♣ None

South opened with a heart. West doubled for takeout. North hopped to four hearts. East passed. South reads 13 tricks in their pair. Lack of aces makes slam doubtful.

West came in with a sacrifice bid of four spades. North passed. So did East. Rather than permit opponents a small loss, south felt safe at five hearts. He bid it.

West passed. So did north. East however, bid five spades in the hope that it was a worthwhile gesture. Being pushed, south took the bid in his teeth and went to a small slam in hearts.

To west it looked as if his two black aces and his black kings could take at least two tricks. If not more. If so, the small slam in hearts would be defeated, of course.

Thus, figuring south was out on a limb that could be lopped off, west doubled for penalty. Although doubling a slam that shows your strength is not good policy, west felt justified here.

South, who had discovered more than 26 tricks in his pair by the Middle, was not sure they had enough aces and kings for safety. But he decided to go whole hog or none. He redoubled.

As you see the 12 needed tricks were taken with cross ruffs; trumping back and forth. Declarer never let trumps. He used them separately. Such suprises make bridge so enticing.

Union Membership Reaches Record Of 1,146,000

OTTAWA (CP)—Union membership in Canada reached a record 1,146,000 by the end of 1951, the labor department estimates.

The figure was 117,600 higher than in any earlier year, the department said part of the increase resulted from a wider coverage in its annual survey. This factor accounted for at least 24,330 in membership of independent groups not surveyed earlier.

The estimate was made in the department's 1952 edition of "Labor Organization in Canada," a publication detailing the country's union set-up.

The publication also said the proportion of workers belonging to labor organizations was the high est ever. More than 30 per cent of the labor force belonged to unions.

Membership in the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was shown at 322,965, compared with 470,928 a year previously. The Canadian Congress of Labor was shown with 230,778—it now claims 370,000—compared with 218,532.

Improvements May Result From Claxton's Visit

OTTAWA (CP)—Improvement of recreational facilities for Canadian troops in Europe may result from the visits of Defence Minister Claxton, informed quarters say.

Before leaving for Europe to attend the North Atlantic Treaty meetings, Mr. Claxton said he planned to go into the whole question of welfare of the army's 27th brigade and the Canadian airmen at North Luffenham, England, and Grostenquin, France.

Col. John Wallis, director of administration for the army and head of its welfare services, has visited the brigade twice, the last time in February and March. He plans to establish some Canadian counterpart to the U.K.'s NAAFI organization.

The Canadian Legion said Mr. Claxton has rejected a region after to provide welfare services to Canadian forces serving overseas.

Legion headquarters quoted a letter from Mr. Claxton expressing the opinion that existing welfare services are as good or better than in the Second World War.

AT THE BELLE

Kennie, Paget, Newton, Gwenn Co-Star as Victor Hugo's Immortal Characters

One of the true immorials of world literature, Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," reaches the screen of the Bells theatre today in what is reportedly its definitive movie transcription. This completely new Twentieth-Century-Fox production of the classic tale stresses action and acting, without sacrifice of the spectacular elements and sweeping story lines.

Now that a whole new generation has matured, the producers thought the time right for a modern motion picture recreating the fabled adventures of Jean Valjean, the 19th Century Frenchman whose theft of a loaf of bread landed him on a convict galley for ten years and made him for years thereafter the victim of the unrelenting pursuit of his nemesis, the inflexible police inspector, Javert.

In all the great books there are no two more legendary figures than Valjean and Javert, nor an episode more widely read, admired and remembered than the unforgettable final chase through the grimy sewers of underground Paris.

For these matchless and inflexible characters of "Les Miserables" present Fred MacMurray selected stars or international renown—Michael Rennie to play Valjean and Robert Newton to enact Javert. Rennie, who came to the fore in the role of "The Black Rose," has won standing as an American idol in his more recent films, while Newton, triumphant in "Henry V," "Odd Man Out" and "Treasure Island," has only lately begun to divide his movie-making hours between Hollywood and London.

Co-starred are Debra Paget, the diminutive brunette who won stardom in "Broken Arrow" and is here vaulted to range in age from 11 to 18; and Edmund Gwenn, distinguished veteran of "Miracle on 34th Street," and "Mister 880."

Important in featured roles are Sylvia Sydney, now an infrequent but welcome visitor to Hollywood visitor; Cameron Mitchell, on-the-rise young star of "Death of a Salesman" and "The Outcasts of Poker Flat."

Some 42 supporting parts, backed up by cast and crew numbering a thousand workers, were charged to famed director Lewis Milestone, to bring Richard Murphy's screenplay to life. That all have conspired to do so with unerring success is on view now and forever more in "Les Miserables." It will rank with the classics of the screen which never die.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Success is a funny thing. It can come from the most trivial of happenings, such as growing a beard.

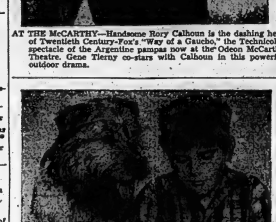
That's how Gene Evans made G. Clean-shaven he was a bum. With a beard on, he's a hit actor who is always working.

You've seen Gene in numerous wax pictures. Usually he's the grizzled old sarge, although once he made it up to major. He's been before the cameras almost without vacation the last 2½ years. And that's as long as he has been sporting his beard.

I asked him if he would keep the beard and become a rugged Monty Woolley. At present, he has trimmed it down to a sleek, spade-like affair for his role as the Oriental heavy in "The Golden Blade."

"I don't know whether I'll keep it or not," he replied. "I'm okay as long as they keep making war pictures and if I can work into adventure pictures like this one. But it might limit the kinds of roles I can take."

Although he looks like an old timer in his war films, he is only 30.



Capsule review: "Hans Christian Anderson" is a handsome hunk of entertainment for the holiday season. The plot is admittedly a fairy tale, though not as imaginative as the ones Andersen himself concocted. There are many surprises in the story. But the dances are stunning, and the Frank Loesser songs provide the best new film musical score in years. Danny Kaye is refreshingly restrained in the title role, and Jean Maire is excellent while dancing.

AT THE McCARTHY—Handsome Rory Calhoun is the dashing hero of Twentieth Century-Fox's "Way of a Gaucho," the Technicolor spectacle of the Argentine pampas now at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. Gene Tierny co-stars with Calhoun in this powerful outdoor drama.

AT THE CAPITOL—A boy and his dog. All seems well with Shaggy and his youthful master; George Nokes, in this scene from the specialty's "Shaggy" showing today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. But before the filmed outdoor adventure ends, Shaggy and George go through many heart-tugging and thrilling adventures. Brenda Joyce and Robert Shayne also star in the Pine-Thomas production. On the same program is blazing color, the mightiest sea and sky adventure ever filmed "Flat Top" starring Sterling Hayden and Richard Carlson. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

MONTREAL (CP) — Managing-director Frank Selke of Montreal Canadiens announced Thursday night that Jean Beliveau, high-scoring centre with Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, will play three games on loan-lease with the Canadiens.

Beliveau's signature to a contract has long been sought by the National Hockey League club, but he has consistently declared he prefers to remain in Quebec.

Under hockey's lend-lease arrangement, Beliveau's status with the Aces will not be changed.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SATURDAY, DEC. 13, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—The good and innocent are often susceptible; can fall prey to schemes and unscrupulous people if not on guard. Eyes open, mind awake!

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Problems a little hard, confusing? Don't give up, ever. Now buckle down and show your true metal.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—No day for the lax, the pessimist. Stars in favorable aspects for wise ambition. Be not too persistent, rather use salesmanship, charm.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer)—Be not too quick judging, or with out plan of action. But be sufficiently slow for best results. Industry, mechanics, highly rated.

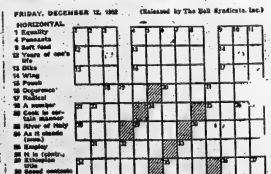
July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Benefits with essential subjects. Business contracts need especially careful handling. Shun avoidable legal tangles.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Dont mind contentions if ideas seem good. But don't disregard wise objections. Investments, social, betterments were spun from dreams.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Vibrations excellent. Personal and financial undertakings can achieve. Give justice, tolerance to all.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Moderately generous aspects, but don't go overboard. Benefic vibrations should be useful.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Excellent indications for necessary tasks. Family, social and personal affairs need close watching now.



December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — One of month's most opportune periods to carry on to success important and essential matters. Spiritual needs highly honored today.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Day's aspects say it should be easy for you to catch up on some long delayed. News will further your ambitions.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Planetary configurations point to your successful happy relations with constituents, associates. Patience needed in arranging plans, contracts.

YOU BORN TODAY: Magnanimous Jupiter ruling. A bright, straightforward person, you make friends readily, and can hold and count on them when needed. Success can be yours in ordinary work, professional undertakings, in social life. Many famed judges, statesman, bankers in your Sign. Sagittarius. Birthdate of: A. Lawrence, Lowell, educationalist.

Creamery Butter Production Up 20 Million Pounds

OTTAWA (CP)—Creamery butter production jumped by 20,000,000 pounds in the first 11 months of 1962, the bureau of statistics reports.

Cheddar cheese production declined by the same amount.

Dairy factories turned out 151,691,000 pounds of butter during November, boosting the 11-month total to 397,500,000 against 377,480,000 in the similar 1961 period.

Muscle Transplant May Help Child To Smile Again

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP)—It will be a happy Christmas for Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Otley.

The young couple's five-year-old daughter, Linda Lee, may smile again.

Linda has never been able to manage a full-face smile, but now, after many disappointments, there is hope.

An injury at birth left the child with deadened nerves and immovable muscles on the right side of her face.

Freshly, blonde Linda has the trace of a smile, but only a trace. Many doctors said "nothing can be done."

But a young Vancouver plastic surgeon has brought hope.

Linda was taken to the Children's Hospital at Vancouver and there underwent a three-hour operation.

It was a remarkable operation. It involved the first operation of its kind on a child in Canada. The child's dropped right lip was brought up and may eventually bring movement to the right side of her paralyzed face.

The surgeon, whose name was not disclosed, said the parents it was an experiment, but he is hopeful of success. It will be some weeks, however, before success or failure is known.

Linda got home from hospital, joyfully awaiting Santa's arrival, but the big Christmas present may come later—a big smile.

Plan New School

TORONTO (CP)—Education Minister Dunlop met Wednesday with members of the Thomas and central Elgin district high school board to discuss plans for a new $750,000 high school.

The Thomas deputation, headed by John Thwaites, chairman, will call a meeting of those interested in the proposal and go over plans discussed at Wednesday's meeting, representatives from the education department will attend to answer questions.

PIONEER RESIDENT

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)—Allan (Tan) Meeks of nearby Cloyne district recently celebrated his 94th birthday. Mr. Meeks, whose father was one of the first-settlers in this area, says he can remember when several tribes of Indians were living in the district.

Unrequited Love Prompted Former Officer to Rob

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Unrequited love prompted a former German Army officer to rob a London bank of $7,400, he told police in a statement admitted in city court.

Alfred Bahr, 28, Windsor, pleaded guilty Thursday to robbing with threat of violence the Royal Bank branch on Richmond street. He was remanded a week for sentence.

Bahr, who came to Canada less than a year ago, asked to be sent to Korea but was turned said it lacked the power.

Bahr said he had a tiff with his girl in Windsor and figured he could win her affection back by buying her mother an expensive Christmas gift, he told police.

The man got the money from the bank by presenting a note to a cashier, warning that guns were pointing at her. He was caught shortly after leaving the bank.

NATO Leaders Agree Upon Use Of A-Weapons

PARIS (AP)—The military leaders of the Atlantic Alliance say they have agreed upon the use of atomic weapons in a revised strategic plan for the defence of Europe. The plan also included:

The possible use of West German and Tugaian armed forces.

A new naval command in the Mediterranean.

Gen. Charles Foulkes of Canada, chairman of the military committee of the 14-power North Atlantic Treaty Organization made these points at a press conference Thursday night.

He said the military chiefs also have agreed on the commander for the Mediterranean, after a two-year deadlock between Britain and the United States, but refused to give his name.

NATO sources said Admiral Lord Mountbatten, commander of British Mediterranean fleet, is slated for the job.

In disclosing that atomic weapons now figure in the Allies' new strategic plans, Foulkes pointed out that the United States is required by law to withhold from other nations its information on atomic developments.

But this "does not interfere with making military plans," he said. "We don't need to know what's inside them to say what they will do as a military weapon."

Lord Kemsley Sells Graphic

LONDON (AP)—Lord Kemsley has sold the London Daily Graphic to Associated Newspapers. Lord Rothermere's group, which owns the rival Daily Mail. The purchase price was not disclosed.

An announcement Thursday from Kemsley's organization said "The Sunday Graphic will continue to be published under its present ownership." It was understood production of the Sunday paper will be transferred to Rothermere's Manchester office.

The Graphic, with a standard-size format, and the small-sized Graphic are morning newspapers and pro-Conservative in their editorial policies. The Graphic has a circulation of about 780,000.

Rothermere's group will take over production of the Daily Graphic beginning Monday.

But, then, what do they know of council who do not hold a seat? What could our inexperience in municipal affairs contribute to the rule? Of the business men in the crowd, of the people themselves, only Hugh Maitland appeared to understand what Curly was up against in council. And so he approached Curly and showed a way out. As a means to raise money to pay for the walks, why not hold an old-fashioned dance in October?

"That's your say, when you first asked for council, Curly," Hugh pointed out. "You spoiled 'em by even mentioning sidewalks. You put yourself on the spot."

"Possibly I did," Curly agreed, "but that would not be so if matters had turned out as expected. However, now that you mention it, why not hold a dance? And I'll get some money out of the townships later, too."

"Then, you'll help put it over."

"I more certainly will, and we'll make it the best ever."

"By the way, Curly, how's the little white rooster these days?"

"He's behaving himself. He's been completely debunked."

"And I'd say the same for Bill Frost," Hugh added. "I see him quite often, and he's a changed man. If he'd only stop drinking that confounded wine, he'd soon sober up. He's drunk all the time."

"Wine!" Curly asked, "so, that's what it is."

Hugh Maitland came close to Curly Brown and lowered his voice. "Tell me, Curly, do you think Bill Frost is the Hood?"

"I—I don't know," he said. As it transpired later, he could not have given Hugh Maitland a better answer.

The old-fashioned dance to raise money to provide the Depot with sidewalks was held in the townships hall on Tuesday evening, October 1st.

That evening Curly left Ida Olmstead and Peter to keep Barney company, and, since Barney had developed lameness in his right front foot that day, he rode into the village on the back of Dandy, the chestnut stallion. It was nine o'clock ere he reached the hall and even then he had to force his way through the crowd to get inside.

The hall had been fittingly decorated. There were wide strips of bunting across the ceiling and British flags across the back wall. It was a clear, cool evening—an ideal night for revelry. The country roads were much better now than they had ever been. Hugh Maitland, as official greeter, was here, there, everywhere, making the folks welcome.

The evening's program started with the singing of "The Soldiers of the Queen," and "Britannia Rules the Waves" by the Hyatt sisters, their mother proudly playing the accompaniment on the old organ. Amid much applause, the girls took their seats, and fiddlers Bill Thompson and Joe O'Brien sat down to tune up. Hugh Maitland cleared the floor and called for the first set.

Curly, who had been doing his share of hand-shaking, took his stand by the door of a small dressing room to the left of the platform. A second door opened from the dressing room on to the stage. Tonight the dressing room was in inky darkness. All Curly could see in it was a shadowy shape of a table and a chair.

As a means of raising money for such a worthy purpose, the old time dance that October evening was a pronounced success—to the tune of close to one thousand dollars. Of the total, four hundred dollars in cash was tucked away for safe keeping in Hugh Maitland's pockets, the balance would be paid up by the donors as required later.

At midnight the dancers stopped for lunch and the older people left for their homes. As the evening wore on, the crowd thinned. By now the village dance was deserted, though here and there, lights shone in the houses to guide sons and daughters home.

By two o'clock, a tired Hugh Maitland conferred with a tired Curly Brown, decided to bring the dance to an end. Hugh strode to the fiddlers to tell them to play "Good Night, Ladies," while Curly, in the centre of the floor called, "Get your partners for the last dance everybody!"

The fiddlers started. Curly was about to start calling off for the set when the hall door slammed. He turned sharply and then, his eyes bulged. Girls screamed. A big man with a black hood, revolver in hand, was coming up the hall.

"Do what you're told, and no one will get hurt!" the man commanded gruffly. "Hands up everybody! Get over to the east wall and stay there." Then, looking at Curly, who alone remained, he demanded, "Who's got the money?"

"I have," Curly lied, "in my side pocket—left side."

"Hand it over," the Hood ordered.

"Help yourself," Curly said. "It's there for the taking." The Hood's gun was of heavy calibre. A slug from that gun would tear a big hole in a man's body. But for the moment that was of least importance. For Curly's eyes had lighted knowingly. For a thrilling moment, the two men faced each other, the Hood making his decision, Curly waiting.

"Well, do you want that money, or don't you?" Curly flared, "or are you waiting for Aaron Sweet to come in here?"

The Hood fell for it. He closed the gap between them, shifted the revolver from right hand to left, and was reaching into Curly's pocket when he jerked his hand away again. For at that moment the hall door slammed. The Hood jerked his eyes off Curly and then in that fleeting second, Curly's right hand cut him sharply across the left forearm. With a yelp of pain, the Hood pulled the trigger. There was a blinding flash as the bullet cut through the side of Curly's coat. The gun dropped from his hand and the Hood raced for the door, raced and—stopped.

Barring his exit, and a most formidable figure he appeared to be, was Billy Tough, a chair swinging menacingly over his head.

Once more the Hood turned and ran. He raced to the door of the hall, dived into the dressing room and jerked the door shut behind him. And Curly Brown had let him do that purposely. He looked at the hole in his coat, picked up the Hood's empty revolver, shouted to the men in the hall to close the stage door to the dressing room; and then, as if nothing had happened, he came forward.

"It's all right everybody," he said coolly, "we now have him where we can get him. Where's Hugh Maitland?"

Seconds later Curly was standing at the dressing room door and he was receiving Hugh Maitland's congratulations on his narrow escape. Hugh told him that he had sent Billy Tough to get Aaron Sweet out of bed.

"Hugh," Curly said soberly, "I want you to take off your coat—I've a job for you. I want you to go in there and bring the Hood out. If he won't come quietly, well then, just show him who's the boss around here."

"I'll go in, Mr. Brown," a tall, farm lad said pushing through the crowd.

"Thanks," Curly said, "but this is not for you."

"But — why not wait until Sweet comes—he'll have a gun," Hugh stalled.

"So have I a gun," Curly said, "But that's not the point. This is a job for you, Hugh—it's yours alone—"

"But—but—" Hugh stammered, "—I don't know who he is."

"For the moment, that doesn't mean a thing," Curly said, dropping a hand on Hugh's arm "Listen, Hugh, better get that coat off—" he gave Hugh a shake, "you must do what I tell you, see!"

Hugh Maitland gulped. His body shook with fear, beads of sweat stood out on his face. Suddenly he jerked himself erect, trembling, he started to peel off his coat.

"All right, Curly Brown," he spluttered crookedly, "I'm going to do what you say, but I know I'm not going to like it—watch that money in my coat."

Chalk River Atom Plant Evacuated, No One Injured

Giant Reactor Closed As Lethal Rays Escape

CHALK RIVER (CP) — Dangerous radiation from the plio-point break in Canada's atomic reactor forced evacuation of the atomic energy plant here Friday, Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, president of Atomic Energy of Canada, said today.

Dr. Mackenzie said he fears the atomic energy will be out of operation for two or three weeks.

The break, combined with peculiar atmosphere conditions around the 840,000,000 plant 140 miles north west of Ottawa, sent hundreds of 100 alarm bells in the plant. Some 350 workers were evacuated.

Clearing Plan

Today decontamination squads, equipped with goggles, rubber gloves, lead-soled shoes and rubberized clothing, moved in to clear the plant of radiation.

Mackenzie said similar breaks have occurred before, but the heavy overcast and humidity didn't give it a chance to move away from the plant as formerly.

Workers returned to the job as construction of a new reactor which was quickly decontaminated.

"We have had infrequent breaks in the pile before," Dr. Mackenzie said. "The break is a small hole, no larger than a pin point, through which comes radiation.

"It was picked up the estape stack but instead of dissipating into the atmosphere, swept back down in a down-draft over the plant pile."

Detectors Cover Plant

The atomic particles are capable of an instant and deadly penetration of lead absorbent by the human body. A series of detectors cover the plant area and detected the abnormal radiation instantly touching off alarms in all the plant's buildings.

The alarms, set to go off when radiation is at a comparatively low strength, are kept low to protection. Radiation can't be felt, seen or smelled.

"While not remotely comparable in effect, the radiation acted in this case much as would the atom mushroom cloud of an atomic bomb," Dr. Mackenzie said.

Pity the Poor Slave Laborer Among Britons

YEOVIL Somerset, England — (AP) — Listen to this Briton's story and try and guess what his job is.

"I work over 100 hours a week and after expenses have been deducted my salary works out at about two shillings an hour."

"Laborers and charwomen and cleaning women are better treated."

"Some people who hold the same job as myself are so poor they have had to give up smoking."

"We are whipped and dragooned and told to our job day after day."

"I often go from Monday morning to Friday without even seeing my two children."

"We have no time for business, family, sport, gardens, hobbies or anything else."

Any idea what kind of a job this pitiable guy holds? Well, he's a member of the House of Commons. The remarks were made Friday by Conservative Henry Price in a speech here.

Boxer Quits Ring, Is 'Disgusted'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bill Brewer, promising middleweight fighter, quit the professional ring because he was "disgusted" with a report of bribery in pro ranks.

He was joined by Tony Pacassa, who said: "From now on we'll stick to amateur boxing."

Sonny Jones, a 20-year-old Vancouver middleweight, lasted a third Thursday night he had a bribe offer—$5,000 "Christmas money" if he took a dive in the first round.

Jones said the offer was made Nov. 27 when he was training to meet Brenner. Brenner, however, was forced to withdraw because of an injured hand and Blackie Vandervoer of Aberdeen, Wash., was brought in as substitute. In the fight Thursday night, Jones took a 10-round decision.

The Vancouver athletic commission and police investigators are shocking Jones' claims.

Pacassa said he knew nothing about the alleged bribe offer.

New Legislation To be Introduced

TORONTO (CP)—Children's Aid regulations will be modernized in new legislation brought down in the legislature next spring, it is announced.

Welfare Minister Goodfellow said Friday he has appointed a committee of three to study existing legislation with a view to suggesting new legislation to change the law.

Appointed to the committee are Waldron A. Goof of Brantford, Andrew Frame of Hamilton and Dorothy Jackson of Ottawa.

300,000 TO SHRINE

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Some 300,000 pilgrims from all parts of Mexico visited the shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe, Mexico's patron, on her feast day Friday. First aid stations here reported a total of 43 of them for injuries suffering in making part of the pilgrimage on their knees.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP)—Synopsis — A slow moving low pressure area now scattering showers and flurries from the state of Maine will cause a southwesterly to northwesterly flow of cold air over all of Ontario today and Sunday. The edge of the snow area associated with this storm centre will pass today through near northeastern forecast regions today and Sunday. Elsewhere, mostly cloudy becoming windy today and Sunday, and will, sometimes be quite heavy in the Georgian bay belt. Temperatures will change little from those of the last day or two.

STATEMENT ENDS ANY THOUGHTS OF RECONCILIATION

Truman's Attitude Offends Eisenhower

HONOLULU (AP) — A reliable source today said President Truman's "demagoguery" statement on President-elect Eisenhower deeply and just about killed any chance of friendly relations between the two in the future.

This reaction was disclosed a short time before Eisenhower was to leave Hawaii for New York by plane — just two days after he left secretly for Korea.

The once-friendly relationship between Eisenhower and Truman, it was said, had been badly strained by accusations made during the heat of the presidential campaign—but the new Truman points to a still more formal relationship in the future.

This looks like the finish of any informal across the-desk meetings between the two," this source said. "If there is another meeting it probably will be a cold affair." Truman told a press conference Thursday that the Eisenhower trip to Korea was a "piece of politics demagoguery." It is known Eisenhower thinks this was a low blow and that it was unworthy of the President.

Since that meeting, Eisenhower has spent most of his time playing golf, resting and trying to shake a cold.

Court Dilemma As Jury Admits Wrong Verdict

OTTAWA (CP) — A jury said it made a mistake in writing its verdict in a damage action. As a result, the plaintiff may receive only $50 damages instead of about $200.

In its written award Thursday the jury ordered Mrs. Ethel Warren of St. McCulloch, 80 per cent responsible for a collision and the Ottawa Transportation Commission 20 per cent. Total damages were about $250.

After County Judge J. F. Madden recorded the verdict and dismissed the jurors, he was informed by a court constable that actually they had meant their finding to be the other way round — Mr. McCulloch 20 per cent and the OTC 80 per cent. The judge nodded said he never before faced a similar situation.

The jurors then went back to the next step. Some thought an application for a new trial would be made. Others thought an appeal would straighten out the tangle.

Judge Sets Hearing

HAMILTON (CP)—The extradition hearing for two men charged with the murder of a Buffalo, N.Y., jeweller and robbery of his wife was set for Jan. 16 by Mr. Justice Gale Friday.

Maurice O'Dell, 27, and Walter Griffin, 28, both of Hamilton, were captured Thursday and held on vagrancy charges by Hamilton police. Buffalo police and FBI officers co-operated.

Search for missing Ralph Grubisih, 33, of Windsor, third man wanted in connection with the murder-robbery.

The two men were formally charged Friday with the murder of Donald Hurd and armed robbery of Hurd's wife and two other persons.

CHILD DROWNED

BRANTFORD (CP)—Rain-swollen waters of the Grand river Friday claimed the life of three year-old Susan Turton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turton, whose home is approximately 100 yards from the river in West Brantford. Susan and her brother, Stephen, 5, were making mud pies beside the river when the little girl slipped into the high muddy water. The body has not been recovered.

$100,000 Asked for Gall Bladder Mistake After Surgeon Admits Mistake

DETROIT (AP) — Mrs. Stella Rozwadi 35, sued a surgeon for $100,000 for removing a thing that he removed set gall bladder when he was supposed only to repair her uterus.

The suit was filed against Dr. Roland E. Lynch of St. Clair Shores.

Mrs. Rozwadi said she suffered a bad injury April 17 while working a punch press in a factory and was taken to hospital.

The woman's lawyer, John J. Fitzgerald, said she was relieved from gall bladder trouble. Since it was removed, he added, she has had to take medicine daily and go on a rigid diet.

Dr. Lynch gave this explanation: "I was scheduled to perform a gall bladder operation that morning on a woman referred to me by another doctor. She was not my patient although I had examined her once previously.

"Through an error, hospital attendants brought in the right chart but the wrong patient.

"The operation was half completed before the error was discovered. I closed the incision right back the, so I completed the operation. I was assisted by the two other surgeons who had discovered the error, then repaired the injured hand."

Re-distribution of Land Among Chinese Peasants Master Communist Stroke

By Gerard Filion

When you return from a three-week trip to China, you are immediately asked simple questions like, "when will the revolution break out in China? Will Chiang Kai-shek soon invade the continent?"

Even if you had spent your entire life in China you would be hard put to answer such complex questions. It is, therefore, unlikely that a newspaperman who only passed through the country could have the answers.

Mao-tse-tung's government is the first one to have unified the country, restored order and thrown the foreigners out.

In 1842, the British, backed by cannon fire, forced the emperor to open Chinese ports to western traders, with special emphasis on the opium traffic. There followed a long series of political and economic agreements between the Middle Empire and the Western Powers. All of them were humiliating and dishonorable for the Chinese government. These agreements were called the Unfair Treaties. At one time even the Chinese Customs Commission was headed by an Englishman. Chinese territory was split up into zones of influence and the Western Powers took over the control of the ports, calling them "concessions."

PERIOD OF ANARCHY

The overthrow of the Manchu dynasty in 1911 was the signal for a period of anarchy, revolution and acts of violence. The Chinese Republic, even under Chiang Kai-shek, never succeeded in unifying the country.

Since 1949, China has had a central government with authority over the whole country except Formosa which is still in Chiang's hands; Hong Kong and Macao which are British and Portuguese colonies in the south, and Port Arthur and Darien which are occupied by the Russians in the Petchili Gulf in the north.

The present government has every intention of occupying the rest of the country as soon as it is strong enough.

The Chinese, whether they are Communists or not, are very proud of their strong central government.

It has proved itself able to keep order at home and to maintain the honor of China outside the country's borders. They don't hide the fact that they are pleased to have foreigners have thrown out and that China is being run by Chinese.

LAND FOR THE PEASANTS

Mao-tse-tung's master stroke was his rapid adoption of land reform and his handing over of the land to the peasants.

China is essentially an agricultural country. Almost 400 million Chinese earn their living directly from the soil. But before the Communist revolution, 80 per cent of the peasants did not own the land they cultivated. It was owned by nobles, speculators and money-lenders who extracted ruinous rents and kept the peasants in the most utter misery.

For First Time Canada Will Have a 'Queen of Canada'

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada, for the first time in her history, will have a "Queen of Canada."

Her name was made known Friday night in announcements from Ottawa and London which said Queen Elizabeth II has given royal sanction to the formula for Commonwealth countries.

Canada will recommend adoption of the Canadian form of her title when she attends the prime ministers' conference in London.

Previously she was known as "Queen of the British dominions beyond the seas," a title which Queen Victoria in 1876 changed to Empress of India.

The new Canadian form of title: Elizabeth the Second, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom, Canada and her other realms and territories, queen, head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

The present form reads:

Her most excellent Majesty Elizabeth the Second, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British dominions beyond the seas, Queen, Defender of the Faith."

Take Earlier Form

The Ottawa announcement said the Commonwealth countries concerned agreed to take early action to obtain constitutional approval for the changes.

Friday's title will involve an amendment to legislation passed in 1947 when India became a republic but stayed within the Commonwealth.

It is then expected that royal proclamations will be issued simultaneously in all Commonwealth countries giving effect to the changes.

The new form drops the term "dominion," following a recent practice in which the term in official government documents use the simple designation "Canada." It also refers to the mother country as "the United Kingdom" instead of "Great Britain."

The main Commonwealth powers not using the term are carrying among themselves, but all agreed to recognize Elizabeth as head of the Commonwealth. India, as a republic, recognizes her only as not head but as Queen.

British, Canada, Australia and New Zealand will retain the traditional religious references in the title, which say she is Queen "by the grace of God" and "Defender of the Faith," a phrase adopted when Protestantism became the official religion of Britain under King Henry VIII.

India, Pakistan, Ceylon and South Africa, however, drop these references.

In Britain, the Queen's new title will be:

Elizabeth the Second, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other realms and territories, Queen, head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

More Federal Aid for Highways Being Sought

TORONTO (CP)—Increased federal aid for highway construction was proposed by two officials of the Canadian Automobile Association.

The government already is sharing with the provinces the cost of constructing the Trans-Canada highway.

Richard A. Stapells, honorary president of the CAA and H. B. Bishop, president of the Ontario Motor League, Friday suggested the extension of aid. In addressed to the association's 39th annual convention, they also protested against the heavy excise and sales taxes on automobiles.

Mr. Stapells, native of London, Ont., was elected president.

RAIL BUILDER DIES

TORONTO (CP)—Chilion Longley Hervey, 85, pioneer railroad builder in Canada, died Friday. A native of Paris, Ill., he was associated with his father, Robert G. Hervey, a railroad builder in the United States. Mr. Hervey was a contractor in the construction of the Canadian Northern Railroad between Toronto, Que., was named in his honor.

GROWING SCOPE GOVT. ACTIVITIES IS DANGEROUS

—Balcom

Liberal Says Expansion Trend Can Go too Far

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal member of Parliament has spoken out about the dangers he sees in the growing scope of government activities.

The warning came Friday in the Commons from Sam Balcom, 64-year-old member for Halifax and owner of a drug-store chain. He said Parliament is very real danger that the organizicist trend of government "will go too far."

The more activity brought under government control, he said, "the nearer we come to the socialist form of control."

He felt the expansion was a sign of the times. But over-zealous public servants might undertake things better performed by private—in the field of research, for instance, where he felt unnecessary duplication than government agencies could do much good work through foundations.

Criticizes Centralization

He also criticized centralization of industry in Canada and Canadian car manufacturers engaged in "cut-throat" competition in their "gratitude" by shipping cars through United States ports. He thought there should not be so much difference in Canadian and American prices of automobiles.

Mr. Balcom said there should be tariff cuts on television sets so they can be widely distributed for Canadian use.

Mr. Balcom's speech in the throne speech debate touched off a flurry between two British Columbia members over Commonwealth trade. E. Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) said the reported success of the London prime ministers' conference indicated it should have been called three years ago, as urged by his party.

Fisheries Minister Sinclair countered Mr. Fulton's argumentation as far as the success of the London conference is concerned. He said he will wait until Monday when Prime Minister St. Laurent is expected to make a report on it to the Commons.

Prime Minister Home

The prime minister arrived in Ottawa by air from London Friday night shortly after the Commons rose for the week-end.

Earlier in the day George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, accused the defence department of being in control of civil defence because it has not produced the Currie report on army handling of stores, promised as an early return.

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) urged immediate repeal of a law by which the provinces collect income taxes from the estates of old age pensioners who die leaving estates of more than the ages of 65 and 70.

Rev. Ernest Bolt, M.P. heard a sermon on Social Credit from Rev. E. G. Hansell, (SC—McLeod) who engineered Social Credit victories in Alberta by British Columbia.

Mr. Bolt was an observer of the Christian Church, said Social Credit ers had been using biblical phrases in their campaign. He attended services in Ottawa on two Sundays for years and no one was going to "starve" from the effects of social credit. They did not claim a monopoly on religion, but Social Credit beliefs were based on Christianity.

In the trade scrap Mr. Fulton said the country was entitled to the prime ministers' conference in London contracts with which Canada had nothing to do. He usefulness of such a meeting. As late as last June Prime Minister Abbott had to be littled the possible value of such a conference which Conservatives advocated.

10 Storm Deaths As Northern N.Y., New England Hit

Two Feet of Snow Cut Power, Clog Highways

NEW YORK (AP) — Northern New York and New England struggled today to dig out from under heavy snowstorms which cost 10 lives and cut off power and telephone service in many communities.

It still was snowing early today in upstate New York, where state police said it was two feet high in places. Snowplow service was reported "hit or miss," with secondary roads clogged and crews battling to keep main highways open.

New England, with most of the 10 reported fatalities due to high wet accidents, had a foot of snow Friday in northern Vermont while 3.96 inches of rain deluged eastern and central Maine and northern New Hampshire.

The weather bureau predicted clear and cold for southern New England today, with more snow and cold in the northern section.

Heavy rains added woes to upper New York's Salmon river and Black river lowlands. The Salmon river was reported early today at high flood level even though it had receded five feet. The Black river reached five crestings between Carthage and Lyons Falls alone.

Maine Seaport Partly Razed In $1,000,000 Blaze

ROCKLAND, Me. (AP) — Two hotels and 16 other business establishments were wiped out in a $1,000,000 fire at this old seaport Friday night.

The spectacular, wind - driven blaze destroyed 10 wooden buildings. Four others, housing eight more businesses, were damaged.

A dozen families, living in apartments over some of the stores, were left homeless.

Firemen battled the flames. They were part of a fire force mobilized from 10 communities. They came from as far away as Bangor, 50 miles north of here. A northeast wind that blew up to 40 miles an hour spread the flames through the business district mile through the air, but were fought by this.

"If it hadn't been for the rain," said city council chairman Carl Ames, "the whole area might have gone."

The hotels which were the Rockland, with 53 rooms, and the 10-room Bayview.

Nearly 75 persons escaped safely from the 3½-storey Rockland. Many of them were guests of night clerk Frank Bridges with getting them out safely. Bridges himself escaped by jumping from a window.

Open Verdict Returned

KIRKPATRORVILLE (CP) — An open verdict was returned by a coroner's jury Friday night which investigated the death of Mrs. Ann Taylor, 64-year-old Bayham township farmer, found dead in the burned ruins of her home Nov. 18.

Dr. W. F. Luney of London, provincial pathologist who performed a post-mortem, said Taylor's injuries were so extensive it was impossible they did not occur at one time. He said the injuries were not consistent with being run over by an automobile more than once.

Former U.S. Intelligence Officer Is Caught With Top Secret Files

BERLIN (AP) — A former U.S. Army intelligence agent in Europe for the past year has been caught with thousands of top secret files, an American military spokesman said.

The spokesman identified the man as Martin W. Monath, 31, of Brooklyn, N.Y. in the Berlin army stockade since Aug. 2.

Rothkirch, a naturalized Amerl can born in Belgium, was an army lieutenant during the war and later a civilian attached to military intelligence in Berlin. He left the army last February this year to go as a tourist and settled down as a partner in a business in the U. S. zone.

U. S. officials told this story: Army agents checking Rothkirch's

Leaning Tower Is Still Good For 150 Years

PISA, Italy (AP) — Getting worried the leaning tower of Pisa might fall before you are able to visit it?

Don't do this year's final examination of the tower's steadily increasing tilt, public works director Edmondo Nasanti announced.

"There is no immediate danger it will fall."

The tower's slant is increasing at the same rate as recorded for the last 25 years. At that rate, it will not topple for another 150 years, experts predict.

The 700-year-old tower now leans 18 feet out of line.

CONTRACT AWARDED TO COBRIN LOCK

A contract for the supply of brass padlocks amounting to $22,580 has been awarded by the federal government under the department of national defence production, to the Corbin Lock Company. Announcement of the contract was made by Frank S. Fulwell, M.P. for Hastings South.

FOUR NEW CASES DURING WEEK

Along with the six cases of scarlet fever, reported for the week in the city by the local health department, the medical officer, reported four other cases of communicable disease.

During this past week, one case of mumps, one case of German measles and two cases of infectious hepatitis have occurred. The number of communicable illnesses acquired in a period of a week, may seem great in number, however, Dr. Donald advises, with the cold weather now arrived it is not unnatural for the incidence of these mild diseases to rise.

Don W. Kingdon Named Manager Of the C of C

The appointment of Donald W. Kingdon, of Peterborough, as secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, with duties to commence the first of next year, was announced today by John Buchan, president of the local chamber.

He succeeds James T. Davis, who had resigned his position, the resignation to take effect December 31st.

Mr. Kingdon comes to Belleville after a year as assistant secretary-manager of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce. He was born in the Lift-Lock city and was educated there. He is a veteran of the last war, having served as a wireless operator air gunner both in Canada and overseas.

DONALD W. KINGDON,

Following his discharge from the air force he took a business course and then went to work with the Victoria and Grey Trust and Savings Company, and in 1948 became manager of the Kingdon Barrel Company.

He is a graduate of the Canadian Institute of Board and Chamber Secretaries, McMaster University; is a director of the Peterborough Film Council, and the Red Cross Board of Stewards of George Street United Church in Peterborough.

He is married with two children.

Undrawn Turkeys Sell for 60 Cents Pound on Market

Christmas turkeys made their first appearance in volume on the local produce market this morning with farmers quoting a flat price of 60 cents per pound regardless of size. The price quoted was for undrawn turkeys, farmers noting it was still too early to offer drawn birds.

The offering of Christmas trees took up a good portion of the outdoor market as nearly two dozen vendors were seen with truck or trailer loads of evergreens. Prices ranged from 50 cents up to $2 each.

Egg prices remained at last week's quotation of 45 cents for Grade, 40 for mediums and 35 for pullets. A few ducks were offered at 60 cents per pound while chickens ranged from 45 cents for mature birds to 55 for capons.

Potatoes sold at $2.75 per bag; parsnips were 30 cents the half peck, carrots sold up to 25 cents for the same quantity and cooking onions were 75 cents per basket.

Sauerkraut brought 25 cents per quart.

Top grade Delicious apples sold at 5 per basket with hamper lots at $4.25. Kossets and McIntosh were at 25 cents per basket; Spys were 30 cents and $4 per hamper; Talman Sweets and Greens were 50 cents per basket.

Pickerel sold at 40 cents per pound; perch were 25 and suckers 15 cents per pound.

Pork by the quarter brought 30 cents per pound for fronts and 35 for hinds.

Tribute Paid to George Foster By CNR Associates and Officials At 'Farewell' Party at Yacht Club

They called him the "FBI", "Sherlock Holmes" without a "Watson", and they dubbed him "Intelligence" and "Private Eye."

But Canadian National Railway members from the top brass to the water boy, forgot their levity for an evening and paid laudable and verbal tribute to a retiring associate at a grand "farewell" party held at the Belleville Yacht Club last night.

He is George Foster, who relinquishes his position as special agent of the railway as of last night.

There was no doubt as to the popularity of Mr. Foster. After all, the railway "brass" does not travel hundreds of miles just to say good-bye to a fellow worker. And thirty-two years of faithful, efficient service in the investigation department do merit some sort of recognition. And George received it, and got it.

Furse Presented.

The tangible appreciation was a purse of money. Nor was Mrs. Foster forgotten. The blushing "Missus" was introduced to the "boys" and presented with a beautiful bouquet of red roses.

Mr. R. R. Wilson, superintendent of the Belleville division, made the presentation, while Jack McElrath acted as master of ceremonies. Brief addresses and congratulatory appreciation were voiced by Mr. Wilson, K. Chadwick, chief of investigation department, Toronto; George W. Clasper, vice-president of the Canadian National Railways Athletic Association; E. Thomas, special agent, Stratford; O.P.P. Inspector A. McDougall, Belleville, and Police Chief Walter Fenden.

Present to do honor to a railway associate were besides Superintendent Wilson, C. E. Shaver, assistant superintendent; J. E. Kyle, signals supervisor; H. G. McKay, roadmaster; L. J. Paton, chief dispatcher; M. Button, storekeeper; D. Bothwell, assistant roadmaster; C. Hamilton, assistant B. and B. Master; C. A. Joynt, agent; W. Cook, yard and press agent and S. Halbert, frog shop supervisor, all of Belleville.

Out of town guests were K. Chadwick, chief clerk, Toronto; G. Walton, police sergeant, GNR, Brockville; L. C. Stewart, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Montreal; J. Fenton, constable, agent, Stratford; R. L. Gilligan agent, Napanee; J. Morrison, detective, Trenton and constables R. Higbem, Oshawa and R. C. Hearn, Napanee.

Joined Department in 1920

Mr. Foster joined the investigation department of the railway back in October, 1920. He was stationed at Oshawa and remained there until March, 1936. He was transferred to Belleville and remained here as a constable for the next ten years. In May, 1938, he was sent to Kingston where he remained for the next two years.

His efficiency was rewarded with a promotion to assistant special agent and he was transferred to Montreal, Quebec, where he remained until August, 1940. From there he went to Stratford after being elevated to the status of special agent and he stayed there for the next seven years when he was transferred to Belleville. He has remaining here up to his retirement.

During his tenure of office here Mr. Foster devoted practically all of his spare time to the organization and training of the Belleville Canadian National Railways Athletic Association. He succeeded the first president, Allan Meagher, and has the finding that office for the last three years. Recently he was the unanimous choice of the executive as its president for a fourth term. It was mainly through his efforts, that the present splendid CNRAA Recreation Field and Playground came into being.

Happy Association

Following the presentations last night, Mr. Foster visibly moved, said the association given him made a brief address of appreciation. Late he said, "after 32 years of association with the employees of the CNR, I find it hard to fold up and say myself as one of the 'has-beens'. My association with the employees has been most happy. No matter how tough was the going, somebody always came up with a laugh."

Mr. Foster said that one "of his ambitions was "to make friends, and I know I have succeeded in doing so. That is evidenced by the turnout here tonight."

Another ambition, he said, was to do a good honest job for the company. "This," he went on, "I have tried to do and I can look my fellow employees in the eye and call them my friends."

"To my many associates on the railway, the CNRAA and fellow officers of the investigation department with whom I have been associated for so many years, and to a host of other friends, I wish to say 'thank you' from my heart, not only for this grand reception and tribute, but for the many kind acts over a period of years. I hope to be around for some time to help appreciate my friends in my leisure hours."

Santa Unable To Accept Any More Phone Calls

Put that telephone down, kids. Santa Claus won't be on the other end of the line.

The old gent originally had made plans to be at City Hall every night until December 20 to answer calls from his young friends. The first night he got 160, and for the three nights he was in town over 1,500 calls were received.

But he dropped into the Ontario Intelligencer this morning, holding his ears, and announced that he simply is unable to accept any more phone calls as he had to return to the North Pole. Muttered something about business.

He won't be back until December 25.

The recreation commission, who had Santa coming to town, wishes to thank the Bell Telephone Company for their assistance in helping the little kiddies talk to Santa.

Escapes Injury In Car Mishap

Twenty - four-year - old Wallace MacDonald of 175 MacLenan Avenue, escaped serious injury on Thursday afternoon, when his car went out of control after leaving Highway 2 on the Dundas road a few miles south of Campbellford.

MacDonald was travelling north, on the roadway leading to Victoria Street. He was about to come over a hill and met another car travelling south. He turned to the right, missing the oncoming car, but lost control of the steering of his car, clipped off a hydro pole and came back onto the highway. There he was forced to swerve to the right side of the car.

Provincial Constable George Rose of Campbellford investigated. No charges have been laid.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE KERR

Marmora — Sarah E. Smith, beloved wife of George Kerr, passed away at her residence in Marmora at 7.30 a.m. on Thursday following an illness of some months. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Smith and was born fifty-five years ago in Marmora Township. To all her friends she was known before her marriage as Sadie Smith, and most of her life was spent in Marmora village. Like her husband, she was greatly interested in the affairs of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora. She had many years of membership in the Ladies' Guild and when the W.A. organized in the parish a few years ago became one of its original members. She is survived by her husband and four children: Kenneth, Toronto; Stanley, Marmora; Mrs. Gordon Devlin (Margaret), of Belleville, and Mrs. Jack Barnhart (Kathleen), Campbellford. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Ezra Arnold (Margaret), Belleville.

The funeral took place on Saturday, leaving her late residence at 2.20 for St. Paul's Church, where service was conducted by Rev. M. Bowman. Interment was made in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

WILLIAM OSCAR SPRING

William Oscar Spring, 201 Victoria Avenue, died at his residence this Saturday morning. He was in his 65th year.

Born in Desoronto, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George William Spring, the deceased had lived in Belleville for the past 25 years. Previously he had resided in Ottawa.

Surviving are, the former Ellie Green, he is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Norman (Jean) Mariatt, of Cardinal; Miss Corinne, of Toronto; two sons, Donald A. M. Spring, George William, of Belleville; one brother-in-law, Roy Green, of Toronto and four grandchildren.

Before his retirement in 1948, the deceased had been an engineer for the C.N.R. for 42 years. Previously he had served for the old Canadian Northern Railway.

He was a member of Bridge Street United Church. B. of R.E., Div. 1, Belleville and the I.O.O.F. lodges, also of Desoronto.

Resting at the Dolan Funeral Home the funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this issue.

MISS EVELYN ISABELLA CRONK

Ill for only a short time, Miss Evelyn Isabella Cronk, 216 Albert Street, died Friday at her home at 4.30 p.m. Born in Frie, 1890 Snowdon Ave., Toronto.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Cronk. she had lived in the city all her life where she had worked at the Purvis, Payne and Arnott law office.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Ethel Ray of Belleville and Mrs. E. A. (Ruth) Frise, Toronto.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

LATE FRANCIS REID
(Contributed)

Funeral services for the late Francis Reid, Holloway, were held Tuesday at Sidney Baptist Church where service was conducted by Rev. Neil Hall, Rector of St. Mary's, assisted by Rev. Harold Giffin of Foxboro. Rev. L. K. Daniel, Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville, gave a heartening and comforting message to the family.

Miss Doreen Groves, Belleville, sang the hymn "Beyond the Sunset." The committal service at Griffin Cemetery was conducted by Mr. Daniel.

The funeral was largely attended, the church being unable to accommodate the number of community friends paying a last tribute to a popular young community and church worker. Francis was an active member of the church and was secretary treasurer of both the Sunday School and B.Y.P.U.

There were many floral tributes, including a lovely wreath from the community. As a permanent memorial to Francis, the community will present a revised version pulpit Bible to the church.

The bearers were Floyd McInnis, Douglas Prest, Everett Reid, Kenneth Stone, Don McInnis and Kenneth Groves.

Police to Clamp Down Hard On Double Parking

City police will clamp down hard on motorists who persist in double parking in the downtown section of the city.

Approval for stern action on the part of the local police department to stamp out double parking was given by members of the local traffic and light committee of city council at their meeting held this week.

Considerable discussion on the problem was heard at the meeting. It was admitted that double parking added considerably to traffic congestion.

A report by Inspector C. Hayes regarding the proposed traffic light in front of the new fire hall at the eastern entrance to the city was approved and the police commission will be requested to place the cost of the light in their 1953 budget. Cost of the traffic light will be $1,500.

The board of works will fill in and level parking lots on the west side of Front Street before the freeze-up.

IN MEMORIAM

DOOLITTLE. — In remembrance of darling Mother, who died one year ago December 15, 1951.

The love we had for you no touch can see,
We little thought the end was near;
And only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.
Sadly missed by Marjorie.

We are not dead, we are not sleeping,
But still within our aching hearts
We nurture you, dearest Doolittle.
We gave no one a last farewell,
We said good bye to no one,
The sorrow of the heart is deep.
Our love for you was good.
But God loved you best and took you home.
—Lovingly remembered, Mother. D13

DOOLITTLE. — In loving memory of a dear brother, Bevan Doolittle, who passed away, December 13, 1931.
To one we loved we bade farewell,
To miss us was to suffer.
His loss we well always regret,
But God has claimed you ever remembered by sister Marguerite and family. D13

Belleville in The Year 1860

The following information was obtained from the directory of the County of Hastings, first volume, printed in the year 1860 by Mackenzie Rowell and deals with the town of Belleville and the County of Hastings. The material was selected and prepared for publication by Mr. A. V. G. Trusdell, former postmaster of this city. This is the last of a series of articles dealing with the early history of Belleville.

* * *

The publisher in presenting the first volume of the Hastings directory to the public did not deem it necessary to say much in way of preface. Considerable difficulty had been experienced in collecting and arranging a list of short 10,000 names and it would not be strange if some inaccuracies have occurred. No pains had been spared either in its compilation or correction to make it as complete and perfect as possible.

The thanks of the publisher were due to the business men of both town and county, who by both subscriptions and advertisements had so literally patronized the work and he confidently hoped it would not fall short of their expectations.

A complete list of residents giving street addresses (there were no numbers on houses at this time) also concessions and lot numbers were arranged in alphabetical order covered the town of Belleville, Elzevir township, the village of Frankford, Hastings in the township of Madoc about 28 miles north from Belleville. Rungerford township, the location of Hungerford contains 546 lots of lands in farms of 200 acres, altogether equal to 109,200 acres, a very large portion of which is well adapted for the raising of grain.

The population of the township in 1859 was 5,000, the last census it was 3,124, and its population in 1860 was about 8,162. Tweed is the name of the principal village of Hungerford. The population was from 270 to 500.

The township of Huntingdon is situated in the north Riding of the township, bounded on the north by Madoc, on the south by Thurlow, on the east by Hungerford, and on the west by Rawdon. The population in 1859 was only 690, at the last census it was 3,548 and in 1860 about 3,900.

The township of Lake is in the rear of Marmora to which it is connected for municipal purposes. The directory said, "It is filling up with a rapid increase in population and will doubtless, in a few years, be erected into a separate municipality."

The township of Madoc to which were formerly united Elzevir and Tudor or, both of which are now separate municipalities. It was termed "one of the best townships in the County. In addition to being a good agricultural County, Madoc possesses some of the most valuable beds of minerals. The iron ore of Madoc has been pronounced by the highest authority, inferior to no other in the world, but the mines have not yet been worked to their full extent. The population of the township in 1859 was 186 and is now (1860) about 3,000.

Iron Deposits Found

The township of Marmora is situated in the North Riding. This township attracted early attention from the immense deposits of iron ore found within its borders. Works were established on a large scale by Mr. Hays who had been accustomed to manage similar business in the King's Dockyards, in England. A large amount of money was expended, but little or no judgment was exercised. The roads to the market were in almost an impassable condition, which together with bad management, brought ruin to the parties who had undertaken to work the mines.

The same management continued in successive undertakings, but there was no doubt, with judicious and economical management, these beds of iron ore could be worked profitably and of great advantage to the public generally.

Specimens of iron ore from these mines were sent to London and Paris World Exhibitions and were pronounced by the judges to be of the greatest quality for which diplomas were given. (Now, in the year 1952, the above statements have been proven, as this same property has been taken over by an American Interest.) Marble may be obtained in any quantity in the township and of an excellent quality. There are many kinds of marble, ranging from pure white to green veined and black with yellow veins, grey and red, and in fact, nearly every shade of marble which can be mentioned. The population of Marmora in 1839 was 369, and in 1860 about 1,130.

Sparsely Settled

The township of Rawdon is situated immediately north of Sidney. In this township is located the village of Stirling, now incorporated. The township was only sparsely settled when the township of Marmora by its great mineral wealth, was brought immediately into view. The population of the entire township, (village included) in the year 1857 was 1,067. The last census was 2,097 and now, in the year 1860, it was 2,400.

The village of Shannonville is located in the township of Tyendinaga, about a mile from the shore of the bay. It contained about 113 dwellings and had a population of about 700. There was a large flouring mill with three runs of stone, a sawmill containing 81 upright saws and one circular saw owned by the Messrs. Wallbridge, and two tanneries located on the north common, a large stream which passed through the village and empties into the Bay of Quinte.

Shannonville had three churches, Church of England, Episcopal and Wesleyan Methodist, one common school with 80 scholars and an average attendance of 100 pupils, four general stores, two groceries, one grocery, blacksmith and tin shop, plus other places of business.

The township of Sidney is bounded on the north by the township of Rawdon, on the east by Thurlow, on the south by the Bay of Quinte, and on the west by the River Trent and the township of Murray. There are also many recessions, and in the fifth concession is the thriving village of Frankford. The mill facilities in the village were numerous and most of them were capable of flouring and saw mills, woollen factories and carding. There is one of the oldest settlements in the county, "and anyone passing through it, would observe that it is somewhat behind the well cultivated farms and substantial dwellings and commodious barns that the farmers, generally, are opulent. The soil is fertile and highly productive. The statistics are as follows: Present population, 3,390, (1860). Last census was 2,574. In 1839 it was only 3,705, showing a steady increase."

After the meeting closed the hostess served refreshments.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

MATCHING THE SNOW

City dwellers are surprised when they find a white bird, and they may be, because few come near populated areas. There, in dull, drab surroundings they would be conspicuous. That Mother Nature avoids, although there are a very small number of albinos. This "mistakes," as easily spotted, might happen in any species.

The snowy owl, however, puts in an appearance every few years, visiting the dumps in subarctic rats and mice for lemmings, a rapid food in the Arctic. The plumage varies considerably, often immaculate but some individuals are so flecked with black as to look slightly grey, Northern relatives of our ruffed grouse, the ptarmigans, are naturally found only in wooded country. They change their costumes according to the season, matching the snow in winter.

As for song birds, the snow buntings show most white. Although wearing patches of black and rust color, when flying overhead only white is seen. Breeding in the far north, they travel south to us in winter in large flocks. On finding fine seeds protruding from the snow, down they flost, thus earning for themselves the name "Snowbird." Others dumps in subarctic rats and mice for lemmings, a rapid food in the Arctic. Another common land bird, the gyrfalcon, has what is known as a white "gyrfalcon" that is, a white head broad there may be one baby that turns out to be black, one baby grey and a third positively white. Nobody seems to understand why. They are very large hawks which breed in the Arctic and on rare occasions visit Ontario.

Perhaps the reason why there are more snowy owls this year is because they are inconspicuous against snow. Bright water and pale blue sky. The first disappearing whooping crane, 50 inches long, is all white except the wing tips. Similarly marked is the whistling swan, but more than half that size, and Ross' goose, smaller yet. Two pure white birds called the Arctic White and the Little White, and the juvenile little blue heron, also immaculate, seldom enter Canada from the United States.

Strangely enough, just in its second year is the glaucous gull, known as the ivory gull, that is almost cream color, and later on becomes a pale grey mantle. On the other hand, the ivory gull of the Arctic is entirely white only when about 3 years old. The most spectacular white birds are the adult swans. The whistling swan is 42 inches in length, the trumpeter, the largest bird found in Canada, is 60 inches.

U.S. DEBT IS RECORD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal, state and local governments had a record-breaking indebtedness of about $260,000,000,000 on June 30, the commerce department reported Thursday. This is about $1,839 for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

Soldiers of Christ, Arise

Soldiers of Christ, arise, and put your armor on,
Strong in the strength which God supplies
Thro' His eternal Son;
Strong in the Lord of Hosts, and in His mighty pow'r,
Who in the strength of Jesus trusts,
Is more than conqueror.

Stand then in His great might,
with all His strength endued;
But take, to arm you for the fight,
the panoply of God;
That having all things done, and all your conflicts past,
Ye may o'ercome, thro' Christ alone, and stand entire at last.

Soldiers of Christ, lay hold on faith's victorious shield;
Armed with that adamant and gold, be sure to win the field;
If faith surround your heart,
Satan shall be subdued;
Repelled is every fiery dart, and quenched with Jesus' blood.

Jesus hath died for you, what can
His love withstand?
Believe, hold fast your shield,
and who shall pluck you from His hand?
Believe that Jesus reigns; all power to Him is given;
Believe, till freed from sin's remains;
Believe yourselves to heaven.

When Charles Wesley first announced this hymn he gave it the title, "The Whole Armor of God."

Bible lovers, scanning its stanzas, will see at once that the song is built upon the scriptural text in Ephesians 6:11 — "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand the wiles of the devil." It was published by the author in a volume of "Hymns and Sacred Poems," in 1749.

"Soldiers of Christ, Arise" has become one of the most popular of Christendom's "battle hymns." Like "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," "Brightly Gleams Our Banner," "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus", and a host of others, it pictures the Christian life as a never-ending crusade against the forces of evil.

His music was written by Sir Arthur J. Rivey, a distinguished eighteenth century English musician. Sir Arthur, a native of Canterbury, England, was honored with a doctor of music degree by the University of York, and served for nearly a half century —from 1835 to 1883—as organist of St. George Royal Chapel at Windsor.

Wesley will always be remembered as Methodism's sweetest singer but his hymns are sung and cherished today by Christians of every denomination. Hymns like "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing My Soul," and "A Charge to Keep I Have" are as dear to Presbyterians, Baptists and Congregationalists as they are to Wesleyans, and the whole world thrills each year to the music and message of his beautiful Christmas hymn:

"Hark, the herald angels sing
Glory to the newborn king;
Peace on earth, and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled."

Joyful, all ye nations, rise,
Join the triumph of the skies;
With angelic hosts proclaim,

MOUNTAIN VIEW WI.

The December meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Stanley Barber with a large attendance, the president Mrs. L. Wallbridge presiding.

Most interesting "Current Events" were given by Mrs. William Nightingale.

The members were honored to have with them at this meeting, Mrs. Wanamaker, the district president, who gave an interesting and inspiring message.

Mrs. Allan Wallbridge read an appropriate Christmas reading.

A special Christmas collection was taken to be donated to some worthy cause.

After the meeting closed the hostess, assisted by several ladies, served refreshments and all enjoyed a social chat.

A HAPPY DECISION

The break with tradition which has been agreed to by the Coronation Committee in London in satisfying public demand for television viewing of a large part of the historic ceremony is hailed in Britain and it finds enthusiastic approval in many sections of Canada and the United States.

While television is still new to all but a few Canadians, and to most Americans, it has been an accepted thing in British life since the late 1930's. The public clamor for TV showing of the Coronation was met at first with forthright refusal by the committee. It was regarded by many as a vulgar and undignified proposal.

The demand persisted, however, and the weight of argument was soon shown to be all on the side of accepting the innovation. For centuries newspapers have described the ceremonies in print. Recently, films newsreel cameras have recorded them, and the last Coronation was carried all over the world by radio.

Of particular interest here is the more recent announcement that the United States TV networks plan to broadcast the Coronation spectacle within 24 hours of its recording. No doubt the CBC is making similar arrangements for a large majority of Canadian TV audiences depend on U.S. channels.

The result is that in most sections of southern Ontario, many Canadians at home will have a better view of the whole colorful scene along the route of the procession, and of most of the solemn ceremonies in Westminster Abbey, than that which will be seen by those who go abroad next summer.

It is a wise decision that the Coronation Committee has made. There is nothing to be lost and there is everything to be gained by giving the fullest conception of the significance of the occasion. That this will be done without any sacrifice to the dignity of the ceremony rests in the thoroughly dignified hands of the British authorities.

Surely there could be nothing improper in whatever arrangements could be made to enable as many as possible to witness the historic ceremonies of consecration and dedication that date from ancient times bound British sovereigns to their subjects. Queen Elizabeth II is no less the beloved queen of millions in Britain and the Commonwealth than she will be the very few who will be spectators in Westminster Abbey.

A CAREER IN PROPHECY

If some up-and-coming young Canadian would care to start building up a reputation for himself and live to see it become established 10 or 20 years hence, we suggest he turn his attention to population predictions. The idea is that he should put himself on record right now.

It has become a favorite public pastime in recent months to observe that in the next few years ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier's prophecy, remarked that the 20th century held out big things for this country. And with a current national development boom broadening into a real prime development boom broadening into a real prime development boom, presidents, industrial executives, economists and lesser citizens coupling their allusions to the new prosperity era with a calculated estimate of what the Canadian population should be by 1977.

Unfortunately, perhaps, the more prominent of these prognosticators are not likely to be alive when their prophecies have to pass. On the other hand, a younger man who will take up this predicting business seriously, could very well attain a considerable reputation and probably be around 10, 20 or 30 years hence to receive the due proper acknowledgment of his proven foresight and astute judgment.

The truth of the matter is a little investigation reveals that there is no simple sure-fire formula for predicting Canada's population over the next few decades barring some cataclysmic turn of events. At least that has been the pattern of population growth for the past century.

The records show that there has been a standard rate of growth for both Canada and the United States which averages out to about two per cent per year or 22 per cent per decade. A recently published geography by Dent's, "Canadian Regions," deals with the subject. The publishers estimate 20,000,000 inhabitants by 1971 and 50,000,000 by the end of the century. On the basis of the 22 per cent scale forecasts would be 17,000,000 plus for 1961; 21,000,000 for 1971 and so on, up to 38,000,000 for the year 2001.

The most interesting revelation of studying the population figures, however, is that contrary to widespread belief the rates of population growth in Canada and the United States have remained almost constant since 1890. In that year Canada's population just topped 3,000,000, while the United States had more than 30,000,000. or a ratio of 1-to-10. Today the respective populations of 14,000,000 and 150,000,000 the ratio is one to a bit less than 11.

So there it is. Apart from the head start the U.S. got on us we see that whatever the future holds for us we have held our own with our neighbor for the last century.

JUST FOLKS

THE CHRISTMAS MAGIC

When I was just a little boy, about this time of year
I spoke when I was spoken to,
and stayed out of sight and ear.
I ran to wash my hands and face.
I brushed my teeth and hair.
I put my best clothes on instead of on a chair.
When visitors dropped in to call,
respectfully I stood.
To do what pleased Old Santa
Claus I did the best I could.

I said my "thank you" in the way
all English boys are taught.
I gave up what I should to do,
and ate the food I got.
And when they said: "It's time for bed," I answered them: "All right."
Remembering before I went to kiss them all good night.
And once I heard my mother say: "If gives me hope to see when he has Christmas on his mind how nice our boy can be."

All that was many years ago, but still a boy am I.
The same contentment comes to me with Christmas drawing nigh.
The old time miracle occurs—
nor is it wholly sham—
I strive to be a better man than what I really am.
The Christmas spirit changes me,
and this I surely know—
It works the self-same magic that it did long years ago.

When Oil Lighted the World

(Smithsonian Institute Bulletin)

Long and shadowy were America's "candle nights." Not much better were the whale oil, lard oil, alcohol-and turpentine lighted nights which succeeded them up to about the period of the Civil War, when kerosene made its first appearance as a lighting fluid.

The story of early lighting in the United States is told by C. Malcolm Watkins, United States national museum curator, curator of ethnology, in the new annual report of the Smithsonian Institution.

Into the candle lit world of 1783, Wallace relates stepped an obscure Swiss chemist, Aimi Argand, with a type of hollow burning sperm oil, which gave as much light as nine candles. By and large, however, only the wealthy could afford such a luxury before 1800, and credit is credited with making the first practical use of the lamp chimney, chimney of glass, said to be one of the regular chores of country children up to the present generation.

Absurd as it seems today, there was some concern about whether there could be enough candle-power light. An encyclopedia published in 1804 urged people to use a mirror screen behind their eyes and such a powerful illumination. The celebrated scientist Count Rumford said in 1811: "No decayed beauty ever ought expose her face to the direct rays of an Argand lamp."

Between 1784 and 1860 approximately 500 lighting devices were patented. Lighting, aside from that by candles, has depended almost entirely on whale oil, vegetable oil, kerosene, and gas. Between 1848 and 1852 the price of whale oil practically doubled, and lighting a house became costly. New fuels were patented, especially combinations of alcohol and turpentine. They resulted in a number of fatal explosions.

Gas lighting was introduced before 1830, but was not widely accepted until after the Civil War. Even then, except for street illumination in the larger cities, it was confined largely to theatres and public gathering places.

The first practical step in lighting swept everything else before it at the close of the 1830-1850 period. The revolution in fuel had actually begun in 1834, when Hamilton Smith of Williamsburg N.Y., patented his new liquid hydrocarbon, to be known as burning fluid. Its opening up of the Pennsylvania oil fields in 1859 marked the turning point by releasing an abundant source of superior kerosene. Before a decade had passed the kerosene lamp had virtually displaced all its predecessors.

It Is Theft Season, Too

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

This is the season of Christmas tree thefts. Every year at this time there are fewer fir trees left on our bushy their Christmas trees legally, like themselves to the bush for Christmas trees, and cut down their own, risking arrest on theft charges. The continued population of such a practice with some is positively due to the fact that few are ever charged with such misdemeanors. They are apparently willing to overlook the theft of a few trees as long as they are not caught. It will be recalled that there were serious penalties were handed out for such thefts in other parts of the province last year.

The truth of the matter is there are far fewer trees left on our farms as a tree legally unless be owns the bush or has the permission of the person who does own it. In fact many people apparently do not realize that a tree is a crop, and is relatively owned with the exception of protected trees, and that it is permissible for them to go in and cut or otherwise remove trees, or cause trees to be cut without permission of the owners. Parents who permit their children to do so are not only themselves responsible for a good deal of tree theft.

Then, too, there are those bold, and thoughtless persons who don't even bother to provide even a bushel for a tree, but pick off a shapely tree near another, leaving only a few local residents have lost trees which they have valued to make types of Christmas tree thieves.

The Myth Explodes

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

When tes came off the ration list in England, for the first time since 1940, "there was no rush to buy."

This may look strange to people who imagine that, next to cricket, tea is the British greatest weakness. But, like the alleged British habit of lunching everything on "cricket," the British passion for tea is exaggerated in minds of people on this side of the ocean.

As for the Briton's tea-hour, it is no more of an institution in the Old Country today than it is in Canada — and certainly not as intense as unchanging as the American love of coffee.

Not Guilty

(Manchester Guardian)

The roots of violence are not in toys, and to blame the toy-shop for making criminals is like blaming the barber for the activities of razor-slashers. The supervision of the toy-cupboard and the boy's bedroom is the parent's responsibility. There are, unhappily, many bad parents. But they are a social problem which cannot be tackled in the toyshop.

Mayor's Title Ancient One

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

The title "Mayor" has an ancient and honorable history. The French mayor, as it is in Britain, in Germany, it is Burgermeister; in Italy, Podesta; in Spain, Corregidor, and in Provence, Provost. Originally, the title had a much wider significance than it has today.

Among the nations which arose from the ruins of the Roman Empire and who made use of Latin as their official and legal language, Major was the term which, on account of a convenient terms to describe inferior officials of one kind or another had the superintendence of others. In England, the chief officer of the borough down to the 11th century were the appointed reeves. The mayor appeared in the 12th century at the period when municipal life was developing rapidly. He was elected head of the town government. London obtained a mayor in 1189, but it was not until the 13th century, the practice was generally.

The mayors of certain cities in the United States have acquired a prescription the prefix of "Lord." The title "right, honorable" is a British appendage which goes with Lord Mayors of London, York, Belfast, Dublin, Melbourne, Brisbane, Sydney and Adelaide. The title is likewise accorded the Lord Provost of Edinburgh and Glasgow. In the United States it is the custom to call the mayor "honorable" in the mayors of cities and it is usual to address them as "Your Honor." In Canada, the traditional British salutation prevails, namely "Your Worship."

The mark of respect thus accorded the chief magistrates of Canadian cities and towns derives from the mellowed pages of history and serves as reminder of the unbroken link between the municipal governments of today and their early counterparts.

Britain's Cut In Defences

(Ottawa Journal)

Prime Minister Churchill announced a substantial cut-back in Britain's rearmament program, but he made it clear that Britain, the McCormicks and Hearsts with all other Western nations, is dedication by "perfidious Albion."

Informed, fair minded American leaders will not be unfriendly. Know that Britain's record on rearmament, and her contributions to NATO are far and away the best in Europe; that Britain, her men, her money and air power in Western Germany than any other Western nation, including the United States.

Informed, fair minded Americans know also that Britain, despite having been bled white by two wars which she did not start and beginning to the end, is carrying a far heavier defence load throughout the world—troops in the Middle East (which she defends alone), and troops in Korea, and others (a great many others) in Malaya.

And Britain, despite these cuts announced today, is not even part of bankruptcy—has no mind to run out on NATO. For rearmament this year Britain is spending more than $4 billion a year.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FROM NONE BUT SELF

Each one of us has within us our greatest critic, adviser, and cheer leader. Most of us are born with the thought that there are hungers, purposes, but they are our personal property. They are the same for everybody. They influence all our actions, however, and we are constantly striving. Buddha, the wonderful poem "Kasidah" has a line that says: "From self alone exceptappiness."

Fame, popularity, wealth, are fleeting things. I started writing and talking years ago—not largely to encourage myself. That I have given counsel and help that has been an enlargement of faith to readers far and near is my reward. I am grateful for my efforts — but mostly I have to depend upon myself for a true appreciation. I am not alone in this. It's the experience of all.

Large numbers of people move from their small towns to the "big city" with the thought that they will find interests that will surpass the quiet and slowness usual of the life they meet and the seemingly unchanging atmosphere of their surroundings. But mostly they meet with increased loneliness and friendliness, for the city is an uncaring institution as a rule. I have noted that people who have made good in the big city usually like to talk about their more humble beginnings "back home."

When we do something that attracts attention, or that gives to us some measure of fame or popularity, the outer applause is pleasing and encouraging — but it is for so short a spell. "From none but self" expect the greatest applause, for this is what sustains us in discouragement and loneliness and gives to us the spirit to keep on and on.

Recently, over the TV, I listened and viewed the interview with Robert Frost, the greatest living can poet today. He paid tribute to his encouragement and inspiration after some twenty years of obscurity — his London publishers who published his first small book of poems and his American publishers who have published his work ever since. Then it was Frost's belief in himself that you felt always gave him his greatest acclaim.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

Sylva, a little six-times-a-year colony magazine produced by the Ontario Lands and Forests department, carries an account of a tape-recorded conversation between O. C. Jenestin, chief of the forest fire department, and Keith Acheson, regional forester of the vast northern area known as Kenora. They are talking about the peril from fire in this northern country, largely the watershed to Hudson Bay, play in the lightning of forest fires in that accessible domain.

But it is their incidental remarks about the tribal organization of the Indians that have a particular interest. Jenestin: How the Crees elect their chief and council is rather more of a ballot. When the time comes for an election, there is a meeting at which candidates are made, often at great length. When the speeches are over, the candidates are named, usually three.

The candidates are and stand against a wall, facing it, and covering their eyes with their hands. The men of the tribe file past, one to the man of their choice, standing behind him and placing their hand on his shoulder, each in turn falling in behind the man ahead, placing the hand on his shoulder. The candidate with the most men standing behind him is elected. The voters fall out of queue. The new chief's name is announced, and neither he nor his fellow candidates know who has been elected. That has to be chosen, all stand behind him.

When you come to the Indian village, report Messrs. Jennestin and Acheson, the men usually have their backs turned to precisely the stranger. One of them stands apart, by himself. He is the chief. And it is protocol, it is courtesy, on which the Indians set considerable store, that the stranger, especially a white man, go and address that man standing apart first. Then he may speak to the group as a whole.

It is the opinion of these two officials of the north that 40 or 50 Indians could accomplish at that time 100 to 200 white men to do fighting forest fire, because of their intrinsic sense of the forest.

THE MAGIC OF INJECTIONS

The gastrointestinal tract of man and animals is the natural abode of the tetanus germ. The tetanus germ and the toxin or poison the germ produces may be swallowed with impunity. But when the tetanus germ lodges in scratch, blister, burn, cut, puncture or other wound and multiplies and produces tetanus toxin, the toxin is absorbed into the blood stream and causes tetanus, lockjaw.

Toxins or poisons of some other diseases are rendered harmless by digestion although they are harmful when injected under the skin, into muscle or into a vein. The food is poisonous (causes food poisoning), however, is extremely dangerous when ingested in food.

In emergencies or in circumstances precluding swallowing of medicine in the ordinary way, injections serve a useful role. Insulin or iodine into a vein may be advisable or necessary.

But, believe me, knuckleheads, there's no magic in this method of administering medicine.

It is just plain silly to imagine "shots" or vitamins, calcium or other medicine will produce any effect that the same medicine taken by mouth will not produce. But, then, people who patronize a "clip joint" or "medicine" a doctor who practises under his or her own name are silly to begin with, aren't they?

There is one fact in favor of the injection of medicine which the patient could just as effectively take in the ordinary way: the doctor knows the patient has really given the medicine a fair trial, at least for the moment.

Most people with moderate chronic or long-standing ailments do not give the treatment a fair trial. They discontinue taking the medicine as soon as they begin to feel better, and then if they relapse they conclude that the treatment is "no good." They have neither the doctor nor themselves a break.

I have no mind, I only believe, I do not pretend to know—that an adequate daily intake of calcium and D is the best preventive against the remedy for chronic brittle and bony bones. Why wait, quit eating cheese and peanuts and write or telegraph your congressman opposite in joints, arteries, Kidneys etc.

Well, as I've said, it is deep speaking about it here in this out of the way corner.

THE PLUMB LINE

In the Book of Amos we find the famous parable of the plumb line. "The Lord stood beside a wall made by a plumbline, with a plumbline in His hand. And Jehovah said unto the Lord, Behold, I will set a plumbline in the midst of My people Israel."

The plumb line is a device for a wall straight as it is being built and therefore keep it from tottering and falling. The prophet Amos assures us that the Lord has set a plumb line in the midst of His people. He has set it today in the midst of our nation as He set it in the midst of ancient Israel. He sets a plumb-line in the lives of men and of us — the moral law which comes out of His Word, by which we are directed how to do good and how to keep from doing evil. We do not like the plumb-line, nor do we heed its warning.

Think about it for a moment. Are you living up to the things you know are right and good? Are you not every day compromising in a variety of ways which violate your own better conscience? The Lord has set a plumb-line by your life and mine. That plumb line is the conscience. Build according to its warning.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

On Thursday evening the Club Commodores was the scene of the fourth annual dance sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Sons of Jacob congregation.

Approximately three hundred people enjoyed a fine evening of dancing and refreshments, and from opinions expressed, next year's affair is already anticipated.

During the evening, Mayor Haig made the draw for the lucky winner of the $100 purse, on which tickets were sold by the Ladies' Auxiliary for the past few months. The winner was C. G. Matthews, 104 Stanley Street.

The dance was convened jointly by Mrs. A. B. Hirsch, Mrs. A. Lipes and Mrs. M. Levine.

WEDDINGS

ROACE—CROSS

On Saturday, November 29th, a quiet wedding was solemnized at Tabernacle United Church parsonage at 4.00 p.m., by the Rev. E. A. Rowley, pastor of the church, when Lillie Alice Cross, of Redvers, daughter of the late John Cross of Delora, and the late Mrs. Cross, became the bride of Russell Roace, of Bellville, son of Mrs. Alexander Roach, of Kingsley, Sask., and the late Mr. Roach.

The bride, who was attractively attired in light grey with navy accessories, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Terry Gawley, of Belleville, wearing light blue crepe with navy accessories. Mr. Kingsley Gawley, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Roach are residing in Belleville.

Bethlehem White Shrine Holds Inspection Night

Wednesday evening was "Inspection Night" for Bethlehem No. 11 White Shrine of Belleville and also for their Christmas party.

Deputy supervisor Worthy High Priestess, Agnes Swenson, of Cleveland, Ohio, complimented the officers and instructor on the efficient manner in which they performed their various duties and in some most inspiring thoughts with the members, gathering herself to all present.

Visitors were present from Ottawa, Brockville, and Kingston.

After the regular meeting Miss Clemis Claus arrived on the scene and presented each one with a Christmas gift as they left the hall, and retired upstairs to a delicious entertainment and buffet luncheon.

Christmas Program

The entertainment consisted of a welcome to all by the presiding Worthy High Priestess, Mrs. Mibel Stewart, and an accordion solo "White Christmas" played by Geraldine Jerome; a duet by Mary Ann Corles and Dorian Robinson "O Holy Night of Bethlehem"; a reading by Dianna Hales.

The guest speaker, Sister Enid Smith, was then introduced by Mr. Fred Westover, Watchman of Bethlehem No. 11, on a beautiful story of the birth of Christ, which was much enjoyed.

This was followed by another appropriate duet by Mary Ann and Dorian "Silent Night" accompanied by Geraldine, after which the Watchman of Bethlehem thanked all those who assisted with the program. With the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" the impressive and inspiring evening was brought to a close.

The hall was beautifully decorated with the traditional tiny Christmas scene kindly loaned and set up by Mrs. Jerome. This is flanked by Christmas Angel. Santa Claus sitting in the background, made a lovely setting for the whole affair.

Belleville W.T.L Holds Christmas Meeting

Miniature Christmas trees and sparkling decorations gave a festive air to the Belleville Women Teachers' Federation Christmas meeting held on Wednesday in Bellamy's Town Room.

Before the dinner, carol singing was enjoyed under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Mc-Illian Hart.

At the business meeting was cancelled and a Christmas program presented which was thoroughly enjoyed.

Many thanks go to those who contributed to the social efforts to make the evening so enjoyable.

Misses Norma Jarvis and Aileen Wright sang a duet, a humorous reading, which delighted the fancy of all present, was presented by Miss Hilda Shirley.

Miss M. Moorcroft showed a group of pictures entitled "Winter Scenes". Not only were these pictures appreciated for their beauty but they had a special interest to all present as they were taken by Miss Moorcroft near her home.

Christ Church P.G. Holds Pot-Luck Dinner

On Tuesday members of Christ Church Parish Guild held their monthly meeting in the form of a pot luck luncheon. The tables were prettily appointed and were loaded with the mounds of delicious foods, evidently the best efforts in the culinary art of every member of the Guild.

The president, Mrs. E. Hickey, presided, and after each honored guest had been seated at the head table and had received a corsage, Mr. Bram Humphreys, guest speaker, gave a humorous talk, which caused much merriment.

Mrs. A. E. Womacott tendered a vote of thanks to Mr. Humphreys for his enjoyable talk.

Others, who spoke briefly, included Canon C. B. Creegan, Rev. Everett Smith, Mr. Womacott and Mr. J. McCullough, after which Canon Creegan led in a sing-song.

The business of the meeting was conducted with Mrs. Hickey again presiding. Mrs. M. B. Hutchinson gave a splendid report which showed that the year had ended with a fine balance on hand. Correspondence consisted of cards and gifts to be sent to the sick and shut-ins for Christmas.

Mrs. Hickey extended best wishes for a most happy Christmas to all bringing an exceptionally fine meeting to a close.

St. George's Guild Enjoys Annual Party

On Tuesday evening, the ladies of St. George's Guild held their annual supper and social party, which about 30 members and friends, including Canon J. R. Creegan and Mrs. Creegan, of Christ Church, present.

Following a delicious dinner, Mr. Creegan presented, on behalf of the Guild members, a beautiful cups and saucers to the officers of the Guild, Mrs. Creegan was also presented with a gift, while there was an exchange of gifts among those present.

Mr. Creegan read the Guild address, and Mrs. Welch thanked the ladies for their support during the past year, which has been a good one.

Later, a game of euchre was enjoyed, with the winners being, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Asher, Mrs. Donsoly and Mrs. Parry, while Mrs. L. Markle, secretary, obtained the consolation prize.

Wallbridge L.O.B.A. Installs Officers

The regular meeting of the Wallbridge L.O.B.A. No. 1168, was held on Monday evening.

Highlight of the evening was the installation of officers conducted out by Sister Margaret Hinchliffe, W.M.

Installed as Worthy Mistress, Sister Ethel Holmes; Dept. Mistress, Sister Georgina Evans; recording secretary, Sister Margaret Reynolds; financial secretary, Sister Marion Phillips; treasurer, Sister Ethel Robinson; Dep. Mistress, Sister Mae Hollinger; Chaplin, Sister Iva Rikely; guardian, Sister Ruth Hinchliffe; D. of Ceremonies, Sister Evelyn Fox; Senior Asst., Sister Margaret Reid; Jr. Asst., Sister Dorothy Nicholls; pianist, Sister Freda Fair; Inner Guard, Sister Ruth Rupert; Outer Guard, Sister Georgina Rupert; 3rd Com., Sister Marie Kingston; 3rd Com., Sister Elsie Massey; 4th Com., Sister Mae Fisher; 5th Com., Sister Shirley Donaldson; 1st auditor Sister Muriel Massey; 2nd auditor Sister Vera Lough; 3rd auditor, Sister Jean Carleton; Sick and Visiting Com., Sister Ida Kelly; district; Degree Captain, Sister Olive Wood; Past Deps. Mistress, Sister Gretia Kingston.

An interesting feature took place when W.P. Mistress Sister Margaret Hinchcliffe was presented with a pair of wall candle brackets, and W. Mistress Gretia Kingston, a bouquet of roses with a silver tray and satin housecoat.

Lodge closed in the usual way with the committee in charge serving refreshments.

Mrs. Babcock Heads St. Margaret's Guild

The St. John's Guild of St. Margaret's held its final meeting of the year at the home of Mrs. E. Price.

The past year has been a successful one for the Guild, decided to send a "thank you" note to the various members and organizations helped to make the auction sale, a success, last week.

After the usual business, Rev. A. Page presided at the election of officers. Mrs. O. Babcock was nominated as president; Mrs. G. Mesne, as vice-president; Mrs. I. Cody as secretary-treasurer and Mrs. M. Putman as treasurer of the flower fund.

The members exchanged Christmas gifts and tea was served bringing an enjoyable afternoon to a close.

O.S.D. Students Vividly Portray 'The Nativity' in Colorful Pageant

Again last evening, the old old, but ever new story of the Nativity, in all its celestial loveliness, was portrayed to an admiring capacity audience by the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

The program consisted of two parts, the first, including the welcome to parents and friends by the superintendent of the school, Mr. W. J. Morrison, and choruses, "Softly Blows the Wind", and "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree" this last being done with motions, was particularly attractive, showing the continuity of action throughout these taking part. These included Mary Chong, Vivian Curtis, Jessie Bowerman, Doreen Brown, Mary O'Neil, Jeanette Masic.

Spectacular Timing

The second part, consisted of the "Nativity" pageant, presented in five scenes; the annunciation; the journey to Bethlehem; the Judean hillside; King Herod's Court; and the Nativity. As the curtain rose on each successive scene was lovelier than the preceding one, and the whole presentation was perfect in the restraint shown in the tableau, the arrival of the Angel Gabriel, and his proclamation to the humble Mary.

The arrival at the inn portrayed the Publicans were extremely well done, even to the demanding of a room for Joseph and Mary's arrival, he in wine colored velvet, and Mary in her simple blue gown, the innkeeper's careless wave of the hand telling that there is no room; but on second thought mentions the cave where the animals are kept.

Scene three showed the shepherds on the Judean hills keeping their flocks by night, huddled around the fire of coals. Suddenly a young shepherd comes running, pointing to the sky, heralding the coming of the Messiah, ringing angel with outspread wings who proclaims the glad tidings of great joy. The heavenly host appears with their harps and trumpets, heralding the glad herald Gabriel.

Those taking the part of the shepherds included: Chas. Beaumont, Reggie Bowman, Robert Dunning, Jeanette Masic, LeRoy McGregor, Jerome Winterhalt, Jessie and Marshall Wick. The herald angel, Lula Cayer, while those portraying the heavenly host were: Jean Silver, Penny De La Franiere, Betty Tuson, Mary Penfold, Irene Laney, Julia Mladach, Maxine Wadsworth, Claudette Ayre, Avril Margaret Gansky and Elaine Garnett.

King Herod's Court

Scene four: King Herod's court was most colorful: the king in his rich, red robes and golden crown surrounded by his retinue of aunts, the high priest, altar boy, scribes, slave girls, and dignified Roman guards. Herod himself lived his or her particular part. King Herod was well portrayed; his anxiety on learning that a King had been born; his execution of the three Wise Men from the east, kingly in their royal robes and attendants.

Those of the cast were: Peter Kyra, Norman Hall, Jackie Wales, Irvin Hayes, Donald Patterson, Robert Eberoie, Wilfred Dunnett, Gerald Ayre, Harry Ayre, Trask, Burt Foster, David Elliot, Keith Hutchins.

The closing scene, that of the nativity, was shown with the main characters: Mary and the guardian angels, Joseph and Mary, the guide and the three Wise Men; all of whom were grouped around the Holy Child in the manger, a lovely scene.

During the singing of "Silent Night" a star was seen to slowly appear, slowly wending their way down the aisle, where they slowly rose in the air, and then suddenly then rise and retire along the way they came.

Those of this scene included: Lillian McCormond, Charles Dennison, Lulu Cayer, Jackie Tatlin, Donna Burford, Nancy Yull, Jessie Wick and Mary Chong as the shepherds as listed before, and the Wise Men, who heard the arrival of the Angel Gabriel, and his proclamation to the humble Mary.

The arrival at the inn portrayed the Publicans were extremely well done, even to the demanding of a room for Joseph and Mary's arrival, he in wine colored velvet, and Mary in her simple blue gown, the innkeeper's careless wave of the hand telling that there is no room; but on second thought mentions the cave where the animals are kept.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

Your Christmas card envelopes . . .you should be proud of them!

The envelopes of your Christmas cards should be so carefully and pleasantly addressed that they will "smile" your Christmas greetings to your friends even before your Christmas cards "speak" your greetings. Your Christmas card envelopes are extremely personal items. They were your handwriting — characteristic of you, and so heart-warmingly welcome to your friends.

To give your envelopes that well-groomed look, here are seven hints:

1. Write in your "very best" handwriting. Write carefully. Write legibly. Illegibility gets you nowhere . . and too often gets your letters exactly the same place. "Address your Christmas cards envelopes plainly" is the ever-hopeful plea of the Post Office Department. Practical advice, this: thrifty advice, too, because your carelessly-addressed envelopes may very well mean (a) that they will come to a forlorn end among the other forlorn letters sent to the Dead Letter Office, or (b) that they may wastefully be detouring about the country in an effort to find out what in the world you did mean by some of the illegible or abbreviated scrawls you scribbled in the address. Dear writers, be careful . . . your friends want to receive your Christmas cards!

2. Do not abbreviate. Only exceptions: "Mr." and "Mrs." Abbreviations are not becoming to Christmas card envelopes. Abbreviating is a lazy person's way of writing, a careless person's way. If you have this unattractive habit, you can get over it quickly. It takes only a second or two to write a word in full . . . just about as long as it takes to make the period after the abbreviation. Try it!

Warning: Abbreviations are the chief reason for mishaps to envelopes. Particularly the names of states and provinces. So often it is difficult to know whether it is N.J., or N.Y.; Mo. or Me. or Md.; Tex. or Tenn.; Neb. or Nev.; Cal. or Col. Honor the names of states and the names of provinces. Ontario takes only a split second more than Ont.

3. North, South, East, West should be written in full. . . and capitalized in the names of states, cities, streets. Street and Avenue should be written out, and Road, Square, Park, Write "and" not the sign of and (&), in Mr. and Mrs.

4. Always write a title before a name. . . Mrs., Miss, Mr.

5. Don't write "City" or "Town" as an address. If the letter must be re-addressed, this leads to confusion.

6. Don't write any unnecessary curlicues . . . too often they cause mis-reading. No "To" or "For" before the name. No "No." before the street-address. No comma after the street-number.

7. Use the Zone Number whenever possible. . .that's what it's for. And remember: the Zone Number should be written after the city . . . not after the state. And no comma before or after the Zone Number.

8. Check carefully to see if you have the correct address. Then write it correctly.

Bon Voyage to your Christmas card envelopes . . . and a Happy Landing for your Christmas cards!

Have you a recipe for making about 150 8-oz. cups coffee, and one for barbecued or roasted pigtails.—Mrs. E. S.

ANSWER:

I have mailed you recipe for Coffee for 150.

BARBECUED PIGS' TAILS

Wash well 2 lbs. pigs' tails, drain, place in roaster with tight cover, roast uncovered at 500 deg. Fahr. for ten minutes, add 3-4 cup hot water, cover, reduce heat to 300 deg. Fahr. and bake for three hours or until tails are very tender. Then pour over Barbecue Sauce—Saute until brown 1-4 cup chopped onions in 2 tablespoons fat, then add and simmer for 20 minutes: 1-2 cup water, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-4 cup lemon juice, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 1 cup chili sauce, 1-2 teaspoon each salt and paprika. Bake at low heat for 1-2 or 3-4 hour longer, basting twice with the sauce.

QUESTION:

. . . you advised a reader to use bread flour for bread making . . . I believe bread flour would make better bread than all-purpose or cake flour. . . would you be good enough to advise me what company makes this type of flour and where I could purchase it. . . if it is not sold through stores may be I could buy a sack or two direct from the company.—Mrs. Wm. ANSWER:

Lake of the Woods Milling Co. Ltd. makes bread flour and have offices in Winnipeg, Toronto and Montreal. From your district you should write direct to their Winnipeg office. Tell them I referred you to them. They are a most salable factory company to deal with.

QUESTION:

. . . knew a lady who made a cookie on the order of meringue puffs except that she used the whole egg and brown sugar. What I recall of the proportions are about 2 eggs to 2 cups brown sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla. I have tried making cookies with the above proportions but ended up with a sort of candy. I'm quite sure she didn't use flour. Can one convert a powder r a seed to an extract? What substitutions could one make in a recipe calling for an extract where one has only the powder, such as anise. Do you have a recipe for a real banana-y cookie? May I please have a recipe for pickling tongue or making corned beef? If a calf tongue preferable to a beef tongue? Which cut of beef would make the tenderest corned beef? How much time should one allow for a pot roast per pound for rare, medium or well done? —Evelyn G.

ANSWER:

The closest I can come to your meringue puffs is

GOLDEN SURPRISES

(Maybe some of our readers will know of a meringue cookie using both yolks and white of, eggs, brown sugar and no flour. If so I hope they will send it to me through this paper.)

Beat 2 eggs until as fluffy as possible and doubled in size, slowly add 1 cup brown sugar, and when stiff add 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 1-2 cups of any crisp dry cereal (corn flakes, bran flakes, puffed rice or wheat) and 1 teaspoon soda. Barely mix and drop on buttered cookie sheet. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 8 to 10 minutes.

To substitute powder for extract use 1-4 of the amount of powder. To substitute seeds, grind them in finest knife of grinder and use 1-4 the amount. The outer husk of some seeds is extremely strong so do not follow this rule with hot spices like peppers.

BANANA COOKIES

One-half cup each butter, brown sugar, white sugar, 1 egg, 1 1-2 cups sifted flour, 1-2 cup fine oatmeal, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 cup mashed banana pulp (or 1-2 cup crushed drained pineapple), 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 cup chopped nuts. Cream together creaming and sugar well, then beat in egg and flavoring. Sift and measure flour and sift it again with salt, soda and baking powder. Add oatmeal to it and stir then into the first mixture, with nuts. Drop by teaspoons onto greased sheet about 3 inches apart and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 10 or 12 minutes. In this day and age of expert butchers you do not need to go to the trouble of corning beef or tongue. It may easily be bought already corned more expertly than it can be done at home. Buy corned thick end of brisket beef or beef tongue. There is no rare or medium for pot roast—they are always well done. They are usually cut from the "eye of the beef"—which is top or bottom of round and require from 3 to 4 hours pot roasting.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

PERFUME FOR THE COLLEGE GIRL

How practical is fragrance for the college girl? Completely practical if the beauty overhead permits, because a sweet, compelling perfume helps her to maintain poise, to create an aura of charming loveliness and a sense of security in her own womanliness. It is the means of being the person it is nice to have around. And boys like perfume, if it is dainty and flowerlike.

Is fragrance an expensive habit? Not if you learn how to conserve these precious florettes liquids. Toilet water may be had at reasonable prices. Keep yours in an atomizer and spray your neck, shoulders and arms after the bath. You will walk in a sweet-smelling aura all the day long.

Cologne sticks won't make much of a hole in the weekly spending change. Keep one in your gym locker to use after the shower. Whenever the going seems tough, rub the stick on your wrists, along your throat. It will lift the book-learning weariness that comes now and then in even the brightest students.

Sachets are good investments. They don't cost much, and they have lasting qualities. Sachets in your dresser drawers will bring a wonderful scent to your clothes, not only lingerie and handkerchiefs, but scarves, sweaters and blouses. Put sachet bags on coats and dress hangers.

Make the use of perfume a habit, during the day as well as the evening. A few drops on the pulse spots serve as an accent to your fragrance design, much as the lipstick accents make-up. Don't overlook bath softeners — bubbles or oils or salts. The softened water will make the soap lather quickly, thus giving your skin a more thorough cleaning and laying on a little perfume by way of good toilery measure.

The final fubbing or shower touch is a friction with talcum or a dusting powder. Do you know that powdered legs help your nylons to slide on and cuts down on snags and runs

A few bits of information on this interesting subject:

Bottles containing perfumes or toilet water should be no more than three-quarters full, to allow for expansion caused by heat or climatic changes.

Be sure the stopper is on securely. If there is a ground glass stopper, give it a sure twist as you push it into the neck of the bottle. Never pack anything with cap or cover without testing for leakage.

Sachets are Good Investments

GETTING MORE BEAUTIFUL

each season is the slip, in many cases much prettier than the frock worn over it. Nylon Alencon lace is used for a slim slip made with wide, curved midriff sections of satin. Satin piping outlines the curved neckline and scalloped hem.

NICE IDEA—frilly, feminine, yet tailored, pajamas! Nylon crepe—in white, blue, black or pink—is used for a new slumber suit trimmed with a bib-yoke of permanently pleated nylon tucking outlined with nylon lace. Same detail for the flared sleeve cuffs.

MOVING OFF the beaten track is the fur designer, with interesting results. Designed for casual or country wear is a fur coat with brown suede used for a low back belt and for lining the inverted side pleats. The scarf collar is another good detail, the fur worked to a kerchief point in back and pulled through loops in front.

A QUICK REVIEW of resort fashions shows the full skirt with soft, unpressed pleats as the leading silhouette, and linen as the favored fabric for suits. Lime green linen is used for an attractive boxy jacket suit with a blouse of cloud blue shantung. A low back flare breaks the slim line of the skirt.

THE ART of Italy is increasing in importance in the area of fashion, with beautiful clothes and accessories by great Italian houses featured by stores the country over. Among the imports is a series of hand-painted silk and cotton poplin skirts, the subtle color mixtures outlined by a thin traking of sequins. There green linen is used for an attractive wide, matching stoles.

Succession of Elizabeth II Marks Opening of New Elizabethan Era in Old Country

Can a woman lead Britain back to greatness? This story, last of a series, describes the British reaction to the succession of Elizabeth II, marking the opening of a new Elizabethan era in the old country.

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Most Canadians are only dimly aware of the strong emotional stimulus of Britain's constitutional monarchy.

Those who count themselves lucky to see royalty once in a lifetime would have been surprised at the upsurge of feeling which followed Queen Elizabeth's accession. As though snapping fingers at their difficulties, Britons looked buoyantly forward to a new Elizabethan era.

They recalled that Britain three times reached greatness with a woman on the throne—under Elizabeth I, Anne and Victoria.

Parliament Opening

The depth of feeling was illustrated when the 26-year-old Queen, slim and lovely, presided at the state opening of Parliament Nov. 4. She was the central figure in one of the oldest rituals of state. When it was over a peer of the realm exclaimed:

"I could hardly keep from leaping up and shouting: 'Long live the Queen!'"

Newspaper reaction was similarly jubilant. The Sunday Times spoke of being "inspired by a young sovereign whose queenliness refreshes on each new occasion the love and loyalty that her subjects bear her."

John Connell of the Evening News wrote glowingly:

"Today's ceremony. . . must be forever unique, something to cherish in memory till the heart is cold and silent. It was enchantment beyond expectation. And the Queen! It was who made it so, by some radiant gift of the spirit which shone through all the pageantry and panoply of a great and formidable state occasion."

Difficult Days

But the way will be hard. When Elizabeth succeeded her father on the throne last February, she fell heir to a shrinking kingdom. Since 1939, the peoples under direct rule from London have dwindled from 500,000,000 to 100,000,000. The country faces economic and political problems unknown in more spacious days.

In the first year of Elizabeth's reign, Britain's arms bill will be at least six times as much as before the war. The country has had three financial crises since 1945. A shift in the terms of trade, now favorable, would provoke another crisis.

Apart from domestic and international difficulties, the Queen faces problems in the mere fact of being the first Queen since Victoria. For instance, the King used to receive ambassadors and their wives separately. The Queen receives them together but some new routine will have to be worked out.

There will have to be new stamps new coinage, new patents. The King's colors will be replaced by the Queen's colors. These and many other day-to-day matters will come to the Queen's desk for decision.

No Drastic Changes

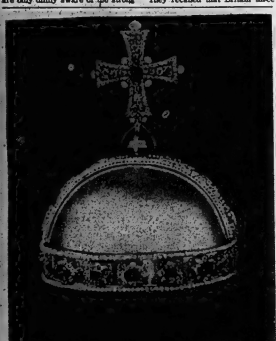
Court circles do not expect Elizabeth to wield a strong new broom as some sources have hinted.

"I think there will be few really drastic changes," a court spokesman said. "Certainly there is unlikely to be any alteration in matters affecting the constitution."

The Queen's husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, ma,y bring a lighter touch to Buckingham Palace. He has far greater freedom than the Queen and can help bring the crown to the people. He will also be well placed to advise the Queen of sentiment in the country. He has already carried out a number of public engagements alone.

How will the Queen respond to her responsibilities? Few British observers have any doubts.

Not Overwhelmed

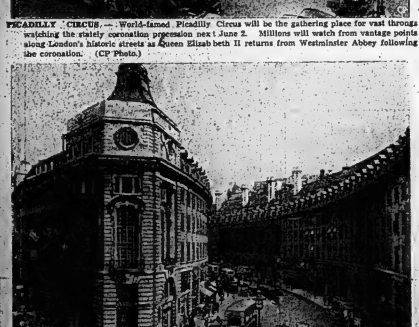


"The thing that impresses me most of all about the Queen," says Cyril Hankinson, edito. of Debrett's Peerage, "is that she doesn't seem to allow the burdens of monarchy to overwhelm her.

"She has not lost a whit of her old energy and vivacity. She looks so young and appealing on all occasions, and unfaltering. While maintaining an essential dignity, she still seems wonderfully fitted to be a leader of youth.

"Like Queen Victoria, she seems to have been endowed overnight with the qualities of queenship."

What Elizabeth herself feels can never be known. But in her accession declaration, she said:



"I shall always work, as my father did throughout his reign, to uphold the constitutional government and to advance the prosperity and happiness of my peoples, spread as they are all 'the world over."

The Royal Orb is of polished gold, studded with large pearls, rubies, sapphires and emeralds. It will be placed in Queen Elizabeth's right hand after donning the royal robe in the coronation service next June 2. (C.P. Photo.)

PICADILLY CIRCUS — World-famed Picadilly Circus will be the gathering place for vast throngs watching the stately coronation procession next 1 June 2. Millions will watch from vantage points along London's historic streets as Queen Elizabeth II returns from Westminster Abbey following the coronation. (CP Photo.)

HAD BUSY YEAR — Canada's External Affairs Minister Pearson has had a busy and tough year during 1952. In February he presided over the Lisbon meeting of the North Atlantic Council which shapes up flow as the most controversial the 14-power alliance has ever held; in October he became president of the United Nations Assembly in New York; the department opened a number of new embassies abroad, and he has had to face Parliament in the toughest fight of his four years in the Commons. (CP Photo.)

Pearson Will Probably Look On '52 as Year of the Hot Seats

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson of Canada will probably look back on 1952 as the year of the hot seats.

The year saw the Canadian diplomatic corps undergo major shuffles and it saw important international events, but for Mr. Pearson it was both a big year and a tough one.

Twice abroad he sat in hot seats as the key man in hectic meetings vital to the world. Once he came home to face his toughest fight in four years in parliament.

President at Lisbon

In February, he presided over the Lisbon meeting of the North Atlantic Council which shapes up now as the most controversial the 14-power alliance has ever held.

That was the meeting that laid down the European military objectives for the next year, objectives that had to be fought out in the secret sessions of the council and which became the basis of controversy in one country after another once they became known.

Mr. Pearson came home from Lisbon to find the same objectives pitching him into one of the few serious spills the Canadian Parliament has had on international affairs since the war. The CCF attacked the objectives as dangerous and impractical. Mr. Pearson defended them in exchanges that produced strong words between himself and M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader.

In September, he ended his year as chairman of the North Atlantic Council. A month later he became president of the United Nations assembly. He quickly found himself swallowed up in the ramifications of the search for a Korean truce, the bitterness of the East-West split, the resignation of Trygve Lie and the suicide of Lie's chief lieutenant.

Important Expansion

Meanwhile his department was expanding modestly but in important directions.

New embassies were opened at NATO headquarters in Paris, in Japan, in Colombia, Venezuela and Uruguay and new legations in Libya and Vienna.

Dana Wilgress came home from London to head the department's staff fas undersecretary. His predecessor Jean Arnold Heeney, went to the new NATO post. Norman Robertson ceased to be secretary of the cabinet and went back to his old job as high commissioner in London.

Those were the highlights in a series of shifts which affected most of Canada's major diplomatic posts abroad. At the same time, for the first time in two years, the department took its class of apprentice or embryo diplomats.

The big events of the year ranged from signing of the Japanese peace treaty in April to the Commonwealth economic conference in December. High on the list was Canada's formal notification to Washington that she intends to build the navigation phase of the St. Lawrence Seaway and power project alone.

Canada's Truck Drivers Join Association's Courtesy Drive

TORONTO (CP)—Canada's truckers are going to improve their driving manners.

At least drivers for some 160 companies sporting the Canadian Automotive Transport Association's red, gold and black "I'll Help You Pass" placards will try.

The association's courtesy campaign, officially launched at the association's annual meeting in Montreal recently by President G. M. Parks of Toronto, extends from coast to coast and covers trucks ranging from lumbering tractor-trailers to light delivery vans.

In Quebec it is known by the somewhat more elegant title "Je Vous Aiderai a Depasser."

Campaign Rules

The campaign, aimed at combatting what the association considers a growing feeling by motorists that trucks are monopolizing the highways, has four rules for its participants.

The truck driver is required to maintain sufficient distance between his vehicle and the one ahead to allow faster vehicles to pass. He will slow down and drop back to a safe distance whenever he attempts to pass and finds the way not clear. He will permit traffic to pass on long grades. He will permit any delayed traffic to pass after reaching the top of a long grade.

Company officials are required to sign a pledge to see these rules are carried out.

One familiar road courtesy that will be eliminated, however, is the practice of the truck driver blinking his lights or giving a hand signal to indicate the road ahead is clear to pass. It's considered too dangerous.

But here is the average motorist to know he can count on these courtesies?

The association has two answers for that. The placards, 15 inches by nine inches, (15 by 11 in Quebec) will be mounted conspicuously at the rear of the truck. The driver will also have a notice posted in the cab reminding him his truck is carrying the courtesy placard. He is also required to sign a pledge to honor the campaign.

Belle-Vista Motel Open to Public For Inspection

Marmora — Belle-Vista Motel on No. 7 Highway, just west of Crowe River bridge, was officially opened to the public on Wednesday, December 10. Despite the inclemency of the weather between 2 and 5 p.m. and 7 and 9 p.m., a goodly number of residents availed themselves of the invitation of the proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Mickleborough, to inspect the artistically designed and beautifully furnished hostelry and over the teacups to tender their best wishes for its future.

Flowers for decoration were the gift of the Marmora and District Chamber of Commerce, Marmora branch of the Dominion Bank and Mr. D. B. Sanderson, each room being considered in the decorative scheme. Due to weather conditions, limiting attendance somewhat the proprietors have intimated that visitors unable to be present on the opening day are welcome on any occasion they may find convenient to make a call of inspection.

Gradual Lifting of Trade Restrictions on Canadian Goods Hinted by St. Laurent

OTTAWA (CP) — Commonwealth import restrictions against Canadian goods may be lifted gradually in 1953.

A broadhint that a change in Commonwealth sterling-area trade policy was in sight was given by Prime Minister St. Laurent and an official at the Canadian party returning from the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London.

Mr. St. Laurent, accompanied by part of the Canadian delegation, returned home Friday night after two weeks of discussions with nine Commonwealth countries to draft a plan for progressive elimination of sterling-area restrictions and decontrol of the pound.

Conference Successful

"The conference was very successful," Mr. St. Laurent told reporters at suburban Rockcliffe airport as he left the RCAF luxury plane that took him across the Atlantic and back.

"It certainly was as favorable to Canadian interests as it was for other members of the Commonwealth."

But the prime minister couldn't be pinned down as to when U.K. and other import restrictions will be lifted and Canada may start find a ready market for her agricultural and manufactured goods in the Commonwealth.

"You can't remove restrictions at a trade conference. All you can do is work toward the removal, but I am sure we can begin something within a measurable time," he said.

Another member of the delegation said removal of some of the restrictions can be expected in 1953.

The official communique said the Commonwealth's trade plan envisaged "positive" international action to remove the causes of the import restrictions "as circumstances permit."

Answers Question

The prime minister also observed in reply to reporters' questions:

1. He will meet in person with cabinet colleagues as to whether the conference decided on any "definite new legislation at Parliament's current session, but any indication what legislation he had in mind.

2. The International monetary fund, the world organization for stabilizing a free currency system, "has not been too successful in the past," but he hoped it would be "more successful in the future."

The reference to the fund was in reply to a question as to the possibility that Canada may contribute funds to aid progressive convertibility of the pound with the dollar.

Mr. St. Laurent's reply indicated that the Commonwealth may strive to make the fund workable for the Commonwealth's purpose before seeking other means.

Fortune Teller Takes Own Life

PARIS (Reuters)—Savum Kate lyre Mahadeva, 45, famous Parisian fortune teller in Paris, was found hanging with a piece of electric iron cord on his bedroom door here.

Mahadeva became the best-known fortune teller in Paris between the wars, counting many celebrities among his regular customers.

He dispensed his pronouncements sitting on a throne before a pool full of live crocodiles.

His wife found him Friday. He has been suffering from a nervous condition for the last three years.

BRAMPTON FAIR KILLED

TORONTO (CP)—Two Brampton residents were killed Friday night when their car was struck by a Canadian National Railways train in suburban Weston. Dead are Albert Wilcox, 41, and his wife, Kate, 41.

Police said the car was carried 360 feet along the rails from the point of impact.

Kidnapped Baby Returned, Toronto Woman Arrested

A happy ending to the kidnapping of seven-weeks-old Linda Charmaine Bond came with her return to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bond, Toronto. The little girl was lifted from her carriage while her mother was shopping. It took police less than 12 hours to find the baby.

Arrested and charged with kidnapping is Mrs. Beatrice Blower, 24, shown being led to jail. The baby was found in her house, dressed in new clothes and with her hair cut so short her mother did not at first recognized her. Mrs. Blower, mother of a three-year-old boy, was reported to have an "exceptionally strong longing for children." — Central Press Canadian Photos.

UN Puts Explosive Situation In French-Ruled Morocco To Thorough Examination

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) The United Nations put the explosive situation in French ruled Morocco to an examination today, only a few hours after winding up a tense debate on Tunisia — another French North African protectorate.

Rushing to finish as much of its business as possible before the Christmas holidays, the general assembly's 60 — country political committee took only a half day rest before opening discussion on violence-torn Morocco.

The committee completed its debate on Tunisia Friday night with the adoption of a mildly-worded Latin-American resolution which merely asked France to negotiate on Tunisian demands for independence. The vote was 45-3 with 10 abstentions, including the Soviet bloc and Britain, Canada and the United States supported the resolution.

Earlier the committee had voted down 27-24 a number Arab-Asian resolution which called for French Tunisian negotiations under a three-man United Nations commission. Seven countries abstained on that ballot, Britain, Canada and the US opposed it.

Ukraine was absent from the Tunisian debate and has given advance notice she will not attend the discussion of Morocco. The maintainance relations with the two protectorates are an internal matter.

The 13 Arab-Asian countries, which brought both issues into the assembly, hardly had time to lick their wounds from the defeat of their Tunisian plan before they were forced to jump into the Moroccan question.

The group had devoted its entire efforts to pushing through its proposals on Tunisia. Only a sub-committee had worked on preliminary drafts concerning Morocco, and the group was forced to hasten a final proposal to be put before the UN.

The mildly-worded resolution sponsored by Brazil and 10 other Latin-American countries expressed the hope that France and Tunisia would resume negotiations on urgent basis. It also appealed to them to reach a settlement in the spirit of the UN charter, refraining from acts or measures that might aggravate the present tension.

Star Photographer Arrested, Soon Released by Police

THREE RIVERS, Que. (CP)—Jack Gale, Toronto free lance photographer covering arraignment of Labor-Progressive party leader Boucher into custody by provincial police and later released.

Police said Gale was taking pictures without authorization Friday when the striker-defendants were going from the provincial police station to the courthouse next door.

Two officers took Gale before Sgt. Jean J. Gauthier, in charge of provincial police in Three Rivers.

Other photographers and newspaper men told Gauthier that special officer Paul Benoit, in charge of the provincial police detachments in Shawinigan Falls, seen them they could take pictures and cover the story without hindrance.

Gauthier then released Gale.

Swedish Airman Survives Grim Battle With Death

STOCKHOLM (AP)—A Swedish airman Thursday survived a grim, three — round battle with death waged in an accident-damaged jet fighter plane thousands of feet in the air.

Two air force jets, one piloted by Cpl. Jan Holmquist, 21, collided 9,000 feet over Stockholm during a routine exercise. One exploded seconds after the crash, its pilot parachuting safely.

Holmquist managed to keep his badly-damaged craft in the air and decided to head for a nearby military air field. But the rudders of his fighter failed and he had to jump.

He pushed the automatic release button which should have thrown him out of his seat. Then his overalls caught on a projective device. While he fought frantically to get out of the plane, it steadily lost altitude.

Holmquist finally succeeded in freeing himself when the fighter was only 1,500 feet off the ground. His parachute opened only 50 feet above the ground but brought him down safely a few seconds later.

The plane crashed and burned 100 yards from where Holmquist himself landed.

Queen Criticized

LONDON (Reuters)—A clergyJack Gale, Toronto Star photographer, Friday after three years.

The four-year-old Prince was recently given the pistol which, according to legend, belonged to Bonnie Prince Charlie, pretender to the throne who died in 1788.

Rev. D. Oliver, minister of a suburban Congregational church, Friday called the present "deplorable."

In his parish magazine he wrote: "Let us avoid giving weapons of violence to children, despite the debatable example from high society recently publicized." He admitted he was referring to the gift to Charles.

London Edition To be Published By New Method

MANCHESTER, Eng. (Reuters) —The Manchester Guardian announced its staff is a circular that it plans to print a London edition by a revolutionary publishing method utilizing photographic transmission.

It will enable almost perfect copies of the 131-year-old newspaper, which is seeking a higher national circulation, to appear in London without setting up a separate, costly printing plant. Present delivery methods mean some subscribers in southern England get the paper a day later.

Three or four years will elapse before the plan goes into effect because of delays in obtaining equipment.

Friday's message was written by the Guardian's 42-year old chairman and managing director, Laurence P. Scott. The circular says the paper will go to press in Manchester in the usual way. A proof of each page will be photographically transmitted to London, 182 miles away.

The film of the page there will be turned into a plate for lithographic printing.

FOG DELAYS TROOPS

OTTAWA (CP)—Fog and bad weather has set back by one day the arrival date of the last draft of troops of the 27th Canadian infantry brigade in Europe returning home for Christmas, army headquarters announced Friday. The 31 officers and 110 men aboard the liner Fraticonia will dock at Halifax Sunday instead of today.

POLICE CLERK FINED

MONTREAL (CP)—A clerk in the Montreal police traffic department has been dismissed for selling a sweepstake ticket to a police lieutenant who won $46,000,—it was announced Friday. The unidentified clerk sold a winning ticket on the Army-Navy Sweepstakes to Lieut. Lucien Charbonneau, who collected for Summer Rain's victory in the Manchester November Handicap.

Time Running Out for Suchan And Jackson

TORONTO (CP)—Time is running out for Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson, due to die next Tuesday for shooting a Toronto detective.

Their last hope of a further appeal to the courts faded Friday when they were refused permission to put their case before the Supreme Court of Canada. The Ontario court of appeal previously unanimously rejected their appeal against their murder conviction.

The only hope they have of beating the hangman's noose is executive clemency, exercised only rarely. By this process, the federal cabinet could reduce the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Unless granted executive clemency, the 30-year-old Jackson and Suchan, 24, will die on the gallows at the Don Jail, providing Toronto with its first double hanging in 21 years. William McFadden and Ray Hoirun died together for murdering a druggist in a 1921 holdup.

Jail officials say that, in the death row cells, Suchan reads his Bible and prays with a Roman Catholic priest who sees him two or three times a week. Jackson still spurns spiritual help.

FINAL VOTE FIGURES

WASHINGTON (AP)—The official vote for President on Nov. 4 was a record-smashing 61,547,881. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's winning popular vote total was 33,927, 548. Governor Adlai E. Stevenson, the loser, got 27,311,316. Other parties polled 308,986. Eisenhower's plurality was 6,236,232.

KEPT BODY 32 MONTHS

DETROIT (CP)—Russell H. Lemarsal, 30, who kept the body of his mother in the home he shared with her and another brother for 32 months after her death, was sentenced Friday to 90 days in jail. He pleaded guilty to failing to report the death. His brother, Stanley, 35, fatally shot himself as police broke into their rat-infested home last month.

British Labor Party Moving To Close Ranks

LONDON (Reuters)—The British labor party, stung by the increasing popularity of Winston Churchill's Conservatives, is moving to unite its right and left wings.

The party's policy-making executive board this week-end will draft a new foreign and domestic program on which Labor could fight the next general election.

The big problem is to work out a platform acceptable to both the right-wing moderates under Clement Attlee and the dissident left-wing minority under Aneurin Bevan.

Labor party unity will be helped by one fact—firm opposition to Conservative government moves to denationalize the steel and freight trucking industries, brought under public ownership when the Socialists were in power.

But this will not be enough to smother the long-simmering Attlee-Bevan feud unless more attention is paid to the views of the vocal left-wingers.

Bevan pulled out of the Labor cabinet 20 months ago, disagreeing with the official Labor stand on rearmament and "free" health service payments.

GUNMEN GET $25,000

DETROIT (CP)—Two gunmen held up the Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association Bank in northwest Detroit and escaped with $25,000 Friday. Police said the two, wearing dark glasses and with handkerchiefs tied across their faces, entered the bank through a rear entrance and herded employees into a vault. They then ordered one employee, Mrs. Elizabeth Beauchamp, 25, to get money from the vault and to empty the teller cash drawers.

Canadian Accused of Murder in U.S.

Maurice O'Dell, 27, faces extradition to the U.S. on a murder charge after his arrest by Buffalo police and RCMP in Hamilton, Ont. He is wanted in connection with the shooting of Buffalo jeweller Donald F. Hurd, shot in his store while it was being robbed by three men. Police have arrested a second man, Walter Griffin, 26, and are seeking the third. — Central Press Canadian.

One Man Hurt As 4 Vehicles Figure in Crash

CAMPBELLFORD — A farm tractor, a Hydro truck and two autos figured in a four-vehicle pileup on Highway 7 about five miles west of Havelock about 5.45 on Thursday afternoon.

Forty-year-old Reginald Burleigh of R.R. 2 Norwood, driver of the tractor, was the most seriously injured. He was thrown from the tractor and suffered face and head lacerations, several fractured ribs and severe shock.

The four vehicles involved were all travelling west at the time of the mishap. A car driven by Mrs. Winnifred Simpson, 36, of Havelock, came upon the tractor on the highway. Mrs. Simpson didn't see the slow-moving vehicle until too late, and struck it in the rear. The driver of the tractor, Burleigh, was thrown into the ditch along with his tractor. The Simpson car continued on, out of control, and wound up in the ditch west of the tractor.

A large Hydro truck, driven by Charles Puffer, 37, of Belleville, came upon the accident a few seconds after it happened, and the driver stopped suddenly. A third car, driven by Mrs. Dorothy Elliott of R.R. 1 Norwood, also was following the truck Mrs. Elliott failed to get her car stopped in time, and it ploughed into the rear of the Hydro truck. Neither Mrs. Elliott nor her passenger, Mrs. Herbert Beavis of Norwood, was injured, but the car suffered about $200 damage to the front end. The Hydro truck received about $25 damage.

The truck driver, Charles Puffer, was not injured nor was his passenger, Gerald Straub, 46, of Norwood.

Mrs. Simpson, driver of the car which struck the tractor, suffered bruises to her knees. Her daughter, Mary Ann, age 10, suffered slight injuries and cuts to her face and head and a third passenger, Mrs. May Hill of Havelock, complained of head and chest injuries.

The most seriously injured, Burleigh was taken to Peterborough Civic Hospital. His tractor received damage to the rear, while the Simpson car, which hit the tractor, was the most seriously damaged of the four vehicles. The right front fender, grill and windshield of the car were damaged to the extent of about $500.

Provincial Constables Archie Eady and George Rose of Campbellford investigated, but said no charges have as yet been laid.

165,000 Immigrants, 30,000 Fewer Than in '51, Admitted To Canada During the Year

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of immigrants admitted to Canada this year is expected to total 165,000, approximately 30,000 fewer than in 1951.

Final official figures for the year will not be available for several months, but estimates indicate they will be below last year.

A total of 194,391 immigrants were admitted last year, the largest for any year since 1913 when approximately 500,000 new citizens came to Canada.

700,000 Since War

Entries this year will boost to approximately 700,000 the number entering Canada since the end of the Second World War.

A total of 71,719 were admitted in 1946; 64,127 in 1947; 125,414 in 1948; 95,217 in 1949; 72,913 in 1950 and 194,391 in 1951.

The drop this year was believed to be due to the lack of demand for unskilled and certain other types of workers. The government announced it would not encourage certain categories of immigrants, such as textile workers, to come to Canada because there already is a surplus of textile help.

An assisted-passage program, inaugurated in 1951, was curtailed in 1952. Toward the end of the year only farmers and domestics could obtain government assistance to come to Canada.

Under the plan, the immigrant was loaned the money to pay his passage to Canada. He was allowed to repay the loan out of his earnings after reaching this country.

Winter Restriction

The government also decided to limit the entry of immigrants during the winter months when unemployment is at a peak.

Highlight of 1952 was an increase in the immigrants from the United Kingdom.

In the first 10 months of the year —the latest figures available—36,637 were admitted from the United Kingdom compared with 25,050 in 1951, an increase of 46 per cent.

Since the end of the last war, Canada has admitted approximately 240,000 immigrants from the United Kingdom; 59,469 from the United States; 181,000 from North European countries and 280,000 from other countries.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Tonight should see one of the best, if not the best, senior "B" battles staged in the Memorial Arena this winter. The clash brings together the pace-setting Stouffville Clippers from Toronto's outer perimeter and the Glen Boys.

The Clippers (this piece was written before the score of the Glens-Peles game was known) are riding precariously atop a group that is gradually becoming jammed tighter than a soup kitchen in a depression. At this writing, only five points separate the first four teams. The Clippers are out in front one point ahead of the Oshawa Truckers. Kingston Goodyears are two points behind and crowding the leaders are the Glen Boys two points further back.

The sherry crew from Clipperville have won seven of their eleven starts, losing three and tied one with the Orillia Terriers. They have been defeated twice by Kingston and once by Oshawa. The latter defeat came last week when the Motor City squad handed them their worst setback of the season, an 8-3 shellacking. And that means the Clippers won't be in an unbeaten mood when they step on Belleville ice tonight for the first time this season, in fact for a number of years, if ever.

And the Glens have prepared a post fourteen-man reception committee to give the Clips a suitable reception. Coach Gus Doran has the Glens tuned finer than an ancient Stradivarius, and the boys are rarin' to show their wares against the highly-rated Ontario senior "B" champions of 1951-52.

They won't lack confidence. They figure that any team that can whip the Kingston Goodyears twice in a row and then turn on the sherry Truckers from Oshawa as it did set a 7-4 setback, shouldn't feel any undue alarm over meeting the pace-setters.

It should be fast, furious and plumb full of sparkling hockey.

SAYS CLAUDE

The Glen Boys have played better hockey this season than the game they shoved last night in Peterborough when their win streak was broken by a 5-4 loss to the Petes. Coincidentally the Petes have been strengthened by the addition of Montgomery and two other players and from reports shrinkling in the 1951 Lock City team will be many additions before the season gets much older. Getting back to the game it was an pink tea affair but Referee Leo Harrison kept them well in check. Certainly sure he will not allow the boys to talk back for he gave two minors-docks for too much chatter.

The Glens were badly outplayed in the first frame but the last two were about even. Tony Parisi did not have a good night as he admitted himself but one cannot be good all the time. Ted DeGrey sparked the scorers with another three-goal effort and his line of Desjardins and Day looked the best of all thrown over the boards. The boys will not batt 1.000 cals and it will do the league a lot of good because it will bring all the teams closer together in the standing. It looked as if the Glens got a bad game out of their systems, and will be gunning for the league leaders when they hook up with Stouffville at the Memorial Arena this evening.

VETERAN H——

We may get ball for this but while Michael J. Rodden and Cecil Thompkins Perdue, Kingston and Peterborough sports servicemen, respectively, are in their corners waiting for the second round, this department has time and space to concur with the city editor who attended the Glens-Petes battle last night. The Glens' defeat was definitely a shocker-like-one for not only the Petes but the group as a whole. It "drug" the cellar-dwelling Littlesiders out of the doldrums into fifth place one point ahead of the Orillia Terriers. Back 'case they call 'em the "Pontiacs." Who's right?

It also gave the Dorun-less Glens the definite idea that "you can't win 'em all," and last night's setback at the hands of the win-hungry Petes should put them in battle-mood for tonight's scrap with the Stouffville Clippers. And after seeing them today, ten gets you five, they'll pin back the Clipperd ears tonight. That is if we can find somebody with a "ten."

RUSH! RUSH!

Connie Mack, the veteran manager, started a young pitcher several years ago. With men on first and second, he took a big windup, and each stole a base. When he came into the bench after the inning, Connie asked him gently,

"Why did you do that?"

"I didn't know there was anybody on," he answered.

The manager then called his ball team around, and said:

"Boys, after this I want you to tell him. There are no secrets on this club."

Will Rank Next to Famous Tam O'Shanter Tournament; May Conflict With Amateurs

MONTREAL (CP) — Establishment of a new golf tournament, carrying third largest prize money in the world at $55,800, is announced.

The announcement was made Friday by spokesmen for Labatt Brewery. The 72-hole tournament—the Labatt open—will have its inaugural at the Montreal Summerlea course next Aug. 30-31. Present plans call for the tournament to alternate each year between Montreal and Toronto.

Proceeds will go to charities in the city where it is played. Three trustees will determine the charity recipients.

Top prize is expected to be be tween $4,000 and $4,500 and special invitation players will go to low-scoring Canadian pros. A cup will go to the low-scoring amateur.

The United States Professional Golfers Association will help determine division of the money.

The tournament is co-sponsored by the Canadian PGA, which will get a guaranteed amount to forward development of golf in Canada.

The new tournament will rank in cash and prestige next to the Tam O'Shanter World and All-American tournaments in Chicago, with total prizes of $100,000 and the U.S. PGA tournament, worth about $75,-000.

The present big money tournament in Canada is the Canadian open—$15,000 this year with $3,000 top money. It is sponsored by Seagram's and Canadian Club breweries in the Seagram Cup.

In Toronto, Dick Young, a governor of the Royal Canadian Golf Association and past president of the Ontario Golf Association, criticized the new tournament because it conflicts with the Canadian amateur champions in Montreal.

"It will put a terrific crimp in our amateur finals because this tournament will be played the same Saturday that our amateurs start their play for the Willingdon Cup. It's unfortunate that the RCGA wasn't approached about it all," he said.

E. Harold Banks, assistant secretary of the RCGA, termed the new tournament "a great thing for golf."

In London, Ont., Ross (Sandy) Somerville, only Canadian to ever win the United States amateur championship, was enthused with the project.

"It's terrific," he said.

Jockey Misses 2nd Suspension

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Jockey Tony Despirito, suspended until Christmas Eve for faulty riding, escaped further punishment Friday. Another foul.

Tropical Park stewards, who sat down the country's leading rider Thursday for using his whip, Friday held the 17-year-old Despirito blameless for allowing his mount to lag in the stretch run for one on Thursday's program.

Jockeys Joe Culmone and Sammy Boulmetis testified they had warned Despirito before the race that his mount, Nighteye, was a bad bagger.

The stewards said evidence showed the horse bolted so sharply towards the rail that it took Despirito by surprise. They said the horse and not the rider was at fault.

Sport in Brief

NEW YORK (AP)—Referee Red Storey says he will take "in stride" criticism levelled against him by the owner of the American Hockey League's Syracuse club.

"It's all part of the game. I don't worry about somebody popping off," Storey told a reporter Friday. "I'll take it in stride."

Eddie Shore, executive vice-president of the AHL as well as owner of Syracuse Warriors, called Storey's handling of the Syracuse-Pittsburgh game Wednesday night "the worst I have seen in years."

Shore said Thursday night he plans to present his criticism to league officials at a meeting in Cleveland today.

TORONTO (CP)—The Grey Cup football final will be played here Friday when Orlando Mazza was fined $25 for scalping tickets to the Canadian amateur classic. Mazza testified Mazza, former Michigan State College and Washington Red skins footballplayer, sold a pair of $13 tickets worth $7 for $20 and had 13 other tickets when arrested.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Assumption High School and Patterson Institute are in the semi-finals in Friday night's senior round of the Windsor Collegiate Basketball Association Basketball League to remain tied for first place. Assumption downed Walkerville Collegiate 44-34 while Patterson defeated Forster Collegiate 54-51.

TORONTO (CP)—Coming Day and Early Rose each accounted for a heat in the featured trotting race at Dufferin Park Friday night.

In the first heat, Coming Day, owned by Ed Jones of Cowanda, N.Y., and driven by Alfred Day, edged Schuyler Hall in a photo finish.

Early Rose outlasted Coming Day in the photo finish of the second heat. All Expense, owned and driven by Art Harrison of Orangeville, scored a double heat victory in the secondary feature.

EDMONTON (CP)—Vern Kraze, former Canadian lightweight boxing champion, went to hospital with facial lacerations and head injuries suffered in a traffic accident Friday. The Negro bettler from Toronto, who is in Edmonton to see friends, was thrown from his car and knocked unconscious after the vehicle skid ded on a hill.

NEW YORK (AP)—Johnny Saxton, unbeaten Brooklyn welter contender, knocked out Luis Pere of Matanzas, Cuba, Friday night in 2:17 of the fifth round at Madison Square Garden when Perez crumpled suddenly under a body barrage and was counted out by the ref. Saxton's 34th straight win as a pro. Saxton weighed 147½, Perez 143.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Champion Joey Maxim and challenger Archie Moore were fined $100 each by the commission Friday as Dr. Milton Smith of the Missouri athletic commission held a preliminary medical examination for their 15-round heavyweight title scrap at St. Louis Wednesday. The 30-year-old Maxim and Moore, the No. 1 challenger got tag his first title opportunity at 36, passed the examination in a breeze.

TWO KILLED IN ALPS

KLAGENFURT, Austria, (Reuters)— A tiny cable car plunged out of control down the side and smashed to matchwood at the bottom Thursday night in the Alps. Two men aboard were killed and the third was severely injured. A cable broke and the car up the steep wire snapped and let the car soom 800 feet down.

Spectator Scrap Livens Western Hockey Match

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The fans got in the act in two Western Hockey League games and nearly disrupted play.

At Vancouver Friday night the Canucks downed New Westminster Royals 6-3 in a game which ended in a scrap with 150 spectators on the ice. Defencemen Louis Fontinato of Vancouver and Peter Durham of the Royals started a slugging match as the final whistle blew. Fans swarmed onto the ice. It was at least five minutes before the referees managed to break it up.

At Edmonton Calgary Stampeders blanked Edmonton Flyers 1-0 on Frank Ashworth's goal. A crowd of 4,000 howling fans raised a shower of abuse on referee Eddie Dever of Seattle as he handed out 23 penalties totalling 76 minutes. It was one of the most disorderly games at Edmonton in many a season.

Victoria Cougars defeated Saskatoon Quakers 4-1. Stan Maxwell tallied two goals for the Cougars with Doug Anderson and Stan Long firing singles. Chuck McCullough counted for the Quakers.

Larry Aurie, Pint Body, Gallon Heart Was 'Terror' of National League

DETROIT (AP) — One - time hockey star Larry Aurie, the pint-sized guy with a big fighting heart, is dead.

The former Detroit Red Wing forward died at Mt. Carmel Mercy Hospital Friday after suffering a stroke at the wheel of his car Thursday night. He was 47 years old.

Aurie, a midget in comparison to some of the rink aces of his era, played on the Detroit National Hockey League championship teams of 1936 and 1937.

He was right wing of the sensational power line of Aurie, Marty Barry and Herbie Lewis and was a terror of the league despite a weight which ranged only from 139 to 145 pounds.

Since retiring from hockey in 1943 after managing Pittsburgh in the hockey minors, Aurie had worked in Detroit.

He was born in Sudbury, Ont. Surviving are the widow, Ivy; his father, Harry Aurie of Sudbury; a brother, Joseph, of Sudbury, and a sister, Mrs. Ernsine McDonald, of Pembroke, Ont.

Requiem high mass will be sung Monday at St. Mary of Redford Roman Catholic church for Aurie. Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery here.

Aurie played big league hockey in the era of big Ching Johnson, Nelson Stewart, Eddie Shore and other gems of their girth. A small man like Aurie was badly handicapped.

However, Larry gave ice to nobody.

The Red Wings' general manager, Jack Adams, who was Aurie's coach, called Larry Aurie "most courageous player pound for pound in hockey."

In 1935 when Aurie left the Red Wings, his number "9" was retired from the Detroit roster on order of Jim Norris, the Wings' late owner.

Never before or since was this done for a Detroit player.

Aurie, of French-Irish parentage came up to Detroit in 1927 to start a 13-year career in the majors. The team then was known as Detroit Cougars, later the Falcons, and finally the Red Wings.

Aurie and Adams came to the Detroit club the same year.

The fans here adored Aurie for the way in which he would willingly mix it with bigger foes. He was also terrific at ragging the puck and could keep the house at Olympia on its feet for minutes at a time in sheer delight with him.

RIDES FOUR WINNERS

BOWIE, Md. (AP)—Apprentice Willie Lester continued to be the hottest rider at Bowie Friday, reaching off four straight winners to tie for the lead in the race for saddle honors. He missed a fifth in a photo finish. Lester's quartet brought his total of winners at the meeting to 20, even with the veteran Nick Shuk.

Montreal Wanderers were one of Canada's great hockey teams and it was 46 years ago today that old-time greats Jack Marshall and Dickie Boone signed Wanderer contracts for the 1906-07 season. That team won the Stanley cup three years in a row, from 1906 to 1908 inclusive, and again in 1910.

New Stadium Not Guarantee For Grid Team

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sports columnist Eric Whitehead says that any Vancouver pro football official who feel that Vancouver's new civic stadium will automatically guarantee entry into the Western Football Conference "are barking up the wrong decoy."

Writing in the Vancouver Province, Whitehead said: Friday that at least one club, Saskatchewan Roughriders, "will fight a Vancouver entry to the bitter death."

"The measured, bitter opposition of that one organization, with at least calculated moral support from Winnipeg, could well make the best-laid plans of Vancouver grid executives go astray."

Vancouver ratepayers Wednesday approved a $750 000 by-law for construction of a 32,000-seat sports stadium, to be used primarily for the British Empire Games here in 1954. The games committee will put up another $500,000.

Gridmen here welcomed passage of the by-law as a potent weapon in their fight to gain admittance to the western conference. Their first application was turned down a year ago.

Whitehead suggests that Vancouver would do better to seek an interlocking east-west schedule which would produce a national football league. Vancouver, he says might have a better chance to enter such a national circuit than the western conference.

Petes Flash Back to Form, Defeat Glens by 8-6 Score To Vault Into Fifth Place

Peterborough, Dec. 13 (Special) —Flashing back to form here last night, the Petes pulled out an 8-6 O.H.A. decision over the fast Belleville Glens to hurdle over Orillia in the standing and creep to within a game of the fourth place Quinte crew. The boomsters led 4-1 in the first period, but were only in front 5-3 going into the third chukker of a speedy, rugged joust. Belleville drew eight of the 13 penalties handed out by Referee Larry Heffering of Whitby, who kept the tussle under control. Jud Semark, of Glens, and Don Floyd of the Petes, drew misconduct penalties for uncomplimentary remarks to his ilks. Nearly a thousand fans viewed the lively struggle.

It was a crowd-pleasing fray all the way. Belleville were minus Ned Dorrn, while the Petes missed Curly Mason and Fred Gerweyr; but the Peterboro victory over Ellis outfit were minus Keith Montgomery, also, for most of the second period, after he was cut on the jaw in a collision by the boards with Ray Fyfe.

He returned in the third but is having an X-ray today to check on a possible fracture. Both sides turned on the steam from start to finish. They played good hockey and didn't spare the bodychecks.

Four New Goals

Jim Ellis showed four newcomers to the home crowd, Buck Legrow and Keith Montgomery going well on defence, Hartwell Eakins and Doug Hunter hustling plenty up front. The team turned in a neat display, but after the first period had to really battle against the young Belleville bunch, who kept fighting back and nearly evened the score several times.

Outstanding on the attack for the winners were Chum Fyrie, with three tallies, and Ted Collins with two goals and an assist. Lorne Eakins and Tookie Greenlaw each had a goal and assist in neat going, Morley Spiker got the other goal, while Junior Weir, Dean Wardhaugh and Buck Legrow had two assists each. Ray Harding turned in another good effort in the home game.

Ho Hum, Clawless Cats Lose Again, Redmen's Kennedy Beats 'Em Alone

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sam Kennedy has helped Brantford Redmen into fourth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A race practically single-handed.

Kennedy's latest victims were Hamilton Tigers whom he personally forced into their 20th straight loss Friday night by scoring all the Brantford goals in a 5-2 win. It brought his season's total to nine.

The Brantford victory at home moved them one point up on Chatham Maroons and Sarnia Sailors who share fifth spot.

Stratford Indians made Sarnia the victims of a 4-1 loss in Stratford as they stretched their league lead to six points. Chatham Maroons and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen broke into overtime before Kitchener clinched the 4-3 victory on a goal by Don Rope.

Wolves on Space

Guelph Biltmore Mad Hatters went on a scoring spree in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group to down Barrie Flyers league leading Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds 10-3.

South Porcupine Porkies scored a 7-5 win over Timmins-Schumacher Flyers in the Porcupine Mines Senior loop to move within one point of the second-place Flyers.

'Horse-Trade' Deals Pay Off

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Latest performances in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League seem to prove the old maxim, "a change is as good as a rest."

Bill Harrington, whose showing last season with Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts earned him the Peterboro Memorial Cup for most valuable player in the league, most valuable player on his team and best goal tender in the league, played his first game for Barrie Flyers Friday night and scored a shutout.

Harrington and Orv Tessier were principals in a trade that sent three Barrie players to Kitchener. Tessier, in his second game for the Flyers, scored twice and Garth Barrie downed Gall Black Hawks 6-0.

Spits Win

Kitchener, now in the cellar with Windsor Spitfires, scored a surprise 6-3 win over the third place Toronto St. Michael's Majors. Greenshirts proved they didn't get the short end of the Barrie deal as Ken Collins, L. Heffering, and Gib Bolivert performed brilliantly in goal. Ivan Tessier went for the first player involved.

Guelph Biltmores continued their skid from the cellar as St. Catharines Teepees trimmed them 5-3. Jim Billin, already this season missed centre Chick Chalmers who suffered a fractured skull. Other injuries on Wednesday.

Barrie took over second place in the Senior A race when Tessier's efforts Doug Mohns scored two and Terry Pender, former Barrie property, netted the other.

Real Mongeon, Bob McCord, Jack Bownass and Buddy Horne added goals to Collins' two for Kitchener. Ron Murphy and Cliff Jery and Jim Logan scored for St. Mike's.

The Teepees scored five in the first period to establish a margin that Toronto couldn't overcome. Chuck Marshall rapped in two with Ron Gendron, Jack Gordon, Bill Mateka, Ed Schinkel and Hughie Barlow. Ron Murphy accounted for two Guelph goals. Cliff Jerome scored the other.

In junior action tonight, Kitchener visits St. Catharines, Windsor plays at Oshawa, Guelph travels to Barrie and Toronto Marlboros continue their Quebec tour with a game at Three Rivers.

Sunday the Marlboros get into action against Montreal Royals while Windsor is at St. Michael's and Montreal Canadiens play Quebec Citadelles in Quebec.

Buffalo Wins Over Syracuse

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Russ Lowe's goal with 43 seconds left to play gave Buffalo Bisons a 4-3 victory over Syracuse Salt Kings in an American Hockey League game.

The Warriors fought back Friday night from a 3-1 deficit to tie the score early in the third period. Lowe's goal gave Buffalo a lead for the winning tally.

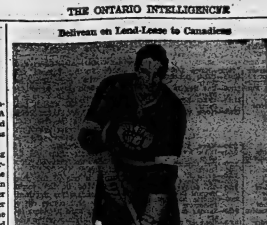
Minneapolis Millers and Rochester Mustangs were both Division 2 winners in the Porcupine Mines Senior loop to move within one point of the second-place Flyers.

Bill Durnan's Rouyn Flashes top the league.

The Flashes' ace forward, Norman Connolly, leads the scoring race with 22 points. Bill Scott of Kirkland Lake Teeks is second with 20 points.

Opposing Sam Kennedy's efforts for Brantford were Ben Divinski and Al Ritchie who scored for Hamilton.

George Aitken scored two for Stratford. Lloyd Ferguson and Billy Flick added them to their two. Harry O'Connor ruined Jerry Hesse's bid for his first shutout of the season.



Besides Rope's winning tally, Jack MacKenzie scored two for Kitchener and Don Clark notched the other. George Edwards turned in a fine effort for Chatham as he slipped three goals in the Kitchener net in less than five minutes.

Tatter McClelland topped Sudbury's scoring with two. Others were by Yacker Flynn, Johnny Mercier, Marcel Bonin, Andy Mileo, Red McCarthy, Roly McLaughan, Shane Kuupp and Gord Neale. Roy Hammond netted two goals and Ronnie Lay, Jim Johnston and Terry Reynolds each for the Greyhounds.

Lou Del Monte and Eddie Kullis sparked the Porkies with two goals each. Terry Talentinos, Billy Adams and Ken MacKay clicked for the others. Dennis Morello potted two for the Flyers. Others were scored by Brian Robinson, Ken Trevenna and Johnny Kennedy.

In the NOHA tonight Sault Ste Marie (Mich.) Indians visit the Greyhounds and Sudbury Wolves play at Timmins Play Trappers. Sunday the Greyhounds invade Indian territory.

In the OHA Chatham is at Owen Sound Saturday while Hamilton visits Sarnia and Stratford meets Kitchener.

Quebec Aces' highly publicized ceintre, Jean Beliveau, has consented to don Montreal Canadiens' colors and play three games on lend-lease with the NHL club. Beliveau's release originally was sought by the Canadiens, but he has repeatedly declared he prefers to remain with the Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League. Under Monday's agreement, Beliveau's services with the Aces will not be changed. He will play with Canadiens in Montreal, Dec. 18, against New York Rangers, and Dec. 26 against Boston Bruins. His third game will be against Bruins in Boston. — Central Press Canadian.

Luckless Habs Place Faith In Newly-Acquired Stewart; Win Twice Since He Arrived

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Selke says Gaye Stewart, veteran Toronto Hockey Leaguer bought this week by Montreal Canadiens from New York Rangers, "may be . . . a hock bringer." This week-end should tell. The Habs meet the two top teams—Chicago Black Hawks at home tonight and the league-leading Detroit Red Wings in the Motor City Sunday night.

So far it would appear Stewart is bringing the Canadiens luck. Currently in the lower regions of the league, the Habs have won both games since Gaye joined them at Toronto Wednesday. The whole team seemed to come to life.

A couple of wins would give the fourth-place Canadiens a terrific boost. Currently they are one point behind Boston Bruins, and one ahead of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

The study City boys have 30 points, eight more than Chicago and a victory for them, plus a loss for the Wings at Toronto tonight, would hoist them to the top of the heap again. And another win over Boston Bruins Sunday night could help the cause tremendously.

In the Maple Leaf Gardens game, a pair of rival captains are shooting for the league scoring lead. Detroit Ted Lindsay, Detroit captain, needs only one. Toronto's Ted Kennedy has to get four.

If the Leafs clear tonight's hurdle they should have an easy journey Sunday night when they meet the luckless New York Rangers.

Frank Boucher's crew, plagued with one misfortune after another, received another blow Wednesday and Friday.

From Port Arthur came word that veteran Edgar Laprade, called

Italy's Davis Cup Team Will Be 'Pie' for Americans, Says Talbot

By GAYLE TALBOT

BRISBANE (AP)—Italy's Davis Cup tennis team staggered through to victory over a surprisingly strong pod Indian team today, but showed nothing to indicate it might give the United States a hard time in the interzone final at Sydney next week-end.

It appears doubtful, in fact, that either of the Italian singles players, Fausto Gardini or Roberto Del Bello, can give Tony Trabert the sort of lighthearted competition the young sailor needs before meeting the American Davis Cup challenge round at Adelaide, Dec. 29, 30, 31.

Gardini gave his team victory by defeating tall Somnat Misra of India 8-6, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in the first of today's singles and in the only matches. Then, with all pressure off, little Nanda Misra of India teamed up for the series by spanking Rolando Del Bello 6-2, 8-6, 4-6, 6-3. That made the score Italy 3-2 in Italy's favor and represented a victory for Italy's No. 2 player. The Indian players who were virtually unknown to Western tennis fans until they came here.

Although he was playing on nerve alone Misra put up a surprising stand against Italy's 22-year-old ace.

Misra's middle was tightly bandaged to hold in a hernia which he suffered in Friday's doubles. He was unable to employ his booming service with any real effect and was in severe pain throughout.

Gardini won out in the end only because his strange and weird backhand improved under steady pounding as the match progressed. The lanky youngster hit an especially hot streak after Misra took a 3-1 lead in the fourth set. He won the next four games, two of them at love, to serve up the decision.

'Dead-Pan' Ford Heads Tourney

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Deadpan Doug Ford, standing off a great first-place bid by handsome Jack Burke, Jr., today had stroke lead in the $10,000 Miami open golf tournament with a 36-hole six-under par score of 138.

Ford, a youthful Harrison, N.Y., player who ranks eighth among the golf money winners this year, fourth year as a professional, fired the second straight 69 Friday over the 7,010-yard Miami Springs municipal course.

Only one of three Canadians in the tournament qualified for the third round. Stan Horne of Montreal shot a 71-74—145.

Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon shot a 76-74—150 and Stan Leonard of Vancouver a 75-73—148.

Burke's total was 135.

Gaels Lose

CANTON, N.Y. (AP)—St. Lawrence University Friday handed Queen's University its third straight loss in international basketball competition, 76-58.

The Kingston quintet threatened briefly in the second quarter, but by half-time the Larries had pulled a 31-26 lead. They increased the points in the third quarter and 18 in the last.

Forward Howie Kane led St. Lawrence with 19 points. Capt. Cal Murphy topped the Canadian scorers with 14.

ASK THE MAN WHO NEEDS SOME

Are You and Your Boy Friends?

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solomar Tables).

The other day I was talking to an old friend. This man had lost his wife when he was in his late forties. He had remarried some years later and, at the age of 65, the stork had left at his home a baby boy.

Congratulations were very much in order. It was always a new arrival that we had been talking. Father was jubilant, despite the added advanced years.

"I'm the luckiest fellow in this world," he declared. "That baby will keep me young for the next 15 or 20 years. Just think! I can teach him to fish for trout, hunt birds, shoot deer, play golf, shoot skeet and trap, do all the things that we enjoy and which we know will be good for him. I'm one lucky guy."

I agreed with him. My son was born when I was 32 years old. Believe me, he has kept me young. Down through the years I have lived his youth with him, teaching him the things I think he should know.

Son Became Expert

When he was a baby, barely out of the toddling stage, I bought him a toy set of ten pins. Instead of using the ball that came with them, I rigged up a casting rod of sorts from the tip of an old bass fly rod.

His baby fingers were not equal to the manipulation of a casting reel, so we used an enameled line, which wouldn't tangle, and we would attach a small sinker weight at those toy ten pins.

Not being a fool, the youngster trusted me to keep the score. To my surprise, it took only a week or so for him to know how to use the old man's ears back in that lightly pre-bedtime casting game.

When we had guests for dinner, we had a dozen duck pins for a prize them. I would tell the boy to get his little casting rod and station him in the corner of the room. Then I would drop my sinker on the floor and tell him to hit it with his casting weight. To our mutual delight, he rarely missed. After all, he had learned to pick off ten pins, so hitting a sinker was child's play. Like a napkin was a sitting duck.

At the age of three he landed his first trout. I had taken the family to a fishing cabin for the week-end, so I took the youngster, still a baby in rompers, to the nearest trout brook.

Of course, he was too little to get his little casting rod and station him in the corner of the room. Then I would drop my sinker on the floor and tell him to hit it with his casting weight. To our mutual delight, he rarely missed. After all, he had learned to pick off ten pins, so hitting a sinker was child's play. Like a napkin was a sitting duck.

At the age of three he landed his first trout. I had taken the family to a fishing cabin for the week-end, so I took the youngster, still a baby in rompers, to the nearest trout brook.

Forgot Instructions

When he felt that familiar thrill of a fish tugging at the end of the line, he was the youngest needs and general upbringing. Forgot it, I'll say. Thus, they relegate themselves into the "old man" class and are so referred to.

Now, in all honestly I believe that my son thinks of me as "the old man." Instead, his letters reflect the impression that he misses sorely our days together with fly rod and shotgun. And that my friends, is the way it should be.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The question often arises as to how two long suits should be bid. In Horse Sense we show the exact length of each. All we have to do is follow the simplest rules. With two suits of equal length, first bid the higher rank. When one suit is longer than the other, bid the longer suit first. Take the case of the South hand shown here:

♠ A Q 7 6 2
♥ None
♦ 9 3
♣ K Q 9 8 7 2

South opens with a bid of one club; the longer of the two suits. Suppose North responds with a bid of one no-trump. South now jumps to three spades. The jump is forcing to at least a game.

Suppose north now says three no-trump. South makes a third bid of four spades. Having rebid spades they must be at least five cards long. If so, how many clubs must south have?

Since clubs were bid before spades, the clubs must be longer. Since spades are known as being five cards long, the clubs must be six long. Else how could the clubs be longer if not at least six?

Thus, although the clubs were bid only once, partner knows there are six cards in clubs, and the hand contains five spades. Having this way shown, 11 black cards there can be only two cards in the hand.

You can readily see how valuable this is to the responder. If he has three cards in each black suit he knows there are nine clubs and eight spades in the pair.

If he has two cards in each black suit he knows there are at least eight clubs and seven spades in the pair. If he has three clubs and two spades he knows of nine clubs and seven spades.

The importance of this is so evident that it seems a shame so many players are unfamiliar with its efficiency. Or avoid it. Try it on for size.

CAMPBELLFORD

Kinsmen Club Holds Dinner Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD. — The Kinsmen Club held their final meeting of the year on Monday evening with a dinner meeting at the Town House.

President John Hill introduced a slate of pressing business which was dealt with by the members. Forrest R. Dennis and a new Kinsman, Douglas Fee, were named to manage the Kinsmen hockey team in the kids' Town league, Mr. Dennis handled the chore most satisfactorily last winter.

A decision to experiment with the fortnightly meeting nights with a view to finding the evening of the week most suitable, finally rested on a motion, to hold a Wednesday night meet instead of the usual Monday date. This experiment will be given a try on Wednesday, January 7. In view of the closeness of Christmas, the latter date was named as the next meeting date at the Trent House.

The club also decided to operate a free bus to the turkey bingo at Edgewater Park.

Stores Open

Stores in Campbellford will remain open on Wednesday from now until Christmas. This custom has been followed in former years.

A by-law of the town provides for the suspension of Wednesday closing for the month of December, but in recent times, most stores have not taken advantage of this until the second Wednesday before Christmas.

During the remainder of the year, stores in the town close all day Wednesday.

RENAMED PRESIDENT

NEW DELHI (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru has been renamed president of the governing Congress party for a two-year term, the party office announced today. He was unopposed. The announcement said two other candidates had been nominated by state committees but both withdrew in Nehru's favor.

AMBASSADOR RESIGNS

BEIRUT, Lebanon. (AP) — A spokesman for the office of roving U.S. Ambassador Edwin J. Locke said today that Locke has resigned his state department post effective Jan. 1. Locke returned to the United States last weekend after delivering a speech here in which he criticized U.S. economic policy in the Middle East.

NEW BELGIAN ARMS

BRUSSELS. (AP)—The House of Representatives Thursday approved a military program giving Belgium 180,000 men in the armed forces next year in addition to 30,000 in anti-aircraft defence. The government program now goes to the Senate.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Sam Goldwyn made another speech this week. And when Sam opens his mouth, he usually says something controversial.

The event was the annual panhandle dinner of the Screen Publicists Guild. That's the one night of the year when press agents put the newspaper people on the pan and give them a frying.

Goldwyn, commenting on the quality of news and publicity from Hollywood, said:

"Hollywood is one of the most important places in the world. There is no excuse for the mess of phony news that comes out of Hollywood. It is hard to blame the public for skepticism over the stories from here."

He called on the press agents to "restrain some of the fancier flights of imagination that bring scorn and ridicule on the motion picture industry."

"Hollywood needs good public relations just as it needs good pictures," he continued, calling for a "return to decency and honesty" in publicity.

Goldwyn's remarks bring up an ancient issue in the movie business. Actually, Hollywood is a split personality. Half of it wants to be respectable and honored in national community. The other half is wedded to the circus and thrives on the ballyhoo that goes with it.

Whenever business gets bad, Hollywood runs to public relations. It launches campaigns with slogans like "motion pictures are your best entertainment" or "movies are better than ever."

But usually the town concludes that public relations doesn't sell movies. Publicity does the selling job.

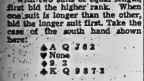
GI GETS LIFE

AUGSBURG, Germany, (Reuter)—Pfc. Harry Wayne Hall of the U.S. Army was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday for rioting in a German tavern and raping the barmaid.

William Kennedy and Jim Arness vie for the affection of lovely Laura Elliott in the swashbuckling adventure film "Two Lost Worlds," which will open Monday at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre. 2nd feature is "Prehistoric Women" filmed in Cinecolor.

AT THE BELLE

"Les Miserables" Offered in All Its Greatness



From one masterpiece has been achieved another. The new screen version of Victor Hugo's immortal "Les Miscrables" which Twentieth Century-Fox presented at the Belle Theatre yesterday vividly recreates a classic that will live as long as great books are and great stories recounted.

New to moviegoers of the present generation and newly effective in the modern ways of the screen as far as oldsters are concerned, this "Les Miserables" exceeds action and acting, without sacrifice to the story's searching emphasis or its massive canvas. The world of France a century ago is perceived through the magnificent duel of spirit between Jean Valjean, who would become the hero of the piece, with the wise justice of humanity, and Inspector Javert, who knows how to uphold the law's sanctity only through inflexible application of its letter.

In these key roles, Michael Rennie and Robert Newton render the pivotal performances. Rennie undergoes astonishing change of character through the different phases of Javert's relentless man-hunt, and Newton infuses with unforgettable life-blood the indelible role of Javert, surely one of the most noteworthy in all literature. These brilliant performances share the spotlight with Debra Paget's wistful beauty as Valjean's young ward and the always superb Edmund Gwenn's touching exactment of a Bishop.

Supporting parts are tellingly played by Sylvia sidney, all the more welcome for the infrequency of her appearances these days, and Cameron Mitchell, very much on the rise since his "Death of a Salesman" assignment.

But in the long run it is not the cast, but the property itself, that is the real star of "Les Miserables." Victor Hugo originally endowed it with such panoramic size and dramatic scope as only the handful of greatest works ever contain, and the apprecitive sponsors of the current film edition have faithfully Newton infuses with unforgettable life-blood the indelible role of Javert, surely one of the most noteworthy in all literature. These brilliant performances share the spotlight with Debra Paget's wistful

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR SUNDAY, DEC. 14, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Practical sort of day with useful interests first. All urgent work, especially that requiring courage and endurance, should have very success. Spiritual devotion due.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—It can be pleasant as well as productive time for you thoughtful, dependable folks. However, avoid excesses, and do go to church.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Mercury rays encourage mental activity, good reading, music, the fine arts in general. Personal affairs honored in new way.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Favorable Sun and Saturn aspects today honor unselfish deeds, dealing with those in authority. Urgent laborious work honored.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Should be happy inspiring day for you lucky folks. Make it so by honoring God first, then attending to duties cheerfully and relaxing in free hours.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Same auspicious outlook as Gemini's. You can also garner benefits from benefic Sun and Saturn aspects. Day favors essential work, healthy relaxation.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—While your natal Venus is all in tendency now, other planets send forth rays you can benefit by them if you act in accordance with God's blessing.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Fine indications for you if you are up to date. Day essential laborious work. Best when you can.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Retarding influences from yesterday's Jupiter aspect warn against carelessness. Otherwise, day is fine to boost necessary matters, religion, rest.

December 23 to January 20 (Capricorn)—Moon and Sun's excellent aspects should spur you to big achievement now. Manage include church services; also some wholesome fun.

January 21 to February 20 (Aquarius)—No time for flimsy thoughts, deeds or friendships. Worthy activities, purposeful objectives encouraged. Today should inspire you to greater good effort.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Similar to Scorpio today. Make a special effort to aid good causes, to pray for world peace and those unfortunate people under tyranny's rule. Thank God for our blessings.

YOU BORN TODAY: You have distinctive charm and strong characteristics, possess many fine attributes and, if true to your finer instincts, have few faults. You are enterprising, generous and of pleasant disposition. Splendid months ahead for advancement. Birthdate of Gen'l Jas. Doolittle, noted flyer; Tycho Brahe, great astronomer.

EX-MAYOR DIES

DETROIT (CP) — Richard W. Reading, sent to prison for accepting graft soon after he realized his life-long ambition to become mayor of his native Detroit, died Tuesday. He was 70. Mr. Reading, elected to a two-year term as mayor in 1927, had been in poor health for several years.

RE-DISTRIBUTION

China has always kept a precarious balance between her natural food resources and the size of her population. When something went wrong with the food supply because of a flood, a drought, an epidemic, a war or revolution, five or 10 million Chinese died of hunger. Poverty does not always lead to death but it can make life miserable. The peasant who had no food in reserve to carry him from one season to another was obliged to sink into debt each time some unforeseen trouble assailed him. Interest rates varied between 40 and 60 per cent and sometimes ran as high as 180 per cent. If the peasant was unable to pay on time the moneylender, who was usually the mandarin, seized his land.

Re-Distribution Not New

The redistribution of land is not a new thing in China. Every political regime has been forced into land reform at least once in three or four centuries.

The peasants knew China say that if Chiang Kai-shek had given the peasants land, the Communists would never have come to power. It was at the head of the list of reforms proposed by the Kuomintang. But Chiang Kai-shek was deeply involved with the mandarins to dispossess them for the benefit of the peasants.

It is hard to see how Chiang Kai-shek's armies, numbering more than 3,000,000 men and magnificently equipped with American weapons, could be so shamefully humbled by Mao-tse-tung's forces which were vastly inferior in numbers and in arms. The most likely explanation is this: Chiang Kai-shek's soldiers were fighting a war Mao-tse-tung was handing out land to the peasants in the territories which he occupied. As they were peasants themselves as well as they wanted to be free of the tyranny of the nobles and money-lenders, they deserted Chiang Kai-shek and went over to the enemy. In this way, whole army corps practically disappeared. The powerful Kuomintang army melted away overnight while the red-starred national army of liberation increased in power.

Life is Cheap

They say that agrarian reform cost 20,000,000 lives in Communist China. It's probably true. But you must remember that life was cheap and priced very high in China. Every revolution rests on an incredible number of executions. It would be unusual for a conquering general to wipe out the whole population of a town. For example, during the 19th century in the city of Yunnan, the Moslem rebellion killed 700,000 to 800,000 after a general had passed through there. China is simply waiting faithful to the best Chinese tradition when she cuts off the heads of her enemies.

Agrarian reform is such intense interest to the Chinese people that it has inspired books, plays and operas. Every all the Chinese call all the operas which are being presented in China—each of which has been going on a long time—use the theme of the unhappy peasant, the harsh money-lender and the downfall of the debtor when he is obliged to hand over his daughter to appease his creditor.

Reds Become Conservatives

There are 3,000,000 Chinese living on land given to them by their late-lamented foes. They have been Communists yesterday but they are conservatives today. Those people do not understand the Chinese peasant's devotion to his land say that these 3,000,000 Chinese would fight to the last man to keep what the revolution has given them.

Can anyone really believe that under these conditions Chiang Kai-shek has the ghost of a chance of getting his foot on continental China? In Chinese eyes he personifies foreign intervention in Chinese affairs and the memory of the mandarins in their treatment of the peasants.

It seems to me that in picking Chiang Kai-shek, the Americans have backed the wrong horse.

DEMORESTVILLE

COUPLES' CLUB REOPENED

Demorestville — The Demorestville Couples' Club reopened recently with Northport Club as guests. There were 45 in attendance. Don Bothwell with Marion Sprague at the piano, led a singsong after which Gertrude Alder welcomed the guests.

The worship service was conducted by Rev. K. Cutler, of Northport. Mrs. Malett read the Scripture. Rev. Cutler gave an interesting talk, closing with the "Old Rugged Cross" and prayer.

The December meeting is to be held at Fairmount church on December 10th with an exchange of Christmas gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Williams spent Tuesday in Belleville.

Mr. Mac Anderson called on Mr. Alex. Anderson and Jack on Tuesday.

Mrs. Roy Covert spent last week visiting relatives in Toronto.

Wednesday evening the Girls' Club met at the home of Miss Lois Saliana.

Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Gorsline were: Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kent, Arlene and Gail, of Consecon.

Mrs. Amelia Howell and Mrs. Beatrice Howell spent Tuesday in Belleville.

Another bingo in the Demorestville hall Friday evening, sponsored by the Elks, of Picton.

Hall's fateful auction proved a popular drawing card on Saturday evening and the lights burned late in the new village, testifying to the interest shown in the program. Congratulations to the sponsors, Picton Rotary Club.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon — Mrs. F. Sheffield and Margaret spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barlow, of Corbyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McInroy, of Moira.

Christmas party meeting was held at Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Wright's home on Wednesday evening with Mr. Alex. McCurdy in charge.

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Sam Baldwin, of Ivanhoe.

Mr. Leslie Dodds, of Edmonton, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaw, of Madoc, were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vardy and Patsy, of Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hammond, of Oshawa, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond.

Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Norman and Barry were dinner hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Wright.

Mrs. John Jeffrey spent a few days recently in Toronto.

ALBURY

'Painting As a Hobby' Topic at W.I. Meeting

ALBURY. — The December meeting of the Redmerville W.I., was held recently at the home of Mrs. Earl Conner with about 25 present.

The home was decorated appropriately for the Christmas meeting. Each member took a white gift for the Picton Children' Aid.

The president, Mrs. George Roblin, opened the meeting. Several items were given.

Mrs. Roblin then asked the convener, Mrs. Beuford Peck, to take charge. June Bowerman gave two solos. Current Events were given by Mrs. Earl Onderdonk. Everyone enjoyed the humorous reading given by Mrs. Ronald Giles. Diane and Carol Bonter sang a duet.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. Peck introduced Mrs. Bert Simpson, who gave an interesting talk on "Painting For a Hobby". Mrs. Simpson displayed several of her paintings, which everyone enjoyed.

A vote of thanks was extended to all who helped on the program.

The hostess and lunch committee served refreshments.

CONDUCT CANCER SURVEY

MEMPHIS, Tenn (AP)—Thirty women who never dreamed they had cancer were found to be suffering from the disease in preliminary phases of a mass cancer detection survey here. The survey, under way three months but scheduled to last taree years, is the country's first large-scale attempt to detect cancer in women. About 10,000 women already have been examined. Sixty-three were found to have cancer.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR MONDAY, DEC. 15, 1952.

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Facts and figures count vitally in today's outlook. Anything not fully believed by you but don't feel fearful or reluctant to forge ahead.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—All elert students of present conditions should feel assured about careful endeavor. Don't hesitate to take your place in this responsive period.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—You can carry things to happy conclusions by being your real self. Think in terms of service, be diplomatic but take nothing for granted.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Keep your feet on the ground, don't plunge without forethought this changeable period. During a.m., look for some unexpected change for better.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—A critical and important time is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Be ready to show your versatility. Gains ahead! Some heart interests should wait.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—You are innately upright and seldom offend. Today, watch your own interests better. You have ability, use it well and now and achieve.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Take time to look around. Seek new means (without forsaking old ones) and still wise counsel; new clients. Avoid useless legal or personal disputes.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Some helpful influences fading, but others building up. However, guard against overconfidence, isolating yourself from better knowledge.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—You can do much but also, through negligence or lack of proper incentive, you can turn to less lawful ways.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Make vital decisions today. Believe you can do at least half of Carpenters' battle is won. Your mentality and general capability is excellent.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Noble thoughts are fine, but they won't carry you far unless you put them into effect. Lean on what has clicked in the past, also modernize where conditions need it.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Planetary outlook favorable for business and personal matters. Under these benefic rays you can reap fine rewards if you follow the tide of honesty profitable waters.

YOU BORN TODAY: you are straightforward, clear sighted, efficient in your dealings. Will cut corners to get a job done, to get to the heart of things; usually just but sometimes too caustic. Curb that tartness. You can go far in profession, trade, or other activity if you properly develop your fine talents.

Harry Meldrum Moore

"Oh, you're going to like it, Hugh," Curly grinned, "you're going to like this more than anything you ever liked in your life. Get in there, boy, and get him!"

Curly let Hugh Maitland through the door, closed it tight after him.

"They there, Curly" Hugh yelled from inside, "keep the door open. I want to see it here," and Curly said, "I can't open it, Hugh—I've got my foot against it."

Left to his thoughts, Curly Brown thought that this was a most unkind, cruel trick to play on a friend. Full well he knew who was in that room. But this was all for Hugh Maitland's good. What Hugh lacked in self-confidence—the knowledge that while he was not a trained fighter—could would manage, if put to the test. After all, it was his wish that Hugh Maitland be the village's next constable, a constable that might be looked up to as one who would fearlessly maintain law and order, and one to whom the people might look up. A man to fill such a position must be worthy of his duties.

For long minutes not a sound came from within the dressing room. Curly wondered if Hugh had let him down, had quit. But, then, one mad gropling around in the dark to grapple with another man who would try to evade him, must have time—lots of time. Then all of a sudden it came. There was a thud, a series of thuds that shook the floor, there was the crash of a table. There were muffled voices, strained, gasping, distorted voices. There was one big commotion that threatened to burst the walls. Then a silence, and finally a voice, "Open up, Curly, I've got him!"

His shirt was torn from his back, his face cut and bleeding, Hugh Maitland dragged forth his prisoner—a prisoner who had fared as badly as he except that his black hood, dyed with blood, hid the extent of his injuries. Once outside, Hugh pulled the hood from the man's head, and jumped back in surprise.

"My God, Curly!" he shouted, "this—this is Bill Frost!"

"Of course," Curly laughed, "who did you think it was—the black monster?"

"Well, well, well!" Hugh stammered, but it was plain to be seen that he was proud of what he had done.

From the very beginning I suspected that Bill Frost was the Hood, and Aaron Sweet will bear me out in this," Curly explained. "Tonight when he came into the kitchen, holding that gun, I knew I hadn't made any mistake. The set of his shoulders, his flat-footed stance, the smell or wine there was no doubt about it. And since this was a good chance, Hugh, for you to show what was in you, I sent you in there to bring him out. Y'know. I've already recommended you to succeed Sweet as constable."

"Me—a constable!" Hugh questioned, but it was obviously pretence. "Now, who's going to pay for my clothes?"

"The county will," came the voice of Constable Sweet as he strode up the hall, Billy Tough close at his heels. "Just make out your bill, Hugh, I'll see that it's paid." And then the old constable started to hand out some bouquets which Curly stopped him.

"Hugh Maitland performed a brave act when he went in there and brought the Hood out," Curly insisted, "but in my humble opinion, the hero of this night is Billy Tough. Billy Tough is the man who blocked the door and kept this man from making his get-away. Were you frightened, Billy?"

"You bet," Billy admitted sheepishly. Next day Billy Tough was the talk of the village and the recipient of some much-needed clothes from the businessmen.

Since procrastination in the townships council had also kept up construction of the jail, Sweet locked Bill Frost in a section of the hotel. In the morning he would take him to Bellevue. Bill Frost was more slippery than anyone ever figured he was, and when Curly was driving into the Depot that same morning, he met an armed posse of villagers who had set out to bring Frost in "dead or alive." Late in the afternoon the posse returned—unsuccessful.

The authorities came up from Bellevue, investigated the circumstances surrounding Frost's escape and relieved Aaron Sweet of his badge as constable. But they couldn't take away his position as bailiff. And Hugh Maitland, who would have refused the job a few days before, was sworn in as constable.

The new constable's first duty was to drive Bailiff Sweet to Bill Frost's property in the Lawson Settlement to seize his effects and put them up for sale. Frost's family idle for three years. Then they were bought in for taxes by a neighbor. As for Bill Frost, alias the Hood, his face was never seen in the district again.

At two o'clock in the morning of Saturday, October 13, there was born at Hard Acres to Mr. and Mrs. Curly Brown a daughter. She was to be christened "Heather Ann" after her paternal grandmother.

When the young lady came into the world that memorable morning, her father, sitting in his favorite chair before the fireplace, was doing his best to remain calm at such an anxious time. Dr. Baird and Aaron Sweet were upstairs with Hazel. For all Curly knew, Peter was asleep in his room.

Curly's heart skipped a beat. He was on his feet. He had heard the cry of a child. He tiptoed to the kitchen door and listened. His face broke into a grin. Son or daughter? After a few seconds he heard nurse and doctor talking, and then, black bag in hand, Dr. Baird was coming downstairs, muttering.

Curly stepped into the kitchen and waited. As Dr. Baird reached the bottom, Curly met him with a grin.

"What did I hear you say?" Curly asked, then, "say, doc, doesn't a fellow with black curly hair ever get a break around here?" Peter was also blue-eyed and he was a blonde.

"Hmmmph!" Dr. Baird snorted, "Listen, now, to who is asking for a break! You've already got more breaks than you deserve, you big homely buzzard."

"Call me names, doc, and I won't pay your fee," Curly warned.

Dr. Baird stepped towards the door, turned to point a finger at him.

"Listen you, Councillor Curly Brown! You must never talk to me like that again. One of these days and brought the Hood out." Curly admitted, "but in my humble opinion, the hero of this night is Billy Tough, Billy Tough is the man who blocked the door and kept this man from making his get-away. Were you frightened, Billy?"

"You bet," Billy admitted sheepishly. Next day Billy Tough was the talk of the village and the recipient of some much-needed clothes from the businessmen.

CAMPBELLFORD

25 Delegates Attend Presbytery Meeting

Campbellford — A meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening, with about 25 delegates from various points in the district at the conference.

Elders and ministers from Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Norwood, Millbrook, Nestleton, Lakefield, Peterborough, Westwood and Keene attended. The Hastings-Warkworth charge is at present vacant and was not represented.

Topics Discussed

Three main topics of discussion were on the agenda. First: "Is Christ Central in Your Second: "The Extent of Christ's Lordship, and third: "May the Church Aid Rebellion?" Discussion centred around these three topics concerning the declaration of faith concerning church and nation.

Arrangements for implementing the $2,600 minimum stipend were discussed, as was a minimum car allowance for ministers.

It was particularly noted, during the meeting, that the mission fields of Rockcroft, Buckhorne and Lakehurst have made exceptionally fine progress during the year. The churches at Rockcroft and Lakehurst have been renovated and considerable repairs carried out.

Electricity Installed

Electricity has been installed in the Lakehurst church, and the lighting system is one of the finest to be found in a church of its kind. New pulpit steps and a new carpet were also added at Lakehurst. A new roof was placed on the Rockcroft church and considerable money had been spent on the inside of the building.

The meeting started at 10 a.m. and adjourned at 2 p.m. when the ladies of the Seymour West Ladies' Aid provided dinner for the delegates. The delegates were loud in their praise of the turkey dinner provided by the ladies, who seemed to excel themselves on this particular occasion.

Reports Given

Reports were given by conveners of various committees. The Rev. A. E. Toombs, of Campbellford, convener of missions, gave his report, and pointed out with particular emphasis the fine work of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Wilcox in the Lower Mission Field.

W. Harold Huston, Millbrook, reported as chairman of the evangelism and social action committee. Newton Reid, of Colborne, convener of the stewardship and budget committee, also made a brief report.

The Peterborough Presbyterial district extends from Bowmanville on the west, to Campbellford on the east. Centres east of Campbellford are in the Kingston Presbytery, and those west of Bowmanville are in the Toronto district. The meeting was the first held in Campbellford in several years.

MARMORA

MARMORA. — Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Loveless have moved into the residence formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wells.

A large number of residents patronized the supper held in St. Mark's, Bonarlaw, on Wednesday evening by the congregation of that church.

DEAL WITH RED CHINA

COLOMBO, Ceylon (Reuters) Communist China will buy 10,000 tons of coconut oil from Ceylon now being concluded in Peiping by a Ceylon official mission, it was reported today. The deal marks expanding trade between the two countries. Today the 7,176-ton Russian ship Servstopal is here taking on 6,000 tons of rubber for China.

At the First Sign of a COLD
Take 2 Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water...

and feel better FAST!
Here's sound and effective advice about colds.
No matter how you try to stop or shorten a cold, the first thing to do—before you do anything else—is take Aspirin.
You should do this because a cold is almost invariably accompanied by muscular aches and pains—and a headache, feverish feeling. And for your own good, you need a medication that will relieve these distressing symptoms—relieve them quickly.
One reason Aspirin tablets bring this relief is that they're ready to go to work with amazing speed . . . actually start disintegrating almost instantly.
So don't experiment with a cold. Use Aspirin. And for sore throats due to colds, gargle 3 times daily with 3 Aspirin tablets dissolved in ½ of a glass of water.

82 North Korean Prisoners Killed In Pongam Is. Riot

Mutinous Uprising Soon Quelled by Allied Guards

PUSAN, Korea (AP)—Eighty-two North Korean civilian internees were killed and 130 wounded Sunday in a mutinous uprising on the island of Pongam, the Allied prisoner-of-war command reported today.

The internees, reclassified prisoners of war, injured two United States soldiers and two South Korean soldiers.

An official announcement said U. S. and South Korean troops quelled the uprising.

The announcement said the uprising probably was a part of recently intercepted Communist plans for military preparations for a mass breakout.

Island West of Koje

It said the uprising occurred in camp No. 14 on Pongam, a small island west of Koje off the southern tip of Korea.

About 3,600 of the camp's 9,000 internees participated in the simultaneous uprising in the camp's separate compounds.

The Allied command said many of the mutineers were former inmates of notorious Compound 62 here. Compound 62 was the camp broke out last Feb. 18. Canadian and British internees were held in Far East commander, as having been "a validity whatsoever."

The large compounds on Koje were broken into smaller ones by Brig.-Gen. Francis T. Dodd, and held Dodd's successor, Brig.-Gen. Charles F. Colson, in exchange for his release later were described by Gen. Mark W. Clark, Far East commander, as having

COMPLETE FACILITIES FOR HANDLING EGGS AND YOUNG FISH

Hatcheries at Glenora and White Lake have completed facilities for the handling of eyed eggs and young fish, which will be held over winter, ready for stocking purposes next spring, according to Lands and Forests Department officials.

At White Lake some 250,000 speckled trout fingerlings have been received from Glenora and Kingston hatcheries, and some of Kamloops trout fingerlings from the Normandale hatchery in the Simcoe district.

Plans call for handling a large number of trout eggs at Glenora later on, including 350,000 lake trout and possibly 850,000 speckled trout. Eggs are being shipped from hatcheries at Fort Arthur, Sault Ste. Marie and Southampton.

Canteen Kitchen On Camiffton Road Damaged by Fire

The kitchen of the Hillcrest View Canteen just outside the city on Camiffton Road was damaged by fire Sunday evening when grease in the fish and chip store caught fire, the flames going out through the ceiling before they were brought under control.

The blaze occurred about 7.30 when fish and chips were being prepared for evening customers. The proprietor attempted to fight the flames with a fire extinguisher without success. Firemen were called but before they arrived the flames were leaping out through a skylight in the kitchen roof.

Firemen confined the blaze to the kitchen of the canteen, but the fish and chip store was practically as the heat melted the metal.

Sunday noon firemen answered another alarm to Blamey's woodworking shop on College street. The shop, situated in a small barn at the rear of the house, was damaged as were tools and other equipment.

An overheated stove was believed to have been the cause of the blaze. Mrs. Ramsay happened to go out to the shop for some coal and discovered the fire.

Two Clubs Join For Turkey Dinner, Party

The Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club joined with the Belleville Sales and Advertising Club last Friday evening for a turkey dinner and Christmas party.

Guest speaker of the evening was June Dennis, Toronto radio commentator.

Television, Miss Dennis told her audience, would never take the place of radio. "An advantage of radio," she said, "lies in the fact that people could go ahead with other work while listening to a program to the background."

Miss Dennis spoke of the many friends she had made through her programs. She compared television today with radio, when it was first introduced, to seven more than a quarter century ago.

She was introduced by Frank Murray and thanked by Dorothy Brown.

William Riley, president of the Sales and Ad. Club, welcomed the new visitors and called on Norma Archibald to introduce the executive of the Business Club.

Drawing for booster prizes were scattered throughout the evening with Daisy Young winning a beautiful centrepiece prepared by William Jardine.

A sing-song of Christmas carols was led by Mrs. Ken Bowden who also sang a solo. Ethel Smith, accompanied by Harmony McDonald, also featured the evening with two vocal solos during dinner.

Ornamental Tree Cut from Lawn On Sinclair St.

A likely prospect for the nearest thief would be found up in the city Saturday night and during the darkness cut a thriving ornamental spruce from the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. R. Bowden, 12 Sinclair Street, and lugged the tree away.

"It's really discouraging," Mrs. Bowden said this morning when she reported the matter to police. "We've planted the tree about six years ago and it was beginning to do really well."

Swimming Awards Arrive in City

Royal Life-Saving cards and crests have arrived in the city for the group who passed their swimming tests at the Kinsmen's pool during August.

Jack Dole, Alex Schadan, Pauline Hall, Shirley La Rue, Barbara Annis, Karl Lawrence, Bruce Varcoe, Shirley Smith, Deanna Mansfield and Barbara Corlett, all passed their tests and qualified for the Bronze certificate tests. The actual bronze awards and these life savers medals be arriving from England within the next month.

The above group were instructed by Jacqueline Varcoe and Beth Wilbur, and each also qualified for her First Class R.L.S.S. instructors certificate on a basis of having her class successfully passed. Certificates and crests covering the award of Instructor of Swimming have also arrived.

Earlier last summer Jack Mathews, Jacqueline Varcoe, Beth Wilbur and Jim McDonald also passed their bronze medallion tests. These medallions have now arrived from England.

All the above awards, crests and cards have been forwarded to the local YMCA by the Examiner, W. A. Beach of Albert College, and such awards will be issued out at the YMCA on application to "Dr." Diamandides, the physical director.

She said the axe marks, where the tree had been cut, were plainly visible on the stump.

Police admitted with the hundreds of trees now being offered for sale there was little hope of tracing the tree in question.

But the thief, they hope is unhappy and rightfully so. The tree had taken considerable work to bring it to its present beauty and now the work has been all for nothing.

"If the person responsible could afford to buy a tree we would have gladly purchased one for them, but one sometimes wonders," she said.

Obituary

ITHEL PAYNE

The funeral of Ithel Payne was held on Friday afternoon, December 12 at his late residence, Front Street, Stirling, with Rev. T. Sproule, Frankford, in charge of the service.

The bearers were Messrs Judson Hanna, Fred McDonell, William Yardy, Arthur Palmer, Ray Mallory and Frank Whiteman.

The interment was made in Victoria Cemetery, Tweed.

THOMAS JAMES CAMERON (Trent Road)

The death occurred suddenly on Sunday, December 7 at Queen Alexandra Home, of Thomas James Cameron of Belleville, R. R. 3 Trent Road. He was in his 78th year.

Born at Flower Station, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cameron and had resided in the area for the past 15 years. Prior to taking up residence in this district, the deceased had resided in Saskatchewan where he was a farmer in his active years, was a member of the Church of Christ.

Surviving are one brother, R. F. Cameron of Sharpe Lake and two sisters, Mrs. Donald Cronk of Parham and Miss S. M. Cameron of Toronto.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARGARET HILL (Shannonville)

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Hill, Shannonville, was held from her late residence on Friday afternoon to Christ Tyendinaga Reserve on Saturday afternoon. Rev. L. A. Page conducted the services in the church and also at the graveside in All Saints' Cemetery.

The bearers were Thomas Hill, Jacob Green, George, James, Anthony and Edward Hill.

JAMES WILLIAM LAFFERTY (Los Angeles—Belleville)

The death of James William Lafferty in Culver City Hospital in Los Angeles, California, on Friday last, will bring sincere regret to a wide circle of friends in the city and district. Mr. Lafferty had been in failing health for a period but was in hospital only a week before his death.

The late Lafferty as he was known to a host of friends, was born in this city 66 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Lafferty, 161 Pinnacle Street and received his early education all his life. He was educated at St. Michael's Academy and the Collegiate Institute and as a young man he entered the hotel business and worked for many years as room clerk at the New Queens Hotel. Seven years ago he left the city to reside in Los Angeles and at the time of his death was employed by the Knox Hotel of Los Angeles.

The late Mr. Lafferty had the ability to make and hold friends. He was interested in sports of all kinds. He was an active member of the Kinsmen Club until his departure for the west.

He was a member of St. Michael's Church, while a resident in this city and fraternally was identified with the Knights of Columbus.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lafferty, his wife, the former Mary Webster, also of this city, one sister, Miss Ann Lafferty, of Belleville.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Sonja Henie's Revue Will be Seen At Kingston

Sonja Henie's record-breaking tour of Canada with her Ice Revue of 1953 will go into Kingston this week for a three-day show playing at the Kingston Community Centre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and a Saturday matinee. The glamorous Miss Henie has been playing to packed houses from the Maritimes right through to but will interrupt her show after leaving Kingston for approximately a month while she appears on television and in engagements at Fort Worth and Houston, Texas.

The Henie show drew highly complimentary press reviews in Ottawa where the show played five days. One of the added features of the show is the many appearances of Miss Henie on the ice, where she gives an excellent display of skating and showmanship that proves the versatility of this ice, screen and television star.

Some of the more interesting features of her show are the dashing Donald Watson, the lavish costumes and settings, Amin Ibrahim with their Arabian act and the side-splitting Willie West and McGinty, a slapstick act of the "Builders."

The evening shows will start at 8.30 o'clock with the Saturday matinee at 3.00 p. m.

ROGUES IRK REDS

LONDON (Reuters)—The Russian retail trade is ridding with "swindlers and rogues," the official Soviet Communist party organ says. Moscow radio, quoting the party paper Pravda, said, "swindlers and rogues are everywhere infiltrating into the sales organization."

Dozens of Minor Auto Crashes Reported as Streets, Highways Made Slippery by Snow

Minor auto accidents in which little more than fender dents resulted, were a dime a dozen yesterday and early today as city streets and rural highways in the district were made slippery by the first real snowfall of the season.

City police reported numerous accidents of a minor nature caused when tires failed to grip the snow covered pavement and vehicles skidded together at intersections.

To a lesser extent the same was true on the highway with provincial officers reporting a few cars in the ditch. Fortunately no one was seriously hurt.

Although the snowfall was much heavier in the Kingston district where over a foot was reported to have fallen, slightly more than five inches of snow fell on fallen here by nine o'clock today. At Kingston cars were reported to have bogged down in the heavy going and dozens of vehicles were stalled in the streets as snowplows were unable to cope with the fall. Buses were running late due to the heavy snow.

City Sander Out

At Belleville the five inches was enough to bring out the city sander which prior to church time yesterday had given hills a testment of sand. Today the sanders were again out and sidewalk snowplows made their initial appearance of the season in the downtown section of the city.

Snow shovels also had their first workout and today the clatter of steel on concrete could be heard as householders shovelled the four to five inches of snow off private walks.

The kiddies were over-joyed with the snow and Sunday afternoon saw a number out sleighriding and making tracks through the fresh snow. Even the weatherman was co-operative in being sufficiently mild to allow snowballing.

But the big question, today among the kiddies seemed to be whether the mantle of snow would last until Christmas. But that is a question which only the weatherman can answer.

Christmas Party At Masonic Temple Much Enjoyed

Officials of the Brewer's Warehousing Company Ltd. were hosts to the employees, their wives and children at the annual Christmas party held in the Masonic Temple on Sunday afternoon. There was 125 were in attendance and it was a delight to see the faces of the children light up, when Santa Claus made his appearance and distributed gifts from a large tree laden with lights.

A most varied dance program was staged by pupils of Barbara Dimont Dancing Studio, which included Judy McKnight, Heather Scott, Marion Thoms, Dianne Mansfield, Clara Hall, Sylvia Knott, Sondyra Randall, Iris Lohnes, Lynda Lemoine and Gale Juby. The girls gave a most finished performance of the many dances offered and received hearty applause from the gathering. Following the program three pictures, two of a Christmas nature and a Mighty Mouse cartoon delighted the children and grown-ups alike. Frank Pugh acted as Master of Ceremonies for the program.

Norman Garbutt, assistant manager of the district, Dick Fitzpatrick, "Lum" Carson then assisted Santa Claus in distributing the gifts, after which each child was given a well-filled stocking of candies and nuts. A picture of the group with their gifts was taken.

William Pontiflet of Picton, delighted with his impersonation of old St. Nick.

Arrested on Charge Of Theft of Car

Arrested in Cobourg by provincial police, Ernest Belanger, 28, of Ponton street, was brought back to Belleville yesterday and charged with auto theft.

Leo Hamilton, Albion street, told police he had left his car parked outside his store on Station street and an hour later it was missing. The alarm was sent out by police and Belanger was apprehended by police at Cobourg.

Health Dept. Submits Report For November

During the month of November, 38 food handlers were X-rayed at the Provincial Chest Clinic, and the health department continues the drive to assure all those employed in this work are examined before the beginning of 1953. Figures appeared in the monthly report received from the health department today.

Communicable disease went on the up-swing during November. One case of scarlet fever, nine cases of chicken pox, six cases of mumps, one case of measles and one case of infectious hepatitis were reported to the department by local doctors.

Attendance at the weekly immunization clinics was 140. This number included 21 vaccinations and 134 inoculations being done. There were three child health clinics during the month at which 30 infants and pre-school age children were present.

The health department nursing staff spent 1815½ hours in the schools, 330 health inspections and 127 other inspections were carried out. The department also conducted 12 clinics at which 323 children have had dental defects corrected by the family dentist to date this year.

A total of 294 visits were made to 144 families, 39 of which were contacted for the first time and 73 visits were made to infants under one year and 30 to infants under one month. Twenty-two visits were to mothers with newborn babies.

Store Gives Annual Christmas Party
The staff, with their husbands and wives, of David's Electric, enjoyed their annual Christmas dinner at the Maple Inn in Bloomfield last Wednesday.
At the conclusion of the dinner Mr. David spoke for a few minutes on the staff and their methods of moving into their new store. "Many headaches had been involved," he said, "but in the past month or so they had been straightened out and the future looked very bright.
The ladies were each presented with a gift. Thanks were expressed by Mr. and Mrs. David to Miss Jeanne Stephenson on behalf of the staff, and then for the remainder of the evening, a sing-song was held.

Santa Claus Pleases Thousands Of Children Lining Parade Route

Trenton (Special) — Santa Claus came to town pleasing thousands of little children lining the route from College St. school grounds along Dundas St. to St. Peter's school playground.

With old St. Nick's visit came colder weather and snow and last night there was every sign that this Christmas would be a white one.

Despite Santa's long ride he looked jovial and robust enough to handle the big job of delivering presents a week from this Wednesday night. "His task in Trenton will be no small one either because scores of children asked for everything manufactured by every toy company in existence today and some new ones besides," Santa said.

The annual Santa Claus Parade, sponsored by the Trenton merchants attracted many children and their parents from Belleville and neighboring communities. A colorful procession led by drum majorette Mary Dobson, included the R. C. A. F. band and more than 20 beautifully decorated floats. A float entered by the Canadian Canners, of Picton, drew special mention and a prize. It was named Miss Sweet Queen.

After Santa got through town he pulled his reindeers into the Separate School grounds for a well-earned rest. There a team of his best workers distributed 5,000 out of 5,700 bags of candies and countless numbers of oranges. In the meantime Santa greeted huge throngs of kiddies gathered for the momentous occasion. The remainder of the candies was handed over to the Salvation Army.

By Saturday night Trenton merchants noticed the stimulating effect the parade had on the day's business. Parade headquarters had received over $1,000 from donations to bear the cost of sponsoring the project. And there are more donations coming, a committee member reported.

Judged the best floats in the parade were: Salvation Army's "Christmas Scene"; "The Old Woman in the Shoe"; "Three Little Pigs" and "Klog Cole."

Political Expert Says Friendship Is Weakening

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CP)—A Yale University political expert said Sunday night that the long and historic friendship between Canada and the United States is weakening.

Professor Frederick M. Watkins, who came to Yale recently after serving on the political science and economics faculty of McGill University, said Canadians are afraid of an "unwise and impulsive move" by Americans which would explode the Korean war into a third world war.

Watkins is a United States citizen.

Canadians do not trust American foreign policy, he said. "The feeling of these Canadians is that the interests of Canada and the other western nations are constantly being jeopardized by inept decisions over which they have no control," Watkins said in a Yale radio program.

Furthermore, the election of Gen. Eisenhower as President has "failed to produce any upsurge of confidence in American foreign policy, either in Canada or elsewhere," he said.

He said Canadians deeply appreciate American efforts to resist Soviet aggression, but they doubt whether American statesmen will live up to their responsibilities.

He recommended, however, that the United States make Canadians feel they are genuine partners in any alliance. "Then we would win wholehearted support of Canada," Watkins said.

TOSSED INTO LAKE

GODERICH (CP)—Alex Mallough, 18, was tossed into the icy waters of Lake Huron Saturday when a cable whipped loose and caught him in the chest while he was working on the outer breakwater. Mallough swam 20 feet to the breakwater and was pulled into a boat, none the worse for the plunge.

Catholic Padre Made Parish Calls by 'Copter

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Roman Catholic padre who has been making his "parish calls" by helicopter is resting at his home here.

Father George Hart spent 19 months as a Canadian chaplain with the United Nations naval forces off Korea. His chief charges were the men of the Canadian destroyers—the Athabaskan, Nootka, Iroquois and Crusader, which rotate with others so that there are always three Canadian destroyers serving Korea.

On his way to say Mass Father Hart would drop on to the ships from the end of a steel cable suspended from the helicopter.

Perilous Work

In bad weather he came close to being smashed to pieces several times as he dangled perilously close to the steel decks and superstructure. On a calm day, the helicopter pilot would sometimes pull away suddenly and leave him dangling a scant 20 feet above the icy seas.

The 36-year-old Franciscan priest isn't very impressed by his own exploits. "I didn't do anything dangerous," he said, "but it was certainly interesting and I loved every minute of it."

He came home happy about the morale and bearing of the Canadian sailors in the Far East.

of their administrative duties and responsibilities.

"There was, in addition, indifference and reluctance on the part of military personnel to concentrate on administration to the degree required. . . .

"But, if this spirit permeated the lower echelons of the Army, it is more difficult to condone the same attitudes higher up. There, a higher degree both of intelligence and responsibility is essential. It was not always present in the degree required."

The report recommends sweeping changes in the works setup and greatly tightened security arrangements, including the posting of a Mounty in each army camp and a strengthened Provost Corps.

The leading paragraph on the recommendation section says "the over-all situation is, however, by no means disconcerting because of the fact that the cure for what has gone wrong in the past can be and, in fact, is being applied."

Mr. Currie cited the situation at Hillsie where he had found unsatisfactory conditions in September, made recommendations which led to shifts and some firing of personnel and found on a second visit that "remarkable" changes had been made.

His recommendations include a new organization at army HQ to supervise the works service creation of a staff agency there to supervise enforcement of established policies; more frequent inspections and audits; revision of the "inadequate" wage scales; improved accounting methods strict control of the handling of scrap; increased camp patrols and radio equipment for the Provost.

Police Believe Hoodlums, Hold-up Men Operating Back And Forth Across the Border

BUFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Police on both sides of the border today investigated what they called a loose tie-up of hoodlums and hold-up men operating back and forth across the border.

Detective Chief William T. Fitzgibbons said this picture emerged as the hunt was pressed for the third Canadian wanted in the holdup-slaying of a Buffalo jeweler last Friday.

Ralph J. Grubitsich, 28, of Windsor, Ont., still was at large while two Hamilton, Ont., men were held in Hamilton pending extradition on charges of killing Donald F. Hurd.

Fitzgibbons said an informal ring of Canadians, many of them with police records, was responsible for a number of holdups, burglaries and thefts in Buffalo.

He suggested confederates on the U. S. side of the border had been lining up the jobs and planning getaway routes.

Employees of the Paramount theatre Saturday identified a photograph of Maurice (Digger) O'Dell as the man who robbed the theatre Nov. 22 of $3,000. O'Dell and Walter F. Griffins, 26, were held on charges of vagrancy pending extradition hearings on charges of killing Hurd and robbing the store of an estimated $50,000 worth of gems and jewelry.

Most of the loot has been recovered, along with a pistol allegedly used in the hold-up.

Experienced Help
The classified sections of the daily press tell a story—a story which emphasizes that today the demand is not just for help, but for specialized help—help trained and experienced in doing a particular job. This demand is almost universal in business and industry and is essential in the professions.
Trained, specialized assistance is just as important in the proper management of an investment programme. This means experienced help must be obtained.
Experience to us means "personal knowledge". This month Ames celebrates its 63rd birthday. In the more than three score years since 1889 when our business was established, we have acquired a wealth of "personal knowledge" in investment planning and management which we can, and do, draw upon for those who look to us for information and assistance. Our clients benefit from this experience . . . we think that you too, will find it beneficial.
The best advice and the best help is important if your investment programme is to do what you want it to do for you. Through personal contact with our experienced personnel you can obtain such advice and help without obligation. Write, telephone, or better still call in and see us.

MORE THAN A BARGAIN

The announcement that drivers' permits in Ontario will cost two dollars next year has been noted by some motorists with an aggrieved attitude of complaint. The same motorists ought to be grateful for the fund which this extra dollar is to maintain.

Actually the cost of the permit remains at a dollar. The other dollar is a contribution to the unsatisfied-judgment fund of the province from which paid damage claims, resulting from traffic accidents, against car owners who carry no liability insurance and are otherwise judgment-proof. It also awards claims for damages where unidentified hit-and-run drivers are involved. In cases where known defendants are at fault, and damages are paid out of the fund, defendants are automatically barred from the highways until they reimburse the fund.

Since 1947 more than $3,000,000 has been paid out of the unsatisfied-judgment fund to victims of accidents who would have had little or no redress or compensation for damages sustained. Previously a 50-cent assessment had carried the obligations of this fund which then found its own. In the first fiscal year, however, the provincial treasury paid out $200,000 more than it had received in contributions.

The aggrieved fee will be properly recognized by Ontario motorists as a cheap form of insurance. At a rate of protection which could not be had for a dollar from any other source they are not at the mercy of someone on the highways who has neither insurance nor property assets which could be seized to satisfy a judgment.

The $200,000 already disbursed by the fund must represent thousands of such claims. These motorists will agree that the increased fee is more than a bargain.

ARE WE "MISREADING EVENTS"?

In another column on this page appears a letter to the Editor from A. W. Steward, South African Government Information Officer in Ottawa. Mr. Steward complains that in an editorial in this newspaper on November 22 we used the term "non-white terrorist" in reference to the race segregation policies of Premier Daniel F. Malan in the Union of South Africa.

It is Mr. Steward's opinion that we "have been seriously misreading events", and that "it is the colored people in various parts of Africa who are conducting terrorist campaigns, not white."

We have been "misreading" the reports of events which have taken place in the Union of South Africa since Dr. Malan's racial segregation policies, known as apartheid, were instituted. Mr. Steward complains that we fess that we had fallen into a common error—a mistake we appear to share with quite a few thousands of the white minority population in South Africa who are opposed to Malan's discrimination policies; the Supreme Court of the Union of South Africa which has ruled his legislation ultra vires of that country's constitution; members of the Special Political Committee of the United Nations, who have protested his policies; and a great number of competent and reliable observers who have been reporting and interpreting the South African situation to the world at large.

Whether the rioting, bloodshed and acts of terrorism which have occurred in that country is charged to Dr. Malan's policies depends a great deal, of course, on one's point of view. Mr. Steward, as the Information Officer in Ottawa for Dr. Malan's government, naturally discloses any action or responsibility on the part of the premier or the Government. The preponderant independent view of the situation is that the Malan campaign has provoked the native and "colored" vote as part which has led to violence.

Actually the most effective resistance to the new discrimination laws has been by passive demonstrations of the kind which Mahatma Gandhi used for so long and effectively in India. To cope with these tactics of "non-violence", however, Dr. Malan has his own legal definition of "communism" which the late Soviet dictator Stalin would have envied, and which is "any doctrine or scheme . . . which aims at bringing any political, industrial, social or economic change . . . by unlawful acts or omissions" is Communism.

Under this law only two weeks ago twenty leaders of South Africa's blacks and "coloreds" were tried on charges of advocating racial equality. The presiding judge, noting that much an effort was being made to deal with Communism as it is commonly known," commented: "It is not for me to judge the wisdom of legislation." He found the defendanig guilty and sentenced them to "naturally discharge Communism", but he promptly suspended all the sentences.

It is the contention of Dr. Malan's critics that his policies of apartheid and racial segregation, to maintain white supremacy, can only lead to violence which will ultimately mean civil war. In the face of the evidence available we are unable to admit that we have been seriously misreading events in South Africa.

Mr. Steward's letter makes reference to the recent Mau Mau atrocities in Africa which have had much publicity in the press recently. There was no mention whatever of the Mau Mau in our editorial of November 22. The dreaded activities of this native terrorist society take place in Kenya Colony, which has been declared an area of insubdued scene within the Union of South Africa which is exclusively the administrative domain of Dr. Malan.

LABOR

Out of the skilful hand,
Out of man's knowing mind
Come fruitage of orchard and Structures of every kind.

All that we have to boast,
All that we view with pride,
All that we value most . .
Men's labor has supplied.

After the dream, the plan,
The lathes and the foundry
And
Then, by the toil of man,
Fashioned are temple spires.

Great land of liberty,
At your cities cower and go.
Fashioned by workmen free,
Greater still to grow.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

So persuaded are we all that the big men of business and politics are the men of passion and passion-ate workers that it comes as a shock to read a book like the late Stanley Baldwin's "Service" written by G. M. Young and learn that Baldwin was a shy man and that Baldwin appears to be that he was indolent, incurably indolent. He was the son of a father who was head of great industries, enterprises which he ran without the least difficulty and rising to the peerage with a mighty party; he had all the gifts in the world save one

He looked up the word indolent in the dictionary to be sure; and there it was—"Indolent, with word indolence, which means "suffering no pain."

The most unforgettable anecdote in the new biography of Baldwin is that which quotes a fellow-member of the government of British Indian Empire explaining in exasperation: "What can you do with a leader who all day long is content with reading the Strand magazine!"

The picture most of us remember of Stanley Baldwin is that of a solid Britisher, smoking a pipe, and bearing in his sturdy and honest-seeming body the very seal and stamp of British character. We remember with what a mild simplicity he steered us through the abdication. We had the feeling that he was a sound, strong, safe man. Not one in a million of whom we had taken the measure in some way knit with his world as he was. Not remarkable, but could be accused of indolence. Just the new biography presents a portrait of a most disturbing personality to be found among the leaders of men in the world of affairs. We would not have thought it possible that modern business and modern politics to permit a man to be easy-going to the point of indolence, to be, in fact, lazy.

When Stanley Baldwin died, he was in London, and at the Press Club they were toasting his memory.

"He was given every opportunity in life," said one of the writers from London with, "and he took 'em all!"

mannerry and etiquette have disappeared, presumably for these seasons. In his unsympathetic judgment we have become a nation of slobs and bums."

But that's just one fifth av. tailor's opinion. Other members of his craft might agree with him but we doubt that anybody else would. The popularity of sports shirts, jackets and slacks probably has hurt Tweyfeff's business It has also given our menfolk an inexpensive form of elegance and a right to comfort that should be part of the American male's heritage.

Tweyfeff's is a voice crying in the wilderness. We hope he stays lost in it, he and that fancy get-up of black Bombazine, double-breasted waistcoat, striped sack suit and black trousers. He never would rather be an underdressed bum than an overdressed dode.

A Nation Of Slobs, Bums?

(Kansas City Star)

It takes a stiff-necked fellow like Jim Poh, a tailor, Boy Tweyfort, to make people realize how completely crowned they've become these last 15 to 20 years. Tweyfort is stiff-necked because he wears a starched collar. And so he has views on men's and women's clothing styles to match the starchiness of his own old guard neckwear.

Tweyfort resents soft collared shirts. He abhors the thought and sight of men without ties and/or suits. He is upset over women who "run around wearing bebushkas, looking like Russian peasants." He insists that morals,

Armchair Flight to the Tropics

(Halifax Chronicle-Herald)

This is the season of the year, with its raw winds and frigid temperatures, with, too, its threat of worse to come, when the torrid literature, attractive enough at all times, takes on a new and potent appeal.

To the mind already shivering in anticipation of the rigors of full winter, there is delight of the tropics as lyrically described and fervidly portrayed in illustrated folders devoted to the praise of Honolulu or some similarly blessed clime appear preternaturally enticing, and even the more prosaic lists of voyages ships' ports of call appearing in the daily papers possess a power of attraction.

Some forms of literature have a fascination and a value for the studious (although, perhaps, "idle" would be a more opposite term) which is not always fully appreciated. If their promulgators ever envisaged, they would have power to send many of us off on the most comfortable mode of travel known to man, the armchair odyssey which is accomplished from the comfort depiles of the fireside in the twilight mood when life's betwixt sleeping and waking.

An advertisement culled at the spur of the moment purposes advises that such a ship will sail for Lisbon, Gibraltar, Naples, Marseilles, Leghorn and Naples, and in the sounding magic of those names, the journey is launched, the modern "man of many ships" is another world. With every sense he may visualize the delights of his cruise, the sparkle and liveliness of the Bay of Biscay in more amiable mood, the look-out for rocks at Cape St. Vincent, the looming mass of Gibraltar against the evening sky and the velvet pinpricked indigo of the Mediterranean night.

And the beauty of it is that it makes no difference that we have perhaps never seen the places in our wandering dreams, that they are no more than words on a page, where a magic in their very names, magic eloquent of a strong siren cutting steadily through blue water, of the thrum of the wind in the shrouds and the steady beat of engines serve where the breezes ever farther from the chill, grey-green coasts of home.

Perhaps that is what makes the humble school atlas a source of the most fascinating study in the world; it lays the world at our fingers—and encourages that vagrant fancy to embark on unknown seas. It brings vividly and compellingly to the mind's eye all that has been heard or seen or read, and imagined of strange lands under an alien sun, lands of infinite charm.

It has within its well-worn covers and dog-eared pages the make's a welt of light

That holds the hot sky tame,

And the great liners' names through the planet-powdered dream

Where the scared whale flukes in flame.

And so, with armies drugged by beauty and enchanted by the strangeness, the armchair Odysseus turns back to the "boring newspaper advertisement — and, safe returned to his own ithaca, can retire to his comfortable couch.

Imagination Still Active

Great Britain now gets about four-fifths of its aluminum from dollar countries. If it could get more from sterling areas, its dollar position would be much improved. It is therefore making long term plans to do just that.

It happens that the Gold Coast, a British crown colony in Africa, has extensive deposits of bauxite, aluminum ore. The difficulty has been to develop the country to the point where bauxite could be produced in quantity.

Now the British and Gold Coast governments, with co-operation from Aluminium Limited of Canada and the British Aluminum Co., are planning to build the port facilities, railway, power and the port, road and development projects that will make aluminum production feasible on a large scale.

Total investment in the next 20 years would be more than $400,000,000, which would be necessary to build housing and schools and to provide the amenities of life good citizens in the railway land.

If anything can reacue Britain from the predicament in which it now finds itself, it will be developments of this sort. "Austerity" was good for the country in the present emergency. Greater reliance on local production will be good for it in the long term and in the near future — if not too well, at least with preservation of solvency. But austerity is the ultimate return to the old prosperity must involve development outside the "tight little isle."

The fact that the British still have enough imagination and enterprise to think in terms as large as those involved in the Gold Coast project is the best promise that they may yet find a way out of their economic difficulties.

Toronto And Balaam

(London Free Press)

Toronto, with its irresistible instinct for publicity, appears to be sought advice from one of the equine tribe. True, it was not a horse of dividend but was carried on through the medium of a reporter from one of the Queen City' newspapers.

The trust that the equine oracle has provided prophecy worthy of the postulant. After all, it is a long time since donations to receive advice from a horse, although some members of the sporting fraternity have been known to boast of tips "right from the horse's mouth."

This is not the first time an animal has been consulted. After all, in Toronto the Good, the story of Balaam should be remembered.

Letter to the Editor

Exception Is Taken To Malan Reference

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

It is difficult to understand your mean mind when you speak (November 22) of Dr. Malan's "Non-white Terrorist Campaign." Terror" Can warrant praise a man too much who speaks well of them who speak ill of him."

When we give praise to anyone it is not to add to the worth of ourselves. What an easy thing it is to praise where it is merited anyway. And the bigger the man is whom you praise the more sincerely it is appreciated. Really great writers write for appreciation far more than they do for money. The more praise they get (not flattery) the better they write!

IMPORTANT NOTICE

We regret to announce that effective at once, due to exchange problems, mail difficulties, etc., Dr. Brady can no longer answer personal letter from readers nor furnish pamphlets or booklets. However, Dr. Brady's health column will continue to give up-to-the-minute information on health matters as heretofore.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

MY GOOD FRIEND A. J.

Your pamphlet on ear and nasal noises has been marvellous-ly helpful (writes Mrs. K. R. J.). My hearing was restored through the use of the vitamins and minerals you suggest in the pamphlet. I bought a hearing aid but have not needed it now for the past three months. Should my hearing fail me again I shall use the vitamin and mineral preparations again, but right now it seems that I'll not need them or the hearing aid any more. Isn't that wonderful!

Isn't my good friend A. J. Colincidence wonderful! Sometimes I think (to myself, of course) that if it were not for me, Dr. Tinnitus (ask for it in writing, please) would be overflowing with stamped, self-addressed envelope. A clipping will not do), but evidently regarded the facial exercises given in the pamphlet as too silly for Mrs. Kelly to take seriously.

Notice also that Mrs. J. brushed aside the repeated reminder that the vitamins and/or minerals I recommend are not medicine, but essential nutritional or food elements, to be taken, not for just a trial period but from now on.

Whether even' temporarily increased intake of vitamins and/or minerals improved or restored hearing in this instance or will do so in any instance, I don't know. All I know is that it can do no harm in any case.

But once again I beg you, stu-dammass readers, don't regard vitamins and/or minerals as medicine for temporary alleviation of your complaint. The best way to profit from taking vitamins and/or minerals at all is to supply the body nutritional essentials which your refined or restricted diet fails to supply from day to day. This applies not just to taking vitamins and/or minerals in the ordinary way but also to taking them in "shots." If you happen to be guilt-ible about "shots."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DELIGHT IN GIVING PRAISE

I have always wondered why it is that so many people fail to praise others, especially those who may in a sense be competitors for public acclaim. I have always liked to praise those who showed superior talent — especially among writers and artists.

I like to read of praise given to a noted writer by another writer, as noted. It shows fine spiritmanship. I am glad and proud to associate with those who are far better than I am. Jealousy is such a waste of time. Why a little blue book that rests upon my table I came across this sentence: "One cannot praise a man too much who speaks well of them who speak ill of him."

When we give praise to someone we enhance the worth of ourselves! What an easy thing it is to praise where it is merited anyway. And the bigger the man is whom you praise the more sincerely it is appreciated. Really great writers write for appreciation far more than they do for money. The more praise they get (not flattery) the better they write!

We are always being served by someone, and in turn we serve others. How far a kind word or a helping of service will travel! Why it is appreciated. It is always the new writer that one wants to forever saying kind and complimentary things about others. It is a fine thing that one wants to praise and inspiration rendered us, over and above the pay. Thanks and appreciation in return is the best pay.

Pitiful has been the neglect the world has given to many of its greatest artists and writers. Many have had to die poor. J. F. Millet traded many a wonderful work of art in order that he might get bread for his family. It isn't the first artist that live on. Learn the delight that returns to you from the praise of a honest praise to one worthy of it!

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

HOW ABOUT NOW?

It happens only once in 7000 times but it happened to me—my house was struck by lightning. Yes, the whole house got a lightning rod.

This is the usual pattern of negative reasoning and caution, with which we deal with many of the issues of life. We are always looking the door after the horse is stolen. We put up lightning rods after the house is struck. We look back over our past purchases and sales in property and securities and ask ourselves how we could have been so stupid as to have missed a certain opportunity or to have run head-on into disaster.

Likewise in the things of the spirit there is a lot more repining after evil is done than there is planning to avoid evil and the shaping of our lives to a right attitude wholesome. The Bible's word of warning, "Sufficient unto the day thereof is the evil thereof," is the wisest saying ever spoken by everyone the world is, "Today if you would hear His voice, harden not your hearts." And this, "Now is the accepted time. Behold, now is the day of salvation."

Put up a lightning rod today. Get it. Look for that stable door before someone slips in and steals your horse. Avoid moral disaster twenty years from now by cultivating wholesome habits and deepening your religious faith now.

Successes in Korean War Have Given Chinese Great Confidence in Own Strength

By Gerard Filion

The Korean War is an insignificant matter to us. It does not disturb our sleep. It scarcely makes us feel a bit uncomfortable.

The Korean war is a serious matter to the Chinese. It is a very great war and the Chinese are immensely proud of the fact that they pushed the United Nations troops back to the 38th parallel. They almost believe that the west has thrown all its strength into the Korean war and that they have been able to repel the whole white race by themselves.

The Chinese, therefore, take the news from Korea very seriously. It is not hard to understand why. They remember that the Japanese entered Manchuria from Korea and that they pushed down China as far as Peking. They are afraid that the Americans will do the same thing. That is why they stepped in when MacArthur's armies reached the Yalu River.

You only have to be in Peking to understand that Korea is simply around the corner, American fliers practically make the city in two hours. It is just as though Chinese armies had entered Montreal, Washington and New York would begin to feel nervous.

The Korean war, therefore, was the principal topic of discussion at the Peking Peace Congress. It came up in every details in a dozen different ways. Every speaker—and there were something like 25 of them—devoted about a third of his talk to the Korean war.

Yellow Races Agree

One thing became clear to those of us who followed the debates and talked with delegates between sessions. That was that the yellow races were unanimously against the United Nations intervention in Korea. There was no question of whether the landing of U. N. troops in South Korea was legally justified. They were not interested in finding out whether North or South Korea had started the hostilities. They remembered only one thing. The whites—and the whites meant U. N. troops — machine-gunned and bombarded the yellow peoples, the North Koreans. That was how they saw it and they didn't look any further.

In an earlier article I mentioned that the majority of delegates from India, Pakistan and Ceylon were right-wingers. But on the issue of the Korean war, Nehru's admirers took exactly the same stand as the Communists. The useless Korean war must be stopped at once and white troops must be withdrawn from the country.

I will never forget watching the Indian delegation, led by S.S. Kitchlew, a New Delhi Member of Parliament, presenting flowers and presents to the North Korean delegation. A beautiful and elegant lady presented a bouquet of flowers to a North Korean woman who was dressed in her national costume of white blouse and sky-blue shirt. The two women looked into each other's eyes for a good 30 seconds, and then they fell weeping into each other's arms. The first woman was not a Communist and the second probably was. But, over and above political loyalties, these two women were united in a kinship of misery, a kinship of race and above all in their hatred of the foreigner, the white conqueror and exploiter, it was one of the most tragic moments of the congress.

Hatred of Americans

This feeling that the Korean war was useless seemed to be unanimous among the Asiatic peoples. There was another, no less general, opinion. And that was hatred of the United States. Since June 21, 1950, the American has come to personify western imperialism in Asiatic eyes. The buzzard, the vulture, he who is accused of all the crimes of Israel, is Mr. Truman, Mr. Acheson, the capitalist of Wall Street, the American dollar. They are held responsible for everything; for war, of course, but also for famine, drought, the plague of locusts. If anything goes wrong, the American is the scapegoat.

Beside the war in Korea, the wars in Viet Nam and in Malaya, if not exactly insignificant, are certainly secondary. They were discussed, to be sure, and both French and British imperialism was denounced, but it was hastily pointed out that these imperialistic powers would fall of their own accord if they were not maintained in power—by Washington.

As far back as 1950 I wrote that Moscow would use the Korean war to turn the yellow races against the United States. Now that I have returned from the Far East, my belief has been strengthened. In 1950, the United States' prestige was intact in the Orient. The yellow races looked to Washington for aid in their political and economic liberation. Today the yellow races look to Moscow. They have hitched their wagon to a Red Star. . .

Asian Grievances

During the Peking meetings the question of the re-armament of Japan was brought up along with American bases in the Philippines and on Formose; the blockade of China and American financial restrictions on the tin, rubber, petroleum and cotton markets. Everywhere one heard the same complaint expressed with the same bitterness. The Americans are preventing us from selling our raw materials to China and Russia and they are profiting from this embargo by causing a fall in prices. Our countries want to become industrialized, but the armament policy pursued by the United States forces us from buying the machines and tools we need.

It must be remembered that many of these complaints, even though they are exaggerated "to the telling, have a sound basis in fact. And one thing seems sure. Economic conditions in the Far East, already frightful before 1950, have grown worse since the West began its heavy re-armament policy.

The Indian and Pakistani delegates told me that unemployment is on the increase and the famine rages in several regions of their countries.

"Your country," they told me, "has hundreds of millions of bushels of wheat it doesn't know what to do with, while in our countries, men, women and children are dying of hunger by the tens and hundreds of thousands. All you offer us is guns, cannons and bombs."

Under these conditions, how can you expect us to fight Communism efficiently?

FOUR AFRICANS HANGED

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter)—Four Africans were hanged at Thomson's Falls Saturday for Mau Mau cult killings of fellow Africans. They were the first Africans to be hanged since anti-white activity flared up in Kenya, creating a state of emergency in the British colony.

Believed to Hold World Wheat Record

The Turrell brothers, John, George and William, of Wiggenhall, St. Mary, Eng., are believed to have smashed the world record for wheat growing on their farm in Norfolk and as a result will be visiting the U.S. next spring to explain to American farmers how they produced 131.7 bushels of wheat an acre this autumn. John Turrell, spokesman for the brothers, was surprised and modest about the record yield: "Of course, it is possible to do anything again," he said, "but nobody knows when." He credited fertile soil, strong-stemmed wheat, good luck with the weather and good farming as contributing factors. Above Dick and brother William are seen examining some of the grain produced on their farm. — Central Press Canadian.

Finest Fishing and Hunting Can be Found at Stuart Lake

By PETER MURRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

FORT ST. JAMES, B.C. (CP)—In the past the hunter or fisherman who made his way to this north-central British Columbia village in search of game has been one of two kinds.

He was either a well-heeled American, able to charter an airplane, or a British Columbian keen enough to disregard a long drive over washboard roads.

This year the wealthy Americans didn't show up. They were discouraged by their government's embargo on livestock imports from Canada which included game meat and trophies.

Matter of Time

But it's only a matter of time, residents say, before word-of-mouth within the province, coupled with completion of a new road-building program, will popularize the district.

Fort St. James is the gateway to an as yet unexploited area where some of the finest hunting and fishing in the province are to be found. In Stuart lake there are fighting rainbow trout running up to 25 pounds and over, or lake trout, as big as 40 pounds.

That lake is 50 miles long and seven miles across at its widest point. The big rainbows are found lurking in the narrow, mountain-rimmed western end.

As is usual when big fish are at stake, everyone around here has his own idea on the lure "that can't miss." Most popular this season were bright flashes, although a variety of spoons and fancier doodads still brought in their share of the catch.

If all the accepted lures fail to produce, a baited hook can be used as about three inches of leader behind a flasher.

Good For Trolling

Top-notch trolling is also found on Trembleur lake, 15 miles up the navigable Tachie river from Stuart lake. Guides tell you that rainbow in Trembleur, though smaller on the average than in Stuart, are a superior fish. Colder water makes them firmer and gives them more fight.

For the fly-fisherman the area abounds with streams considered sure-fire to provide the daily quota. Probably the best fly-fishing is found in Pinchie creek, flowing south from Pinchie lake into Stuart.

The big game hunter won't be disappointed either. Moose, caribou deer and grizzlies are plentiful. Farther north, where the terrain becomes more rugged, mountain goats are also found.

Sees State Medicine Given Setback in U.S.

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The president of the American Medical Association said Sunday his group has "temporarily won the battle against governmental control" by the election of Dwight D. Eisenhower and a Republican Congress. Dr. Louis H. Bauer, AMA president, spoke before the welfare committee of the Medical Society of New Jersey. The AMA has always opposed what it calls "socialized medicine" and has fought against some proposed government health measures, particularly compulsory health insurance.

Winterize YOUR CAR WITH B.F.Goodrich MUD-SNOW TIRES

OUTSTOPS ALL OTHER TIRES

The charts of actual comparison tests above show that B.F.G. Mud-Snow tires stop quicker on ice and snow than other leading tires. B.F.G. Mud-Snow tires give a safety margin that can mean the difference between a safe stop and an accident.

OUTPULLS ALL OTHER TIRES

Independent laboratory tests proved that the B.F.G. Mud-Snow tire is the best and safest tire for all winter driving. In mud and snow they outpulled all other tires with up to 25% better traction.

SCIENTIFICALLY DESIGNED TREAD

The B.F.G. Mud-Snow tire has an exclusive traction tread, with flex-lug cleats that bite into mud and loose snow. These flex-lug cleats have a windshield wiper action on ice, packed snow, and wet pavements to provide tremendous traction with long wear.

POPULAR CHOICE FOR QUIET RUNNING AND LONG WEAR

The B.F.G. Mud-Snow tire is actually quieter and smoother riding on clear pavements.

Weddings

HAGERMAN—CALNAN

PICTON—Picton United was the scene of a lovely wedding at 2:30, Wednesday, Dec. 10, when Lois Emma Calnan became the bride of Colin Merrill Hagerman. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Calnan, Dunze's Corners, while the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Hagerman, Waring's Corners. Rev. J. Whitley officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in floor-length gown of white nylon net over taffeta, featuring a strapless bodice, with net cape bolero. Her fingertip veil with lace trim fell from a satin and pearl halo trimmed with pearls. She wore mitts of net trimmed with lace and carried Amethyst and Beauty roses.

Miss Anne Dorsee, as bridesmaid, wore a gown of azure blue, featuring off the shoulder effect, fitted bodice and full skirt. Her flowers were of pink carnations.

Mr. Lyle Hagerman was the groomsman for his brother.

The reception followed at the Maple Inn, Bloomfield. The bride's mother was in navy blue crepe with lace trim, and a wine hat. The groom's mother chose blue crepe with lace trim and matching blue hat. Their corsages were of red roses.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, and enhanced by pink and white streamers suspended from a wedding bell. Mauve baby 'mums centred the tables.

For travelling around Lake Ontario, and the United States, the bride wore a brown dress with sequin trimmed yoke, a tailored tan coat, winter white hat and matching brown accessories. They will reside at 138 Bleecker Street, in Belleville.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was a fur case, and to his groomsman, a leather wallet. The bride's gift to her bridegroom, a set of military brushes; to her bridesmaid, rhinestone earrings.

McNARY—DECKERT

A lovely candlelight wedding took place on Thursday, December 4th, at 7:30 p.m., in the Mission Covenant Church, Wetaskiwin, Alberta, when Marjorie Geraldene Deckert, of Wetaskiwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Deckert, became the bride of Keith Gregg McNary, of Belleville, son of Mrs. R. McNary, and the late Mr. Ross McNary. The Rev. W. Klassen officiated before a background of larkspurs, carnations interspersed with pink candles.

Wedding music included the "Wedding Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of white velvet featuring a matching bolero. She wore a velvet headdress and veil of nylon net, and carried a shower bouquet of roses and chrysanthemums.

The maid of honor, Miss Peggy Armitage, was attired in pink taffeta, with matching headdress, while the senior bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Eiget, wore green taffeta with matching headdress, and the junior bridesmaid, Miss Sharon Deckert, of Wetaskiwin, Alta., sister of the bride also wore green taffeta and lace with matching bonnet.

Mr. Al Moore of Wetaskiwin, attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Edgar Eliasen and Mr. Newton Eliasen, both of Wetaskiwin, Alberta, acted as ushers.

At the reception, held at the Elks' Hall, bride's mother received wearing navy blue crepe and velvet with matching accessories.

For the wedding trip to Regina, Sask., the bride chose a white wool dress and brown topcoat with brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. McNary will reside at Wetaskiwin, upon their return.

Guests were present from Edmonton, and Neidpath, Sask.

Holloway St. United Ch. W.A. Ends Year With Christmas Party

A delightful banquet was a fitting climax to a most successful year for the ladies of Holloway Street United Church W.A.

Last Thursday evening about 130 members and guests of the Association gathered in the Sunday School rooms to partake of a chicken dinner tastefully prepared and nicely served by the ladies of Centenary United Church.

The tables with their exquisite Christmas decorations, under the directions of Mrs. G. Dobbs, and the lighted Christmas tree on the platform made one ever reminiscful of the season.

Mrs. L. Van Orien took charge of the business part of the meeting while Mrs. A. C. Campbell acted as master of ceremonies for the evening.

A diverse, delightful, entertaining and inspirational program had been arranged. Miss Margaret Bowerman, a former secretary of her talent at different interests. Between courses and following group in a lively sing-song. Her first solo was, "In the Heart of Loch Lomond" and her second, "There's a Song in the Air".

Mrs. Joanne Cooke was in charge of the worship service, the theme of which centred around the Christmas story. She was assisted by Mrs. A. Greatrix, who read the Scripture.

Mrs. Norman Montgomery favored the audience with two humorous readings, "Hannah Strikes For More Wages" and "The Minister's Mother-in-Law", and indeed well acted skit, was presented by Mrs. N. Montgomery and Mrs. R. J. Garbutt.

The four hidden prizes were won by Mesdames G. Woodley, H. Quinsey, Ted Conley and L. Bird. The attendance prize was won by Mrs. A. C. Campbell.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Ralph Morden, who in her quiet but impressive manner, told the story of the "Black Madonna."

Mrs. Dobbs graciously extended a vote of thanks to all who had helped with the program while Mrs. G. Dobbs extended a vote of thanks to the ladies who had served such a delicious dinner.

Pot-Luck Luncheon Held by Christ Church Women's Aux. A.B.

On Thursday, an enjoyable time was spent by the Afternoon Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church, when some 34 sat down for a pot-luck luncheon. The tables in "T" formation, were beautiful in their Christmas clothing of candles, crackers, serviettes and ornamental "trees."

The guests at the head table were Canon J. B. Creegan and Mrs. Creegan, Rev. Everett Smith and Mrs. Smith, and Rev. J. Cantrell.

After partaking of the usual sumptuous repast, Mrs. Horace Wright gave an interesting talk on her trip from Belleville to Florida.

The rest of the program consisted of singing Christmas carols and contests. The contest winners were, Mrs. Rorke, Mrs Henning, and Mrs. Godden.

Mrs. G. G. Wright acted as Santa Claus, and everyone was presented with a gift. The president, Mrs. D. Stewart, taken by surprise, was called to the floor and presented with a much admired quilt, made by the W.A. for which she thanked the members

Quinte-Belle Lodge Holds Christmas Party

Thursday evening the Quinte Belle Lodge, ladies society of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, held their annual Christmas party in the form of a dinner at Golden Acre Inn, which was gayly decorated for the festive occasion.

About 30 members enjoyed a delicious dinner after which there was an exchange of gifts.

Immediately following the dinner, the members adjourned to the Engineers' Hall for the regular monthly meeting and election of officers.

Many thanks go to the committee in charge.

Canniffton Church W.A. Elects 1953 Officers

The December meeting of Canniffton Church W.A., was held in the Sunday School rooms, with dinner in charge of Mrs. F. Pulman, and Mrs. G. Lywood, assisted by Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. MacMurter and Mrs. Williams.

The long tables were prettily appointed in white, and centred with candy Christmas trees and other decorations in keeping with the season. The afternoon tea meal was served to a large number. Among the guests were the Rev. Mr. Smallwood and Mrs. Mrs. Brightwell, of the Salvation Army, who spoke briefly.

The president, Mrs. D. Brenton, opened the meeting with Mrs. Boyd at the piano.

After a short, business period, and the officers' report and while that there had been a successful year, Mrs. Willis Brenton read the Scripture found in Luke. The president then read a story "Do Not Wait In Vain", which lead to Bethlehem", stated Mr. McKenzie, and if you follow the stars of truth, justice, mercy, forgiveness, kindness and understanding, you will one day reach it.

"Eternally the world must come to Bethlehem and judge and be judged."

In closing he called upon his listeners, to make an annual spiritual pilgrimage to Bethlehem.

The speaker was introduced by H. R. Tompkins, Associate Patron, while Harold Denike, Worthy Patron, expressed thanks for a splendid address.

Percy Dewdney expressed the thanks and appreciation of the members to the decorating and refreshment committees and the guest artists.

The arrival of Santa Claus and the distribution of the gifts brought a splendid evening to a close.

Rev. A.E. McKenzie Talks to O.E.S. On 'Back to Bethlehem'

Bright decorations in anticipation of Christmas were used effectively in the assembly hall of the Masonic Temple for the annual pot-luck dinner and Christmas party recently sponsored by the Belleville Chapter No. 55, O.E.S.

A brilliantly lighted Christmas scene, which featured the Nativity and other Christmas characters, flanked by two standards bearing blue and colored lights, occupied a prominent position directly behind the head table. A well decorated Christmas tree also aided in providing an appropriate Christmas setting.

Ladies With Good Things

The tables were adorned with red and green streamers, colored centrepieces, colored candles and favors and were well laden with all good things.

Following a toast to Her Majesty, The Queen, Harold Denike, Worthy Patron, warmly welcomed the members, and the guests and acted as master of ceremonies for the program.

The musical entertainment included two instrumental quartets by Mrs. George Wright and her three sons, of Belleville; a solo, "There Were Shepherds Abiding in the Field", by Mrs. Walter Warren, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Morrow; and a duet "Star of the East", by Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Morrow, both of Stirling.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker was Rev. A. E. McKenzie, B.A., principal of Albert College, who delivered a timely and thought-provoking address on the theme, "Back to Bethlehem."

"In olden days the wise men followed a star to Bethlehem and today men are seeking the way as they never sought it before, because the world needs it. There is many ahead that lead to Bethlehem", stated Mr. McKenzie, and if you follow the stars of truth, justice, mercy, forgiveness, kindness and understanding, you will one day reach it.

"Eternally the world must come to Bethlehem and judge and be judged."

In closing he called upon his listeners, to make an annual spiritual pilgrimage to Bethlehem.

The speaker was introduced by H. R. Tompkins, Associate Patron, while Harold Denike, Worthy Patron, expressed thanks for a splendid address.

Percy Dewdney expressed the thanks and appreciation of the members to the decorating and refreshment committees and the guest artists.

The arrival of Santa Claus and the distribution of the gifts brought a splendid evening to a close.

Women's Activities

Duncan, Mrs Ethel Keet, Mrs. Sheila Doyle; men: Mr. Harry Loft; Mr. Seymour Carscallen, Mr. C. Kilner; lone hand, Mr. H. Loft; door prize, Charles Kline.

Refreshments were served.

Collegiate Glee Club Gives Carol Service

Despite the snowstorm a large congregation gathered in the Hollowayy Street United Church Sunday night to hear a Christmas carol service presented by the Belleville Collegiate Glee Club, under the direction qr Mr. Clifford Templer, assisted by Mr. Linton Read. Mr. Read conducted the service. The Glee Club, the Hi-Y Club, and visitors, were welcomed by the minister, The Rev. Sidney E. Larman.

Joan Shindell presented a solo entitled "Jean Bambino" and the entire ensemble sang two numbers entitled "Carols from Other Lands".

Other soloists were, Misses Zarka Novak and June Bowerman. Roberta Allen gave an excellent reading entitled, "The Baby Jesus and the Grey and White Sheep." The congregation joined in singing the processional and recessional carols titled "The First Noel", and "O, Come All Ye Faithful" The vocal harmony and the worshipful spirit of the members of the Glee Club contributed to a splendid evening of worship, suggestive of this Christmas festive season.

Next Sunday afternoon at four o'clock the Holloway Street Church Senior Choir will present the Christmas section of Handel's Messiah, as part of a carol service that will take the place of the regular evening service.

Past Noble Grands Club Installs Officers

On Tuesday evening the Past Noble Grands Club met at the home of Mrs. Twiddy, College Street, for its December meeting and Christmas party.

Mrs. Rose, the president, presided over the business part of the meeting and election of officers for 1953-52 follows: Mrs. Georgina Charlton was elected president; Mrs. Eva Rick, vice-president and Mrs. Janet Twiddy, secretary.

A social time was spent after the meeting playing cards and watching television.

The most enjoyable part of the evening was the banquet which was served cafeteria style and consisted of chicken and all the trimmings.

Exchange of gifts brought another lovely evening to a close.

A vote of appreciation was tendered Mrs. Twiddy for opening her home.

BEAUTY

By KELLY JAMESON

This girl should stoke up!

As a rule, lightweights are over-active

There is a lot of difference between the slender girl and the skinny one. The slender lassie has a neat, trim figure graced with gentle, subtle curves where curves are supposed to be. The skinny one has her bad points—the many of them—and they do not add to beauty of silhouette. If her weight falls far below normal, she will be scrawny. A terrible word! The Family Doc should give her a medical check-up. Normal weight is necessary for health and energy.

No young lady desires to look like a famine victim. Not in these days, when outdoor activities beckon one and life is rushing. Exactitation brings pallor and the cheeks are hollow. One tires easily, has little resistance. The victims of this condition must change her eating habits and get plenty of sleep. If the medical check shows that everything is normal she can easily pick up a pound or two a week. If she doesn't do that, she need not expect to stand in the beauty chorus; she will not qualify.

The thin girl usually is the victim of a diet deficiency, which can result in a serious condition if continued for too long a period. Usually she is a lettuce-and-pickle addict, has a dislike for sweets. She must have a certain amount or cariboo life to chug up a normal appetite, and she must change her eating habits.

She has no interest in breakfast. Whether she likes it or not, she should have a serving of hot cereal with plenty of sugar and cream that will provide her with elements that she needs for putting fat on her ribs—sugar, cream that contains fat, cereal that is starchy.

A quart of rich milk a day is a must, because milk contains calcium and many other elements necessary for body repair and cell building. At least once a day she should have meat or fish for the protein content. Two vegetables a day, besides potatoes. A glass of orange juice before breakfast will help along the good work by giving her vitamin C.

As a rule, the lightweights are over-active, living on nervous energy that isn't the real thing by any means. No matter how tired they are, they keep right on tearing around. Fat cells don't have a chance to catch up with them.

A Buffet Supper On The Five-Buck Level

By Mary Moore

Whether you live in a mansion or a one-room apartment your heart is wide open in this glorious Christmas season and your urge to entertain your friends knows no bounds.

You can do it too. You do not have to be the proud possessor of Sevres china (although if you are for goodness' sake use it) to give warm-hearted hospitality to your friends. If your supply of china and silver is small make your parties small. You can make up for the lack of worldly goods by your warm welcome and your cooking skill.

What I have in mind is a buffet supper that will not throw your food budget out of joint, and that tastes heavenly.

This meal has an added attraction. The hot casserole I have in mind may be cooked in a pressure cooker if you have one and do not have an oven. Pretty good, eh!

BUFFET SUPPER
(Ill-lo Incknes.)

Tuna Casserole
(may be made in pressure cooker or baked)
Relish Tray—Celery Hearts, Pickled Beets, Large Olives
Pineapple Ice-Box Cake
Nuts Coffee

You have come to know me well enough that when I star a dish it has flavor plus, and this tuna casserole is thus starred.

TUNA CASSEROLE
(Serves 8 to 10)

(Directions for pressure cooking are below)

One 7½-oz. can best tuna fish, 2 sliced hard-cooked eggs, 1 can condensed cream of mushroom or celery or chicken soup (I recommend the mushroom or chicken), 1-2 cup crushed potato chips, and 1 package frozen limas or peas. Dilute the soup by adding 1 can milk to it. Grease a 2-quart casserole and put in it half of the tuna which you have coarsely flaked, 1-2 of the limas or peas, half or the sliced eggs and half or the diluted soup. Repeat. Cover top with crushed potato chips. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 30 to 35 minutes, or until bubbling. If to be cooked in pressure cooker cover top with double thickness of wax or parchment paper, tie on securely. Place on rack in cooker, add 1-2 cup water to bottom, cover and bring pressure to 15 lbs. and cook 15 minutes, and immediately release pressure. Remove paper and sprinkle top with crumbled potato chips. (This topping to a pressure-cooked dish gives it a baked appearance.)

PINEAPPLE REFRIGERATOR CAKE (Serves 10)

One and one-half tablespoons gelatin, 6 tablespoons cold water, 1 2-3 cups canned pineapple, well drained (do not use fresh pineapple for will not jell), granulated sugar (see amounts below), 1 1-2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 8-inch sponge layers (or store-bought lady fingers), 1 1-4 cups heavy cream, maraschino cherries (or fresh strawberries if available) for garnish. Soak the gelatin in the cold water 5 minutes. Heat the pineapple to boiling. Remove from heat, stir in the soaked gelatin until dissolved. Add 6 tablespoons sugar and the lemon juice and chill until it begins to set. Meanwhile split the cake layers and cut these in fingers, and use them to line the bottom and sides of a pan or glass dish about 10x8x2 inches. Whip 3-4 cup of the cream and fold it into the still-soft pineapple mixture. Spread half of this on the cake in the bottom of pan, top with another layer of cake fingers, then spread with remaining pineapple mixture, cover with remaining cake fingers, cut side down, pressing top gently with palm. Chill overnight. When ready to serve spread top with remaining cream whipped until stiff and sweetened with 2 teaspoons sugar and 1-4 teaspoon vanilla. Cut in squares. Garnish each serving with sliced or whole maraschino cherries, or sliced fresh strawberries. This may be made two days ahead of time if you wish and lady fingers may be used instead of sponge cake.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"He was telling the grownups things they had never known before."

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the first books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as "The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER IV

Where do you think they found the Boy Jesus, in the Temple.

And what do you suppose He was doing?

He was talking to the eldest and wisest men, telling them about God. Only twelve years old, He was telling the grownups things they had never known before. Jesus was the only person in the world who could do such a thing, because He was not only a twelve-year-old boy—He was God's Son and He and His Father were One.

There were tears in the dark eyes of Mary when she found Jesus. She had felt so sad, so lost without Him. But her Son said to her:

"Don't you know I must be about My Father's work?"

Then Mary understood and smiled. He meant God's work. She put her arms around Him and Joseph dashed away his tears with the back of his hand and they all started back home.

For many years they lived quietly in the white and green town of Nazareth. When Joseph was called home by God, Jesus took full care of His mother. Now He worked alone in the carpenter shop, and He missed singing with Joseph, But He and His mother Mary sang together. Jesus was a wonderful carpenter and always had plenty of work, and He had a great deal to think about the work of helping all the people which some day soon He must begin.

In His heart Jesus was waiting for God, His Father in Heaven to tell Him when to start, and one day He learned that the time had come.

That was when He heard about His cousin John. Far away in Jerusalem, John was talking to crowds of people. He was telling them to be sorry for their mistakes and to make up their minds to be kind to everyIody. He led them, one by one, into the river Jordan and covered their heads with water. That was called baptizing them. Baptizing was a sign that their souls and minds were clean now.

And John kept telling people that soon the Son of God Himself would come to talk to them.

So now Jesus said goodbye to His mother Mary for a while and walked the long, long road to where John was.

When John saw Jesus coming near he gave a shout of joy. While Jesus stood in the river, John baptized Him, and a white dove flew overhead and all the people heard a Voice from Heaven saying:

"This is my beloved Son in Whom I am well pleased."

Next Jesus had to test Himself. He walked out alone into the desert. For forty days and forty nights He stayed alone among the rocks and sand. In all that time He had nothing to eat and nothing to drink. He had no bed, not even a pillow. At night it was piercing cold but He had no fire. Bears and wolves were nearby, making noises in the night.

When the long time was over, Jesus was very hungry and thirsty, but now He had to face the worst time of all. He heard a wicked voice, trying to make Him do wrong things, and not the most spring highlight was Christopher Fry's comedy about an amateur astronomer, "A'nus Observed," with Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer, chosen by critics as the best foreign play of the season.

Among fall openings, Arthur Laurents' "The Time of the Cuckoo" won applause both for the play and for star Shirley Booth's portrayal of an American spinster in Rome seeking romance and finding disillusionment.

Two others, Shaw's "The Millionairess" and "The Deep Blue Sea" by Terence Rattigan, owe much of their success to the talents of the respective stars, Katherine Hepburn and Margaret Sullavan.

Maurice Evans was universally acclaimed in a thriller from London, "Dial M for Murder," about a man who plans the murder of his rich wife.

"My Darlin' Aida," the current season's musical based on the Verdi opera, with Elaine Malbin and Dorothy Sarnoff, was well received.

October saw the first appearance of a new Gilbert and Sullivan company formed by S. M. Chartock, its cast headed by Martyn Green, famed comedian from the D'Oyly Carte company. Reviewers grew enthusiastic as the four operas series progressed.

In the long-run department are the musicals "Guys and Dolls," "The King and I," with Gertrude Carpenter replacing the late Gertrude Lawrence, and "South Pacific," and two comedies, "The Moon Is Blue," with Janet Riley of Simcoe, Ont., now doing the lead, and "The Four-Poster."

The Metropolitan Opera Company broke new ground at the year's end with a television broadcast of "Carmen" direct from the stage, carried on a closed circuit to theatres across the country.

Broadway Fare in '52 Spiced With International Flavor

By GLADYS LENNON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—Broadway fare was spiced with an international flavor in 1952, with British, French and Greek visiting companies providing some of the top entertainment.

Canada was there, too, Toronto born Beatrice Lillie playing to sold-out houses in her series of sketches titled "An Evening with Beatrice Lillie."

The Renaud-Barrault Company of Paris and the National Theatre of Greece, starring Katina Paxinou and Alexis Minotis, played successful limited engagements toward the year-end: the former in a repertory ranging from Moliere comedies to Andre Gide's translation of "Hamlet," and the latter in two Sophocles tragedies in modern Greek.

Early 1952 saw Sir Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh on Broadway in their Festival of Britain productions, Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" and Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

New York critics generally rated the theatrical season which ended last May 31 as one of the poorest since the turn of the century. But in the 1952 portion of it were several offerings worthy of note. Second Hit

Foremost is the Pulitzer Prize winner, "The Shrike," a first play by Joseph Kramm which ended a successful Broadway run in June prior to film commitments of its producer-director-star, Jose Ferrer. Judith Evelyn, formerly of Moose Jaw, Sask., gave an "extraordinarily effective" performance as his wife who has her erring husband committed to an insane asylum rather than lose him to another woman.

High in popularity is Mary Chase's Fantasy, "Mrs. McThing," about a witch with unique methods of punishing persons who are unkind to her adopted daughter. Helen Hayes stars as one of the witch's victims. Mrs. Chase made a second hit in the fall with her "Bernardine," a comedy dealing with teen-age boys.

Another spring highlight was Christopher Fry's comedy about an amateur astronomer, "A'nus Observed," with Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer, chosen by critics as the best foreign play of the season.

Among fall openings, Arthur Laurents' "The Time of the Cuckoo" won applause both for the play and for star Shirley Booth's portrayal of an American spinster in Rome seeking romance and finding disillusionment.

Two others, Shaw's "The Millionairess" and "The Deep Blue Sea" by Terence Rattigan, owe much of their success to the talents of the respective stars, Katherine Hepburn and Margaret Sullavan.

Maurice Evans was universally acclaimed in a thriller from London, "Dial M for Murder," about a man who plans the murder of his rich wife.

"My Darlin' Aida," the current season's musical based on the Verdi opera, with Elaine Malbin and Dorothy Sarnoff, was well received.

Knitwear Magic

BY ALICE ALDEN

THE Hallans have a word for it—Iniarsia—one that is rapidly finding its way into the world fashion parlance. Roxana translates Iniarsia which is an intricate inlay of weave-upon-weave, into this stunning two-piece knitted number. The diamond and chevron pattern of the blouse is in tones of gray balanced by a slim, ribbed skirt. This is the sort of outfit that is adding to the stature and beauty of wool knit wear and making it more than ever an indispensable part of the well-rounded wardrobe for town, as well as for the country. Magical machine-knitting techniques bring good knitwear down to interesting price levels.

Welcome Stranger, Tea, Back In Gift Chests, Fancy Caskets

By MURIEL NARAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—For the first time in more than 10 years of rationing, a welcome stranger has returned to Britain's gift shelves this Christmas. It materialized since October, is back to old-time popularity in gift chests and fancy caskets.

The end of tea rationing, one of the most unpopular measures since food control started in January, 1940, contributes to the seasonal brightness of Britain's lightest-raised Christmas since the end of the Second World War.

Controls still govern such things as meat, eggs, butter, cheese and sweets—but counters groan with a variety of goods more than ever covers the gaps.

There are crystallized fruits, marron glace, fancy cakes, sweet biscuits and despite the threat of shortage referred to by the food ministry early this year, canned goods are still plentiful.

Cheaper Turkeys

Turkeys and other poultry are in better supply than last year—and less expensive. Home-killed turkeys sell at seven shillings and under, geese, ducks, chickens and Irish turkeys average 3s 6d.

A variety of unrationed food is available Included are cooked gammon (bacon) at less than 10 shillings a pound and many unrationed cheeses, such as English stilton.

Shops display the most attractive variety of gifts in reasonable prices seen since the war.

Toys cover almost every taste. A delta-wing jet plane that flies on solid-non-inflammable "fuel" costs just over £1 and there's a stylish motor car that runs for 2½ hours on three small electric batteries.

Coronation Scene

Youngsters with a love for lead soldiers go for the toy Coronation scene comprising a gold state coach drawn by eight horses and escorted by "soldiers of the Queen."

Well-dressed dolls, cute animal toys galore and a large variety of mechanical toys range in price from £1 to £2. There are also radio-controlled cars and jeeps, engineering sets, electric trains, cowboy outfits with "shooting irons" and spaceman get-ups with sonic beam guns.

This is the first Christmas since 1939 stores have been opened for evening shopping, and business has been brisk. Gifts are more attractively assembled.

The chief lack is in full-fashioned nylon stockings. But there is a generous supply of nylon undies with deep insets of lace that make attractive gifts and cost less than £3.

Another welcome return to the gift shelves is delicately-patterned china, not marked as "export reject."

Policewoman Says Powderpuff More Deadly Than Revolver

HALIFAX (CP)—Halifax's only policewoman says a powderpuff is far more deadly than a revolver.

In other words, treat prisoners with courtesy, not force, and you'll have no trouble.

Mrs. Lillian Rafuse has been a member of the morality squad since 1940.

"When other girls hoped to grow up to be teachers and nurses, I always dreamed of becoming a policewoman," she says. "I think it is the most wonderful job in the world because I meet all kinds and types of people."

Never Used Force

Mrs. Rafuse looks after women who have been jailed for drunkenness, brawling, shoplifting and other indictable offences. She also escorts women taken to other cities for trial.

"I have never had to use force to bring them in," she says. "I treat them as if they were guests in my own living room, and they always respond to the method. After all, violators of the law are not animals but human beings just as anyone."

If the need ever arose, however, Mrs. Rafuse would have little trouble. A tall, strong woman in her 40s, she has a revolver marksmanship average of 94 out of 100. She averages 87 with her left hand.

While on a business trip to Savannah, Ga., she asked a state patrolman why he was loaded down with so much ammunition.

"He then asked me if I could shoot. I told him my average and that I had been instructed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Tip-Top Tailen

"The patrolman whistled and said 'M'am, if you-all were taught to shoot by the RCMP then you-all shore can shoot.'"

"To make escort work less obvious I always tell the girl to take my arm," said Mrs. Rafuse. "In that way if they should let go to run away, I would know it before they had gone a step."

Mrs. Rafuse, one of four police-women in the Atlantic provinces, has two hobbies: crocheting and growing African violets.

German Officer Type Goes On Forever Despite Systems

By TOM REDDY

BERLIN (AP)—Systems come and systems go, but the German officer goes on forever.

Dynamic General Vincenz Mueller is the new chief of staff of the Russian zone's growing Red Army.

Mueller, professional soldier, has vaulted from the Kaisers through the Nazis to the Communists with remarkable ease.

Rubber Ball

The only pattern one can find in Mueller's experience is his rubber-ball habit of bounding into position in capitalism on fate.

Mueller's Catholic background and his current fealty to the Communist state is a paradox in itself. Born in Bavaria 58 years ago, young Vincenz grew up in a Bavarian monastery. Even today he has an austere, monastic outlook on most things.

He became an officer in the Kaiser's First World War army and after its collapse, Mueller managed to wrangle a spot on the general staff of the Reichswehr, the organization Field Marshal Von Seeckt secretly built into the solid nucleus for Hitler's rampaging armies two decades later.

The stormy 1930's found Mueller serving as adjutant for General Kurt Von Schleicher. The Hitler purge, which cost Schleicher his life, slid past young Major Mueller as though he wasn't there.

By the time the Second World War broke, he had risen to chief of staff of the 17th Army.

Russian Victory

Disaster struck the general, now a three-star, when he took the German Eighth Army deep into the Soviet Union in 1942 and Stalingrad turned the tide in the Russians' favor.

Nazi generals and officers fell to the Soviet scythe. But Mueller bounced again. He quickly joined forces with the Kremlin's "free German committee."

Mueller's first task for the Reds was to organize the National Democratic party, consisting of former Nazis who professed a new-found allegiance to Moscow. As the political secretary and deputy chairman, he was and is the real boss of this outfit.

Some Germans think Mueller is playing for bigger game. They believe he is counting on the day the Socialist Unity (Communist) party may lose favor with the Kremlin and he can promote his own NDP to the top hole.

A General Motors Value

19 great features that mean finer performance at lower cost

VALVE-IN-HEAD ENGINE: The right power for your job—plus economy in the Loadmaster or the Thriftmaster engine.

RUBE-FLAME COMBUSTION: High efficiency combustion chamber squeezes all available power from fuel.

POWER-JET CARBURETION: Meters the flow of fuel to meet exact requirements of engine load and speed with 2-way controlled ignition.

FULL-LENGTH-JACKET WATER COOLING: Water jackets completely surround each cylinder for more uniform cooling.

SYNCHRO-MESH TRANSMISSION: Quick, quiet, safe shifting—eliminates "double-clutching."

DIAPHRAGM SPRING CLUTCH: One single-disc spring provides positive engagement, reduces wear.

HYPOID REAR AXLE: Lowers much pressures, stronger tooth section gives extra durability.

STRADDLE-MOUNTED PINION: Maintains better gear alignment, better tooth contact on medium- and heavy-duty models.

SINGLE-UNIT REAR AXLE HOUSING: No bolts, no joints; tubular beam construction to withstand heavy loads.

FULL SIZE REAR AXLE INSPECTION PLATE: Saves time and trouble on inspections during regular maintenance.

SPLINED AXLE-TO-HUB CONNECTION: Drives pinion mate directly with wheel hub on heavy-duty models. No bolts to loosen or permit oil leaks.

BALL-BEAR STRESSES: Free rolling steel balls between worm and nut cut friction, save wear.

"TWIN-ACTION" HEAVY-DUTY REAR BRAKES: Two cylinders in each brake for safer, more positive braking.

"HYDRO-ACTION" LIGHT-DUTY BRAKES: Make full use of truck momentum for greater stopping power.

BONDED BRAKE LININGS: Riveted linings on light and medium-duty models nearly double lining life.

RATTLESNAP CAB CONSTRUCTION: Each cab is a double welded, all-welded unit of great strength.

FLEXI-MOUNTED CAB: Minimizes vibration and driver fatigue.

HEAVY-DUTY CHANNEL TYPE FRAME: Deep channel-section side rails give maximum rigidity.

ROOMY 5-MAN COMFORT: Wide, deep and roomy, side to side, up to bottom, front to rear describes Chevrolet cabs built to accommodate 3 men with ease. Double deck spring seats for extra comfort, less fatigue.

Eisenhower Home, At Work On 'Positive Programs' To Bring Peace in Korean War

Denies Threatening To Sink Israel Ship

Twenty-four-year-old Israel sea captain Adam Graetz is reported planning to resume command of his ship after denying "rumors and irresponsible communications" that he had gone berserk aboard the 3,836-ton Abraham Graetz and conducted a reign of terror. He said the reports were originated by an Israel paper. Seen above in Halifax after he had been removed from his ship, the young skipper reportedly threatened to sink the ship unless his father was made a member of the Israeli cabinet and forced a radio operator, at gunpoint, to send a message to Tel Aviv. In New York, a spokesman for the ship's owners said that disgruntled seamen may be responsible for the radio report. — Central Press Canadian.

by RELMAN MORIN

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Eisenhower goes back to work today, prepared to map "positive programs" for bringing peace to Korea.

He said he returned from his trip to the war zone with new confidence about the outcome of seeking a satisfactory solution.

In two public statements Sunday, the general expressed optimism.

However, he repeated his view that no simple formula is at hand. He said patience, foresight and common sense will be needed in finding one.

Eisenhower gave no indication when he plans to meet Gen. Douglas MacArthur. MacArthur declared in a speech 10 days ago: "I am confident there is a clear and definite solution to the Korean conflict." Several days later, Eisenhower messaged MacArthur that he would like to talk with him, and MacArthur replied that he would be agreeable.

Trip Startles Paint

The President-elect said on his return here Sunday that his trip was a startling-point for his own planning. At La Guardia field he said:

"Every one of us thinks we have learned something to make this expedition a sort of starting-place from where we are going to plan the programs we are going to adopt.

"And we expect them to be positive programs. Because you know, my friends, just because one side wants peace doesn't make peace. We must go ahead and do things that induce the others to want peace also."

Eisenhower also had a prepared statement for reporters when his big Constellation landed.

Qualified Optimism

The general tone of both statements, however, was a qualified optimism. "All of us have long realized," he said in the prepared statement, "that there can be no simple formula for bringing a swift, victorious end to this war. But at the very least, that knowledge prepares us for whatever tough tasks lie ahead."

In another passage he said: "I believe the architects of aggression can be made to realize that it would be fateful folly to ignite other conflagrations like the one for can conflict elsewhere in the world."

With respect to the future, he made three points:

"First, the training of RoK (Republic of Korea) forces can and should be expanded and speeded.

"Second, . certain problems of supply have reached rather serious proportions, and require early correction.

"Finally, we must all recognize—in all our thinking and our planning—that the Korean war is but the most dramatic and most painful phase, for us at this moment, of our world-wide struggle against Communist aggression. This journey mark not the end but the beginning of a new effort to conclude honorably this phase of the global struggle."

Detector Tests Fail to Link Men With Crime

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Police said today lie-detector tests had failed to link Wendell Hall, 49, and his son, Travis, 27, with the $7,128 shotgun massacre of Gard Young and three small children.

They said both the father, held here, and the son, held in San Francisco, would be released unless further questioning developed tangible clues. Both Halls denied any link with the robbery killings. They were jailed on a technical holding charge.

The Halls were arrested last Saturday, police said when an anonymous informant told them the father and son talked with him about a planned robbery of a man named Young. Gard Young, his two small daughters and a neighbor boy were beaten to death near their Chester, Calif., home Oct. 10.

49 Believed Killed

MANILA. (AP) — Forty-nine miners were trapped and presumed killed today when a river broke through a gold-mine shaft and engulfed them in a thundering wall of water.

It was the worst mine disaster on record in the Philippines.

The water rushed into a 400-foot deep tunnel of the United Paracale Mining Co. on southeastern Luzon.

J. V. Stagler, company spokesman, said:

"The whole mine is reported flooded. There isn't a chance that they survived."

Riot Victim

Adrien Dumas, 35, was shot by policeman during a clash between police and strikers at Louiseville, Que., 70 miles west of Montreal. Traffic Constable Benoit Casgrain of the provincial police said he fired the shot that felled Dumas but said it was accidental. A number of other strikers were injured by police clubs and 25 were arrested as violence flared at the plant of Associated Textiles where a strike has been in progress since last March. — (CP) —

Olympic Swimmer Given Year In Jail for Theft

BRIGHTON, England (Reuters) —Jean Caplin, 22, 1948 Olympic swimmer who said "the bottom dropped out of my world" when she wasn't chosen for the 1952 team, today was sentenced to one year in jail for theft.

She pleaded guilty to stealing property from a sports stadium and asked for 11 other offences to be taken into consideration.

The magistrate told her she was a "person without any moral character at all."

"Just because you were disappointed at a certain stage of your swimming career you seem to have let yourself go to pieces completely," he said.

Airman Disarms Live Bomb Stuck In Bomb Rack

TOKYO (AP) — The United States Air Force said today an iron-nerved airman saved the lives of a B-29 crew by disarming a live bomb stuck in a bomb rack while its 60-second time fuse ticked away.

The daring feat was accomplished in 40-below-zero temperature as the Superfort with a crew of 13 started home to Okinawa from a bombing mission over North Korea.

Gunner Ernest P. Gooris of Glassport, Pa., crawled into the windswept bomb bay. The lives of the crew hing on his speed and skill.

"I found that a flash bomb used for night strike photos had fallen on a couple of 100-pounders that didn't drop," Gooris said.

Korean War Has Cost More Than 2,000,000 Casualities To Both Sides Says Informant

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—THE Korean war has cost more than 2,000,000 military casualties to both sides, according to the best information available here.

The figure is based on official announcement of losses by the UN allies and estimates by the high command of losses suffered by the Communists.

Of the 2,129,310 military casualties 364,370 have been suffered by UN forces and the remaining 1, 764,940 are estimated to have been borne by the Communists, mostly by the Chinese Reds.

The figures do not include civilians, estimated in the tens of thousands. They do not cover all the fighting, especially during the last 60 days of bitter war for the peaks of central Korea, primarily between Chinese and Republic of South Korea troops.

Heavy Losses

Estimates available to non-Communist sources say the Chinese Communists have suffered 795,119 killed and wounded. North Korean killed and wounded were estimated at 497,708.

The UN total of killed and wounded is 283,579, of which the RoK total is 152,672 and the U.S. total is 114,661. The other 15 countries with fighting forces have suffered a total of 10,240 killed and wounded. Canadian forces have 226 killed, 968 wounded and 29 missing or prisoners.

ROKs Heavy Losers

UN prisoner and missing lists total 80,791, of which the RoKs number 66,102, the U.S. 12,997, and the other UN members 1,892.

The RoK army tall is the UN's highest, with 35,031 listed dead, 123,647 wounded, and 66,102 missing, a total of 224,780.

The U.S., furnishing nearly half the UN combat manpower, listed in its weekly casualty report Dec. 10: 20,073 killed, 94,588 wounded, and 12,997 missing, for a total of 127,658.

Canada Quietly Carries Out Commitments Made to NATO; More Strength Needed in '53

By DOUGLAS ROW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) —The North Atlantic pact passed from enthusiasm to controversy and to cold realities in 1952, but all the time it was growing stronger. But it will still not be strong enough when 1953 dawns.

Through all the fluctuations of mood and action, Canada went quietly on carrying out the commitments she had made to the pact as her share in the joint three year building of Western armed strength.

She said she would do no less than she had promised, the restated suggestions that she should do more.

Public Promises

To those who said Canada isn't doing enough, the official Canadian reply was that it is a matter of Canadian pride and Canadian policy to do what is promised and not to promise what it can't be done.

Big aims were enunciated at the controversial February meeting of the pact council in Lisbon with Secretary Affaire Minister Pearson of Canada presiding.

They called for 50 divisions and 4,000 aircraft in Europe at the end of this fiscal year plus a build-up to 96 divisions and 10,000 planes by 1954. Those aims became the pivot of hot debate in one country after another.

Mr. Pearson himself came home to find the CCF waging the biggest domestic row yet on the issue of policy, calling for a lowering of the "disastrous" military targets and greater stress on economic aid.

Mr. Pearson defended the targets and attacked the CCP of giving comfort to the Kremlin.

Aiming Too High

By the end of the year, however, it became clear that NATO was aiming too high. One country after another said that economic factors were forcing a slowing and modification of its rearmament effort.

Through all this, the combined strength grew and roughly 8,500 Canadian soldiers and airmen were on the continent of England to buttress it. But Gen. Matthew Ridgway, the supreme commander, warned that the strength still wasn't enough to beat back a Russian strike for the English channel, that the reserve strength in particular was weak.

The constant underground war between economic instability and military security had an effect on Canada. In fact, it lay beneath the Pearson-CCF clash.

NATO asked Canada to send economic aid to Europe to help ease the instability of her allies. In effect, Canada was asked to send gifts of basic exports. The Canadian government declined on the ground that to do so would imperil Canada's own trading position.

For the first time, a full-fledged Canadian embassy was established at NATO's new headquarters in Paris with A. D. P. Heeney, former departmental undersecretary at external affairs headquarters, as the first ambassador.

Canadian Program

Canada's program of aid to Europe was broken down this way:

Military—The army's commitment of one 5,500 man brigade was filled in 1951. The first large change-over in manpower took place late in 1952. Of four wings—12 squadrons—of RCAF jet fighters promised by the spring of 1954, two were overseas by the end of the year and another was due to go in another three to four months. The navy said it could put 34 warships into North Atlantic service quickly if war should come. The year saw the northwest Atlantic mapped out as Canada's sea in the event of war.

Aid—Parliament voted another $300,000,000 in "mutual aid" for Europe to cover arms shipments to Allies as well as air training in Canada. For the second year in a row, however, the actual money spent was expected to fall below the estimate.

Other costs — Parliament voted another $27,000,000 to cover Canadian contributions to joint expenditures on such things as airfields, headquarters and communications in Europe.

Toronto Man Fined in Crash That Killed One

Bancroft—Thomas Mitchell, 41, of Toronto, was convicted of dangerous driving in Magistrate's Court here on Wednesday and fined $25.00 and costs of $165.10 as a result of an accident on September 18, on 62 highway south of the village in which Grant Boyd, Toronto car dealer and former paratroop officer, was killed.

A charge of drunk driving was dismissed by Magistrate R. C. Jackson after Dr. M. L. Mador testified that he had used ether in connection with the taking of a blood sample from the defendant following the accident. Dr. Ward Smith, of the Attorney General's Laboratory testified that an analysis of the blood sample in question showed 1.7 parts per thousand of alcohol but it was meaningless if the doctor taking the sample had used ether in sterilization as it would tend to raise the alcohol content of the blood to a degree relative to the quantity used. Mitchell told the court that he had had only a small amount of whiskey and beer some hours prior to the accident.

In a lengthy hearing of the dangerous driving charge evidence was introduced to show that the car, driven by Mitchell and owned by the deceased, had left the highway on a curve and hill, crossed a ditch, climbed two rock cuts, travelled through the air for some sixty feet before knocking over a pole and landing some fifty feet below the rock cut on its roof. Boyd's body was thrown from the car and found at the top of a rock cut lying across the broken pole. Provincial police officers testified that Mitchell had admitted driving the car but told them he could remember no details of the accident. Nine Crown witnesses were heard.

The magistrate, in giving judgment, was of the opinion that the evidence should leave no doubt and was only consistent with terrific speed and a degree of negligence. He also advised defence counsel Gordon Tinker, that he was imposing a moderate fine mainly because of the high court costs. Mitchell's driving licence was suspended for one month. A further charge of careless driving was withdrawn by the Crown.

A conviction of driving while his licence was under suspension and one of driving while the permit for his truck was under suspension resulted in a fine of $25.00 and costs against Cecil Barker.

Magistrate Jackson had heard the case two weeks ago and reserved judgment at that time.

He ordered Barker's truck confiscated in addition to the fine.

Barker was involved in a collision with another truck on 62 highway last month. His licence was under suspension at the time from a previous conviction and it was charged he had ignored the order of suspension from the Department of Highways.

A charge of careless driving against Arthur Breach, Belleville, was remanded to December 17 at the request of the Crown.

Donald Welsh, Maple Leaf, was convicted of causing a disturbance at a dance and was fined $10 and costs on his plea of guilty. Four other persons paid fines of $10 and costs for minor infractions.

The court docket, which included two cases of a serious nature, necessitated sitting which lasted until midnight.

Canadian Has Manpower Problems of Six Nations to Solve

Officially titled as "Director of Organization and Manpower" for Allied Air Forces Central Europe, Group Captain Cavendish Carling-Kelly of Toronto, sometimes admits he feels more like a tight-rope walker. He came to AAFCE last July, after two years as RCAF Air Attache at the Canadian Embassy in Paris, and brought to the job the experience of three years as Chief of Organization and Establishment for the RCAF in Ottawa. Now, he comes to grips daily with manning and structural problems for General Lauris Norstad's command, which includes forces not only of Canada, but the U.S., England, France, Belgium and The Netherlands. "It's not quite the same as my old RCAF assignment," he says frankly. "Then, I had but one boss. Now I have six. Getting the job done and still keeping the various members of the 'family' happy has me walking a mental tight-rope." The allusion is apt. On one side of the fence, he must respect a plan of organization delicately balanced to give each of its contributors a representative voice in AAFCE. On the other, he has to consider that the AAFCE manpower program which is carefully attuned to the over-all needs — but makes little allowance for the personnel problems which beset each of the nations who make allocations to it. Above, he is seen discussing one of the intricate problems involved in balancing jobs among the six nations at international headquarters in Fontainbleau, France, with Lieut.-Col. Thomas E. McCabe, right, of South Orange, N.J., a member of his staff. — Central Press Canadian.

MARYSVILLE

MARYSVILLE. — Mrs. Leonard Bates, Toronto, spent the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Charles McAlpine, and Mr. McAlpine.

Mrs. Mary McGurn, Belleville, is visiting her daughter, and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. McAuley.

Miss Mary McGarrity, Toronto, spent the week-end visiting at the McAlpine home.

Miss Kay Walsh, Brockville, is enjoying a holiday with her mother. She also visited her sister Mrs. B. McLaren in Windsor.

A life-long resident of Marysville, Mrs. Thomas Currie, passed away at her home, Wednesday evening. The late Mrs. Currie was in her 81st year. Sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved family and relatives.

Mr George Semmith, Detroit, Mich., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Patrick Farrell, who has been seriously ill.

Miss Estelle McCambridge, nurse-in-training at Kingston, spent the week-end at her home in Marysville.

Program Hampered

TORONTO (CP)—Highway Minister Doucett said Saturday Ontario's program to make level crossings safer is hampered by red tape in provincial-federal relations.

Mr. Doucett made the statement after Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wilcox of Brampton were killed at a level crossing in Weston Friday night. Six persons have lost their lives at the crossing since 1945.

He said there isn't enough money in the grade crossing fund to cover expenses of improving level crossings. But, he added, the province is trying to abolish as many bad crossings as possible by providing bridges.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kennedy, of Belleville, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Currie, on Saturday.

PICTON

Canadian Legion Branch Reports Successful Year

Picton — One of the most successful years in the history of Branch 178, Canadian Legion, was reported at the annual meeting. Receipts from special projects exceeded $16,000. Many improvements have been made to grounds and buildings, making them among the finest Legion headquarters in Ontario.

Retiring president W. G. McLean, and his executive were highly complimented on the great progress made.

Vice-president Wallie Evans was elected president for 1953, with E. J. Bateson and Dick Hart as vice-presidents; Al. Stonebridge, secretary-treasurer; Robert Skitteral, sergeant-at-arms; Bert Prior, recording secretary.

In a keen contest, the following six were elected as members of the executive: Clifford McIlwaine, Herb. Vinkless, Bill Winter, Morley Dulmage, Ron Stone and Clarence Way.

Christmas Party

Plans were made for the Christmas party for Veterans and their families. This is being held at the Legion hall, Monday night, December 22, with a committee of Frank Starr, Phil Dodds, E. J. Bateson, Bert Prior, in charge. Members of the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary will assist.

Open House is to be held on New Year's Day; W. G. McLean, E. J. Bateson, Al. Stonebridge, Dick Hart and W. Evans in charge.

A motion was passed urging that the names of the fallen in World War II be commemorated by some memorial.

C. R. Wildfield, Q.C., congratulated the general treasurer, A. Stonebridge and W. Evans, canteen chairman, on their reports. Cheers were given re-iiring president Bill McLean, who, with his executive, has given unlimited time in promoting work of the Legion.

Padre Frank Starr re-elected said that office was commended on his work through the Poppy Fund and in other ways and E. J. Bateson on his toy renovation project.

Mr., Mrs. J. Sargisnon Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Bancroft — A happy family group gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Sargisnon here on Sunday to celebrate the couple's golden wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Sargisnon, life-long residents of the district, will have been married 50 years on December 24th.

The gathering was a surprise party and was held last Sunday in advance of the anniversary day so that out-of-town members of the family would be able to attend.

Mrs. Sargisnon was born near London, Ontario, in 1884, and came here with her parents, when she was one year old. She grew up in the Bancroft district and was married to Mr. Sargisnon in 1902 at the Bancroft United Church. The village was then in its infancy.

Mr. Sargisnon, who was born in 1877 in Cardiff township, likes to recall memories of the past half century in the village and surrounding district, and the times he drove his oxen team to the old grist mill on the York river to have wheat ground for flour to be used in the family basted.

They have seven children living and 26 grandchildren! Two children passed away a number of years ago. Thirty-one members of the immediate family were present and presented the happy couple with a beautiful mantel clock, floor lamp and a table lamp. A three-tier anniversary cake was also presented them.

Family members present were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sargisnon and family, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sargisnon and family, Marmora; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Sargisnon and family, Bethany; Mr. and Mrs William Sargisnon and family of Haliburton; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nichol and family of Kenise Lake; Mr. and Mrs. George Keilar and family of Bancroft; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sargisnon and family, Bancroft; Mrs. Lulu Pfumley, Bancroft and Mrs. Anne Evans of Madoc.

decorations also graced the hall.

Mr. Ross H. Hermiston spent a recent week-end with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kirkey were Wednesday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cooke.

Miss June MacKenzie, of Campbellton, New Brunswick, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hermiston.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Martin are spending several days with their daughter Mrs. R. A. Kerr, Mr. Kerr and family at Agincourt.

Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Cooke were Mr. and Mrs. Dale Pomeroy and family, of Trenton, Mr. and Mrs. George Snarr, of Hoard's Station, Miss Betty Cooke and Mr. Clarence Miracle of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Cooke.

Mrs. Norman Ray, Beverly and Barbara spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Carman Filchett at Picton. They also attended the Santa Claus parade on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Lucas, Glenora, Ont., Mrs. F. B. Fresle and Miss A. McCormick of Sarnia, Ont., were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Cross. They were accompanied on their return by Mrs. Cross and Susan, who will spend a month with her parents.

Mr. John Demorest, Trenton, is spending this week with his son and his wife at Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Sig Demorest.

FLYING CALVES

MELBOURNE, Australia (CP)—A airways freighter is soon to make the longest airlift of cattle ever recorded. It will carry 20 calves from Karachi to New Guinea, a distance of 6,000 miles.

Little Benny's Note Book

The doorbell rang while we were eating breakfast, and I ran to answer it and it was Mr. Satterlee the brush man, and I came back and told ma, and she said, Oh dear, I've got too many brushes now, but Mr. Satterlee will never take that for an answer.

I'll take over, pop said. I got rid of him once, and what man has done, man can do again, he said, and ma said, Not with Mr. Satterlee, I give you fair warning William.

Dont worry, my dear, pop said. I licked him the last time by asking him for a mustash twirler, and that's what Ill still insist on. Never change a winning game, he said.

And he went out to the frunt door, me going with him to see what happened, and Mr. Satterlee said, Good morning, let me present you with this little brush absolutely free as a good will offering. It is especially designed for triangular bottles. And with an actual purchase I am authorized to let you have as a gift one of our new skalp reviving brushes. They are especially designed to massadge the skalp without disterbing the hair, he said.

That's just fine, if you happen to have the mustash twerler I was asking you about, pop said, and Mr. Seterlee said, No, but I can show you our latest model. It's called the Smokers Dreem, and it is especially designed to keep tobacco pipes as sweet as a nut. It fits the smallest stem, and it revolves automatically as you push and pull, he said.

Yee gods, I'm trapped, same four price, pop said.

Which Mr. Satterlee did, and pop told it, and pop went back in the breakfist room with the 13 brushes, and ma asked him w.at happened, and he showed her the 2 free ones, and she still asked him what happened, so he had to tell her about the Smokers Dreem.

Glen Roys Edge Stouffville Clippers 2-1 In Thrilling Senior Battle

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A DANDY!

Nearly fourteen hundred fans forgot taxes, Christmas and Sunday dinner for a couple of hours Saturday night with a lot of them curious as to what kind of a team is the Glen Roys. They weren't disappointed. The Glens, with the sharp group leaders, the Stouffville Clippers as their guests, came through with a brilliant piece of puck-chasing to edge the 1952 senior "B" champions headed by Markham's Nick Bangay.

It was by far and wide the best chunk of hockey dished up this season and if it is a forerunner of things to come, then fandom is in for some eye-pleasing battles before playoff time comes.

The Glens were at the top of their form. That 5-6 set-back at the hands of the Peter on Friday night didn't do them any harm and they flashed a brand of hockey that was a pleasure to watch. But they had to be good. The Clippers gave every evidence why they lead the group albeit only by one point, and on the night's play they were the best team to show its wares here this season.

It was thrilling nerve-tingling hockey from the time Referee Louis LeCompte sounded the "They're Off" whistle. Both squads maintained a terrific pace throughout and long before the first puck rattled the twine it was evident that a real wonld look like a million. Brilliant passing plays, hard, clean checking, both fore and aft, had the crowd on the edge of big seats all night. And the thrilling climax came when the desperate Clippers rushed goalie Keough with forty seconds to go in a last-second effort to snatch the game out of the fire.

But the Glens were as equally desperate in their efforts to protect that one-goal lead. They held off the storming Clippers until time ran out and they tucked away their fourth victory in five starts.

Manager Don McIlvrin smiled broadly after the game. Not only was he delighted with the sparkling win, but the increased attendance indicated growing interest in the Glens. Up to Saturday night fans were turning out in small numbers, somewhat under the eight and nine hundred. However it is hoped that the colorful exhibition staged by the Glens and Clippers Saturday night will keep the fans coming. The Glens are playing brilliant hockey these days as was evidenced in their display against the Clippers, and they deserve the wholehearted support of the fans via the box office. And that goes for the junior Glens, too.

As a matter of fact, this department believes the senior "B" group of this district is one of the best, if not the best in the province. With only three points separating the first four teams and the brand of hockey improving with each performance, it is doubtful if any group is producing the same kind of crowd-pleasing games as this one.

And Jim Irvine, ex-Redmen goalkeeper, who was in the city the other day, remarked that this brand of hockey is the equal of and better than the Toronto senior league. And Jim should know for up until a few days ago he was the goalie for the Toronto Lyndhurst Motors, leading squad in a Queen City senior loop. Jim, by the way, has left the team. Seems like selling automobiles and slapping pucks don't mix.

Incidentally, Kingston Goodyears flashed terrific power on Saturday night when they whipped the Orillia Terriers by a 15-6 score. No details are available at time of writing as to precisely the Goodies have found their stride. The victory gave them a second-place tie with the Oshawa Merchants with fourteen points, one behind the Clippers. The Glens are in third spot with 13 points. They entertain Peterborough here next Friday night and on Saturday trek to Stouffville for what should be another thriller-diller with the Clippers.

HAWKS AT OSHAWA

The Junior Hawks trek to Oshawa tonight in what should be a severe test, although if it is any satisfaction to them, the Oshawa kids were knocked off 6-5 by the Lindsay Warriors last Friday night. It was the first defeat of the Motor City youngsters this season. The Lindsay-Kingston junior tilt, scheduled for Kingston Saturday night was postponed in a game "swap" with the senior "B" Goodyears.

The Hawks are travelling at top speed these days and will be gunning for their eighth victory and their sixth in a row this evening. The team, says Coach Barrett, is in good shape and anxious to toss their wares against the Oshawa kids. It will be the first meeting of the teams this season.

Ferris Fain Batting Champ, American League

CHICAGO (AP)—Cleveland Indians, whose bid for the 1952 pennant folded in the last month of the campaign, went most of the top clubs in batting, according to official American League statistics released Saturday.

Ferris Fain, Philadelphia Athletics' 29 year-old first baseman, was certified as the 1952 batting champion with .327. He won the crown in 1951 with .344.

Fain also topped the circuit in doubles with 43.

Five Cleveland players shone. Dale Mitchell placed second to Fain with .323; Bobby Avila led in triples with 11; Larry Doby took the home-run title with 32 and also scored the most runs, 104, edging out teammates Avila with 102 and Al Rosen with 101.

Luke Easter, the huge first-sacker slammed 31 homers to press Doby for the crown. Third-baseman Rosen was tops in runs batted-in with 105 and first in total bases with 297.

The league's leading hit-maker was Nellie Fox, Chicago's second baseman, with 192 safeties.

Semark's 2nd Period Tee-Shot Provides Margin of Victory Before Largest Crowd of Year

By GEO. H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Jud Semark's smoking tee-shot that blazed past Blake Eatough in the Stouffville Clippers goal in the second period, was the deciding factor in a thrilling senior "B" battle here Saturday night. The Glens edged the group leaders by a 2-1 score.

Nearly fourteen hundred fans, the largest crowd of the season, thrilled to a brilliant exhibition of hockey in a game that could have gone either way. The Glens had a slight edge on the starry Clippers and the score just about indicates the play.

The win did not change the standing. The Clippers still lead the group with 18 points, one ahead of the second-place Oshawa Transports and Kingston Goodyears. The Goodies held the pace with a startling 15-5 victory over the Orillia Terriers Saturday night.

The Glens are in third spot with 13 points, four in front of the fourth place Peterborough Trips. The Terriers trail with seven.

Best This season

The game was by far the best seen here this season. Both teams hit a blazing tempo from the drop of the first puck and maintained it throughout the sixty minutes of play.

Referee Louis Lecompte handed out eleven penalties but the game was far from the rough dugged type that has characterized the last few games here. Nick Bangay, captain of the Clippers drew the only major assessed, a misconduct in the first period when he argued too volubly with the referee.

The Glens broke the scoring ice with but seconds to go in the first period. The Clippers roared back midway in the second heat to tie it up. The goal-tender was shorthived, however, as the Glens in a furious driving offensive slapped home what proved to be the winning goal four minutes later.

The third period fairly blazed with thrilling hockey as the desperate Clippers threw everything they had in an effort to tie up the pastime. An equally desperate Glen Roy team in one of their best defensive displays of the season hurled back the driving Clippers time after time with goalie Tony Parisi turning in a sensational performance.

Yanked Goalie

The Clippers tossed caution to the wind in a desperate gamble in the last forty seconds. They yanked goalie Keough and sent six forwards to the attack. But the strategy misfired as Parisi and his mates held the fort until time ran out.

In fact both goalies starred. Eatough in the Clippers' net turned in as brilliant a performance as did his counterpart. He turned back the flying Glen attackers time after time, especially in the later part of the second period when the Glens fairly threw all power in an all-out offensive that finally paid off with Jud Semark's tie-breaker.

Play opened up at a fast tempo and both goalies were tested early. Checking was close with both forward lines breaking up many passing plays. Play surged up and down the ice with the defences playing alright hockey and the goalies thwarting not a few close-in attempts to score.

With thirty-three seconds to go and Nick Bangay, Clipper skipper sitting out a misconduct penalty, Sammy Mulholland swept down the ice with Peter Jones and Vern Goyer, Jones tobled the puck to Sammy and the fleet winger swept in to drive a low hard shot past Eatough for the first goal of the game.

Play was even faster in the second period with the Glens battling hard to protect a slim one-goal lead and the Clippers driving in hard in an all-out to tie it up. Nearly half the period had gone when Bob Bakes and Lewis Clippers' first line, roared down the ice in a surging attack. Bell picked the short corner and parked the rubber behind Parisi for the equalizer.

Glens Had Edge

The Glens held an edge as both teams uncovered all their power to break the deadlock. Eatough was near sensational as the storming Glens flung everything they had at him. With six minutes of play left, Jud Semark made a mighty golf swing at the loose puck and it whistled past Eatough for what was the game-winning counter.

From then on it was brilliant wide-open hockey with both teams going all out. The Clippers fought desperately for the tying goal but the Glens held them off to take a well-deserved victory.

The teams:

Belleville: goal, Parisi; defence, Goyer, Semark, Schrieder, Reeves; forwards, Mulholland, Duran, Jones, Wardhaugh, MacDonald, Mulvihill, Day, DeGray, Desjardins, McRae.

Stouffville: goal, Keough; defence, N. Bangay, Chard, Baker, Rose; forwards, Gibson, Bell, Minton, Watson, Bob Bangay, Stack, Gord Lewis, Stunden.

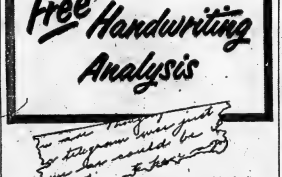
Wants Elimination Women's Events In Olympics

CHICAGO (CP)—Avery Brundage, watchdog of Olympic amateurism, came up Saturday with some suggestions which are likely to produce plenty of argument.

For one, he suggested that all events for women be eliminated from the Olympics.

Brundage made the recommendation in his position as president of the international Olympic committee. It is one of several ideas for streamlining the games.

He said the women can have their own private Olympic Games as in ancient times.



Women have almost stolen the spotlight on the Olympics They include figure-skater Barbara Ann Scott and sprinter Fanny Blankers-Koen.

Other recommendations in Brundage's report:

1. Eliminate some of the optional sports entirely.
2. Transfer some sports to the winter games.
3. Eliminate all team sports.
4. Use regional games as elimination events for the Olympics.

Miss M.A. Norris Named President Detroit Wings

DETROIT (AP)—Marguerite Ann Norris, who has never seen the Detroit Red Wings play in Olympia Stadium here, Saturday became president of both the Red Wings and Olympia Stadium.

The 25-year-old Miss Norris succeeds her late father, James D. Norris, as head of the Detroit National Hockey League empire. The youngest of four Norris children, she was chosen at a meeting of the heirs in Chicago.

Two brothers, James and Bruce, are executives of the Chicago Black Hawks, also of the NHL, and James also is president of the International Boxing Club. The fourth heir is Mrs. Elzabyr Kneibler.

General Manager Jack Adams of the Red Wings announced Miss Norris' selection. He said: "Marguerite Ann was selected to follow the prescribed wishes of her father."

Adams said that Miss Norris often had seen the Red Wings in action in New York's Madison Square Garden and in the Chicago Stadium, but never had seen them play in Olympia. Miss Norris is a sports enthusiast who plays golf and tennis and is a yachtswoman.

Miss Norris intends to make her permanent home in Detroit and is to make her public debut as president of the Stanley Cup champion Red Wings at a press reception today.

She now lives in Lake Forest, Ill.

Adams himself was voted a new title by the Norris heirs meeting Saturday in Chicago. He was made Detroit representative of the board of governors of the NHL.

Norris died of a heart ailment in Chicago Dec. 4.

Miss Norris becomes the first woman executive in the NHL.

Detroit Red Wings Extend National Hockey League Lead Over Week-End

Gain Two Points Over Pack; Habs, Wings Share 'Collars' As Six Teams Play Three Ties

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalies Terry Sawchuk and Gerry McNeil, one-two in the National Hockey League scrimmaders' race, shared a rare double shutout in one of three tie games Saturday night.

Montreal and Detroit played to a scoreless draw while Boston and Chicago and Toronto and New York tied 2-2 in both games. Saturday night, Detroit defeated Toronto 3-1 and Montreal blanked the skidding Black Hawks 3-0.

Detroit, chopped the form during the last few weeks which produced four straight league championships, gained two points on the rest of the pack as a result of the week-end play. The Wings are now four points ahead of Montreal and Chicago, tied for second with 31 points. The point behind is Boston with the slumping Toronto Maple Leafs fifth with 25. New York is in the cellar is New York, with three wins and nine ties for 15 points.

Led In 11 Months

Statistically, the Detroit-Montreal game was the first scoreless game in the league in 11 months and also the first time Detroit has been blanked at home in 56 starts.

Both McNeil, who shut out Detroit the last time, and Sawchuk worked hard at both ends of the play was wide open. Sawchuk made 30 saves to McNeil's 24. It was the fourth shutout of the season for both, Montreal's goalie maintaining his one-goal edge over Sawchuk and the Vezina Trophy race.

At New York, Toronto scored twice in the third period to save the tie. Ranger defenceman Lee Reise was returnable for both Toronto goals. Rookie Ron Stewart passed in front of the Ranger net, bounced off the Ranger's stick into the net. About three minutes later Smith circled the goal and passed to Ted Kennedy who shot the puck across the goal mouth where it struck Reise's skate and bounced in to tie the score.

Rookie Dean Prentice sod Wally Hergesheimer scored at New York. It was Hergesheimer's first goal in nine games.

Joe Klukay scored on a short backhander in the third period at Toronto to give the Bruins a draw. Real Chevrefils scored the other Boston marker.

George Armstrong the scoring for Chicago after he took a pass from playing-coach Bill Gadsby in the first period. Abel drew Sugar Jim Henry out of the nets and then fed the puck to Gee, who slipped it into the open goal. Gus Mortson scored on a 40-shot.

At Toronto Saturday night Detroit scored goals in the first period on shots by Alex Delvecchio and Gordie Howe. In the second period Howe added his second. Toronto's tally, Red Kelly scored Detroit's third goal unassisted after he took the puck from a scramble.

McNeil's shutout string of the campaign Saturday night in Montreal received a lift from Bernard Geoffrion who scored two of Montreal's three goals. Floyd Curry was the other Montreal player who beat Chicago goalie Al Rollins.

Flyers Defeat Cleveland Barons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Louis Flyers defeated the league-leading Cleveland Barons 6-3 in the American Hockey League game Sunday night. In other Sunday games Buffalo Bisons edged Pittsburgh Hornets 5-4 and Syracuse Warriors downed Providence Reds 5-2.

Saturday the Barons shaded Providence 1-0, Hershey Bears defeated Syracuse 4-3 and Pittsburgh overwhelmed St. Louis 8-3.

The Flyers took up a 4-1 lead in the first period Sunday night then held off determined Baron drives.

Lorne Davis scored four goals as the Bisons scored their third straight victory, Bob Solinger scored three goals for the Hornets.

Syracuse struck for three quick goals against Providence late in the second period, overcoming a 2-1 deficit, and were never headed after that.

Northern Electric Hockey Results

One-goal margins featured close games in the Northern Electric Interdepartmental Hockey League over the week-end. Machine Shop Assembly 3-2 as Machine Shop took the decision from Sheet Metal by the odd goal in seven.

Brian Murchitt put Office out in front with a two-minute goal in the first period but Ted DeGray got that one back for Assembly midway through the period. James put Office one up with the only score in the second but Lynch made it 2-1 early in the third. Soules took it 3-1 shortly after a minute to go to cut the margin to three-two.

Tool Design and Machine Shop battled to no score in the first period of their game. Both scored twice in the second stanza with H. Wright's laugh and Day counting for Shoppers and Rose and Boucher scoring for the Sheets.

J. Wraight-ugh and Day fired home two goals for the Shops in the third period with York getting the lone Sheets' score.

AHL Governors Reinstate Egan; Change Rules

CLEVELAND (AP)—American Hockey League governors Saturday reinstated Martin (Pat) Egan, Providence defenceman and captain who had been suspended for the rest of the season.

The governors voted unanimously to permit Egan to rejoin his team Jan. 7, reducing the suspension to 60 days.

Egan was suspended after a fight during a game in Cleveland Nov. 1 in which he hit linesman Patsy Callighan.

The governors also cited:

To let a club dress 15 players, including the goaltender, instead of 14.

To let a club carry as many players on its roster as it wants.

They decided to allow National Hockey League clubs to recall two men yearly from the AHL. But if illness or injury prevents an NHL team from dressing five defence men, 10 forwards or a goaltender, the major circuit can call up additional men from the AHL.

All players for the Calder Cup will be on a best-of-seven games basis. The four teams will qualify, first and third meeting in one first-round series, second and fourth in the other. The survivors will play off for the trophy.

'Moider, Mayhem, Hula Girls, Bands' British View of Yank Football

LONDON (AP)—Baffled British sportswriters couldn't figure it all out, but they agreed this American football is wonderful stuff.

"It's Moider!" headlined the Sunday Graphic. "Mayhem, Hula and Bands," exclaimed Reynolds News. "Murder In Midfield," said the Sunday Express. But everyone agreed it was fun.

All the excitement was centred about London's view of a full-scale American football game with all the trimmings—the bands, pretty cheerleaders in short skirts, a fistfight in the stands and a couple of dogs chasing around the field.

It was the final of the United States Air Force's European football championships Saturday at the big Wembley Stadium and some 25,000 had gathered to watch the Furstly Jackson Rockets defeat the Burtonwood (England) Bullets 26-7.

British sports writers, to whom football used to mean the comparatively gentlemanlike game of rugby or just soccer, sat in on the proceedings and tried to explain it all to their readers.

"Twenty-two mastodons in leather helmets and padded jerseys crouched facing each other is what looked like 'the dance of the chuckers-out,'" said the Sunday Graphic.

"At some secret signal, titanly ignoring the ball, the 22 leaped at each other's throats. A whistle blew and the debris was removed. Stretcher-bearers kept carting off the bodies and the score apparently depended on a coroner's report, the Graphic explained.

"Then the final whistle blew, and we all gave three hearty cheers to the ambulance which had won a fine game," the Graphic added.

But what impressed Britons most was the noise and the cheering. The Sunday Pictorial explained it simply:

"Pretty girls leaped up and down in Maori war dances to stir up the crowd, shouting: 'How do you like oysters — raw! raw! raw!'"

The Graphic described the cheer leaders as "six dainty American girls in red and gold dresses leading the ground, occasionally doing the splits and emitting tribal blood-curdling screams of a rare variety with acute stomach trouble."

The consensus was that American football was a darned good game. The Express called it "real full-bloodedness, its high color and enthusiasm." A Sunday Times sportswriter concluded it was "a far better game than ever he gave it credit for."

Sport in Brief

TORONTO (CP)—Mac Bingen and Pat Boutette each won a heat in the featured seventh trotting event, feature fill pace, at Dufferin Park Saturday.

In the first heat, Dr. Stanton, owned and handled by Lindley Fraser of Forest, took a lead in the stretch and drew away at the finish.

Mac Bingen, owned by T. E. McCool of Pembroke and driven by Francis Lebeouf, took command early to win the second heat. Dr. Stanton was second.

New York saw its first professional hockey game 27 years ago tonight and had 19,000 pop-eyed Gothamites in attendance. Montreal Canadiens, one of the National Hockey League originals, made the trip "green" New York crowd gasp with their speed and won with a close-cut 2-1 decision over the Americans.

Second Attempt To Bribe Vancouver Boxers

VANCOUVER (CP)—A second attempt to bribe Vancouver boxers was reported here Saturday by Dave Brown, coach of the Pacific Mutual Benevolent Association Boxing Club.

He told reporters he was recently offered $100 in a telephone call if three of his amateur fighters would lose in bouts against Washington Athletic Club boxers here Dec. 4.

He said he hadn't reported to the Vancouver Boxing Commission "because I treated it just as a joke."

Sonny Jones, 20-year old Vancouver professional middleweight, said Thursday he received a bribe offer—$300 "Christmas money"—if he took a dive in the first round of his fight with Blackie Vandervoort of Aberdeen, Wash. He ignored it.

'Moulloy Named No. One Player; Replaces Seixas

NEW YORK (CP)—Gardnar Mulloy of Miami was listed Saturday as No. 1 tennis player in the United States for 1952. Mulloy will replace Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, the Davis Cup team captain, as the top ranking player.

The announcement said the rankings are only tentative and that results of competition in Australia, India and Pakistan, where most excellent is changer.

For the second successive year, Neso-aged Maureen Connolly of San Diego was awarded the top ranking among U.S. women tennis players.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Victor Mature has just signed a new three-year contract with 20th Century-Fox which will hand him $5,000 a week and whopping yearly bonuses.

That is news in these times, when studios are dropping high-salaried stars wherever possible.

"They couldn't afford to le me go," he said. "It's purely a matter of economics."

In the postwar years, vic has given up his old hobby of making publicity and has settled down to scarcely making money. And that, he explained, is why his studio lifted his option at a handsome salary increase.

"The loan-outs are what did it," he said. "Every time my option comes up, the money boys take a look at my salary and say, 'this boy has got to go.' But then they start going over the books and they see what kind of money I have brought in on loan-outs. Then they realize they can't get rid of me."

The situation is different with other, less marketable stars. When their salaries start pushing up to $3,000 and $3,500 a week the stars are either dropped outright or signed to one or two pictures annually.

The bosses figure it isn't worth keeping most high-priced stars on a year-round salary. They can save money by letting the players go and hiring them back at flat fees.

But Mature has been working at other studios as much as he has at his home lot.

Why is he so popular with other studios? He is a big, serviceable actor who can perform in any kind of film — westerns, musicals, dramas, comedies or developed epics.

Mature is well on his way to becoming a retail tycoon. He has sponsored the openings of a TV store, a furniture store and two appliance stores.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some of the bridge signals being used are very cute. Most of them are getting along in age. But they are still cute. As in the case of the word doubls for requesting partner to bid.

The original aim of the word double was to advise partner that opponents could be defeated. But it has also been developed as a takeout signal; asking partner to show something.

When is it used for such a signal? When opponents have not reached a contract of more than three in a suit, when done at the first opportunity, and partner has not bid.

West opened the bidding with a diamond when both held this hand:

♠ Q 7 6 3 4
♥ A K Q 9
♦ Q 6 2
♣ A

North is now a defending bidder. With two biddable suits here it would seem that north should start showing them. But showing a suit defensively would be a simple overcall.

A defensive simple overcall does not promise much strength. And this hand has strength that partner should know about. North shews it by saying double; the takeout signal.

The double in this spot says: "Partner, my hand is just as good as the player who opened the bidding. If the next opponent does not bid, I want you to bid something."

Such a double is not put to use with a hand that is weak, of course. It must be with a hand that is strong enough to protect any bid partner is likely to make. Otherwise, it would be dangerous.

How much strength should a doubler hold? A hand that would have been good enough to open the bidding, in other words, doubler says he would have opened the bidding if opponents had not.

So, if you know what it takes for an opening bid of one you know what it takes for a takeout double. And you need not confuse it with ifs and ands. Make it easy on yourself.

London Times Praises Truman Achievement

LONDON (Reuters) — The Times says today President Truman has led the greatest peacetime revolution in United States policy. It says: "Armed with powers endowed with moral purpose or with a lower sense of responsibility might have been content to swing with the tide of opinion. As it was the man who had been almost unknown . . . led the greatest revolution in policy that America has known in time of peace."

WORLD BANK BUSY

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The "world bank" has loaned $1,500,000,000 since the end of the Second World War and has been able to set aside $100,000,000 in reserve from profits received, the bank's top official said Sunday. Eugene R. Black, president of the international bank for reconstruction and development, said much of the loaned money has been repaid. He said the bank makes a profit of between $15,000,000 and $30,000,000 a year.

Three Children Burned to Death Near Cornwall

CORNWALL (CP)—Three small children were burned to death early Sunday when they were trapped in a fire which swept through their home at Green Valley Station, 25 miles north of here.

The youngsters were Gerald, 4, Dennis, 3 and Monique, eight months, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Proulx.

The 1½-storey frame home adjoins the CPR station.

Mr. Proulx told investigating provincial police officers that he awoke about 12:30 a.m. to find the whole downstairs a mass of flames. He did only time to throw his wife out an upper storey window and

No Chance To Re-Enter

The fire and heat were so fierce that there was no chance at either of them re-entering the house in an attempt to rescue the three children who slept in an adjoining upstairs room.

Police believe the blaze was a result of an overheated wood stove.

"I don't know how my wife got burned, but I fought with her for five minutes before I got her out of the window," Mr. Proulx said.

"I was hanging by my hands from the window and I could hear the children crying. I tried to get there was no crying in the house."

back in, but I couldn't. Pretty soon

'Chubby' Powers 35 Years In Public Office

QUEBEC (CP)—Charles Gavan Power, grey-haired 64-year-old dean of Canada's House of Commons, Wednesday will celebrate his 35th anniversary in Canadian politics.

The spry, good-natured athlete, soldier, lawyer and public administrator, who followed in his father's footsteps in public life, still retains those qualities which carried him from the rank of an army private during the First World War to the post of minister of national defence air in the government of the late W. L. Mackenzie King.

Hundreds of friends and associates, many of them prominent in federal and provincial politics, gathered in a Quebec hotel Saturday night to pay tribute to "Chubby" Power.

They included Veterans Affairs Minister Lapointe, Public Works Minister Fournier, postmaster-General Cote, Citizenship and Immigration Minister Harris and Fisheries Minister Sinclair.

Kitchener Blasts Stratford 9-4; Mercs Trim Maroons to Move Closer

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen Saturday night brought a rapid end to the smooth sailing enjoyed by Stratford Indians during the last week.

Stratford managed to build their lead up to five points before the Bird-place Dutchmen warmed the hearts of 6,221 Kitchener fans by blasting the leaders 9-4.

Owen Sound Mercurys, in second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League, moved two points closer to the leaders by trouncing Chatham Maroons 8-4. In Sarnia the Sailors put another nail in Hamilton Tigers' coffin with a 10-3 victory.

The bitter neighbors if the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians and Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds split a two-game series during the weekend. The Greyhounds won 6-4 on their home ice Saturday and dropped a Sunday game across the river 5-3.

Sudbury Wolves rifled in six straight goals Saturday to trim North Bay Trappers 7-3 in a bitter tangle that featured a stick-swinging rumpus in the third period. George Defelice and Chick Cecchini drew match penalties.

Jack McKenzie, Howie Lee and Harvey Jackson collected a pair each for Kitchener. Al Buchanan, Claire Martin and Don Dayer added the others. Jackie While scored twice for Stratford. Herve Dejoy and Lee Fyten replied with one each.

Owen Sound scoring was spread among Mike Bukaczeski who accounted for two, and Jack Inglesby, Mike Dimmie, Bill McArthur, Ralph Hosking, Bert McCallum and Bill Burlington, who each added one. Joe Carveth, Dick Towers, Al Dick and Al McArthur were Chatham scorers.

Skippy Frezell blasted four into the Hamilton nets. Harry O'Connor added two. Others went to Jim Wilson, Bill McFarlane, Mark Glasb and Don Savage with one each. Steve Devinski, Ab Cocchi and Stan Ritchie were Tiger marksmen.

Trapped in Car Occupant Drowns In Lake Erie

WHEATLEY (CP)—Trapped in a car which hurtled off an embankment, flew nearly 90 feet and landed in Lake Erie, 20-year-old John Henry Drummelsmith Jr., of Wheatley district, was drowned Saturday night.

Three other young people—two girls and a boy—climbed out of the windows of the submerged car and swam to shore despite severe injuries.

Provincial police said the four were driving on a gravel sideroad 2½ miles southeast of here leading from No. 3 Highway south to the beach. Apparently the driver, Herbert Gordon Edward, 21, of Wheatley, saw the lights of an approaching car and lost control.

The car hurtled out into space, flew over a 45-foot-wide beach without touching it and landed about 45 feet out in water six or seven feet deep.

Edwards and the girls, Alda May Drummond, 21, of nearby Coatsworth, and Doris Mary Dundas, 19, of Wheatley, managed to crawl out of the car windows and get ashore.

Drummelsmith, who suffered a gash in the head and lost consciousness in the submerged car, was drowned before help arrived.

FREIGHTER IS ADRIFT

BREST, France (AP) — The 7,218-ton American freighter Columbia trader, drifting in mid-Atlantic after losing a propeller, radioed Thursday everything was going well aboard and there was no cause for alarm. When it radioed for help it gave its position as about 800 miles west of Brest.

Polish Clergy Edict To Roman Catholics Takes Red Party Line

Warsaw (AP)—Polish newspapers Sunday published a letter instructing all Roman Catholics in Poland not t otake part in "underground activities and economic diversions." The newspapers said the instruction was contained in an official declaration from the Polish episcopacy —the council of all the bishops, headed by the archbishop of Warsaw who it the newly designated Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski. The declaration also warned against the "tendencies of alien propaganda" which it said is trying to make the church the "tool of anti-state political activities."

AT THE BELLE

"Les Miserables" Never Surpassed for Suspense, Adventure and Romance

Continuing today and Tuesday at the Belle Theatre, matinee daily, is the triumphant new 20th. Century-Fox production of Victor Hugo's immortal "Les Miserables," blending suspense, adventure and romance.

Brilliantly starring Michael Rennie and Robert Newton as the classic enemies of all literature—Jean Valjean and Javert—whose fate is resolved in the grisly scenes below the streets of Paris, the new version of "Les Miserables" has been acclaimed worthy of its great source.

Also starred in the film are Debra Paget and Edmund Gwenn while Sylvia Sidney and Cameron Mitchell topline a notable cast including Elsa Lanchester, James Robertson Justice, Joseph Wiseman, Rhys Williams and Florence Bates.

Highlights of the Grey Cup football classic are shown with the Latest World News Events, and a cute Dingy Colorfun Cartoon.

YOUR INDIVIDUAL HOROS ..
BY FRANCES-DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 16, 1952

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Split-second decisions may confront you in some matters, but you are capable and things should round out favorably. Romance, social affairs sponsored in turn.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Generous, most benefic vibrations abound. Meet obligations squarely, with confidence and intelligence.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Splendid indications for general necessary tasks, household duties, business. Avoid disputes with associates, superiors. Be sensible.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Sort of day for catching up with matters set aside earlier for more important ones. Some affairs will take care of themselves, but watch trends carefully.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Hold it, Leo! Co-operate, do what you are asked to if it's your duty. Of course, one never should be intimidated into going against conscience. Mixed day.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo)—Better be silent than to get involved in affairs that don't really concern you. That the wise course, avoid contention.

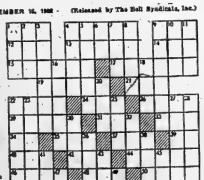
September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Too many irons in the fire never wise, either for health's sake or the good of your undertakings. The stronger your will power, the stronger your action.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—May have tendency to waste energy now on minor matters. However, there are good possibilities for smart folks who really use their heads.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Use your understandable self and you can make much out of little today. Yet may find things annoying during a.m. Don't let them hamper you.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—First thing in the morning, ask yourself, "How am I doing? Should I do things that way instead of this?" You may change matters for the better.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Some profitable conditions. But don't procrastinate or falter at hard tasks, and you can do a fine job.



February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Extra care urged in financial matters; in propositions affecting home, family. Tend to such affairs first.

YOU BORN TODAY: of Sagittarius, are jovial, high spirited, have foresight, bright and charitable. However, avoid contention, unnecessary thoughts. Seek God's guidance and blessings; heed them often. Don't waste mental, physical or otherwise.

Europe's Economic Situation Far From Satisfactory

PARIS (CP)—Despite a great recovery from Second World War destruction, Europe's economic situation is still far from satisfactory, says the report of the Organization for European Economic Co-operation.

The 400-page review by economic experts of the 18-country OEEC was made public Saturday night at the close of a two-day meeting in Paris headed by Britain's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden.

The solution to Europe's economic ills is "trade not aid," the report said. "Production and more" was the slogan offered as a cornerstone for European economic policy.

Canada Represented

Canada and the United States were represented at the conference. L. Dana Wilgress, Canadian undersecretary of external affairs, addressed delegates Saturday and outlined Canada's reasons for participating in the meeting.

The economic review said European countries must make new and co-operative efforts to boost production, especially of coal, steel and agricultural food, it added that the Commonwealth and the U.S. are now working toward Europe's economic recovery.

Some Advances

On the brighter side the report noted:

1. Industrial production is more than 1¼ times what it was in 1938.

2. Imports are slightly ahead of the pre-war level while exports are 50 per cent more. Mining has made a real effort to solve the balance-of-payments problem.

On the other hand, the report said, inflationary tendencies are still present, there is a serious lack of trade balance among some European countries themselves and an even more serious gap in payment balances between almost all the countries and the dollar area.

Three Countries Draft Own Plans For Eisenhower

LONDON (AP)—Britain, Australia and New Zealand have drafted their own plan to put before U.S. President-elect Eisenhower in the conference of the Pacific and Southeast Asia, it was announced early today.

A communique issued here indicated that Prime Minister Churchill has won support for his demand that Britain be given a voice in setting U.S. defense policies comprising Australia, New Zealand and the U.S.

Churchill is looking forward to talks with Eisenhower in Washington early next year, after the new Republican administration takes over.

Details of the Commonwealth plan were carefully guarded.

Middlesex County Farmer Takes Top In High Yield

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A Middlesex county farmer, Gilles Decoeur of Lobo township, has topped in the high yield soybean contest sponsored by the Canada Grains companies in co-operation with the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement Association and the crops seeds and feeds branch of the department of agriculture.

Mr. DePutter's yield was 43.15 bushels an acre, just .06 more than his nearest opponent, N. W. Adams of Thedford. Total score on the Middlesex entry was 221.4, however, as compared with 211.8 on the Adams entry.

Alex M. Stewart and Son of Alliston took third place with a score from section of the contest, which includes most of Middlesex, Elgin and Oxford counties adjacent to Lake Ontario as far east as Hamilton. Mr. DePutter was in zone 2, which comprises part of Kent, most of Essex, Lambton and West Middlesex, Essex and the rest of Kent are in zone 1.

SURVIVES FREEZING

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—An 82-year-old woman who survived 18 hours outdoors in freezing weather was in satisfactory condition today. Police said Mrs. Mary Dowlecki of Cobleskill was found lying injured Sunday nearly 15 miles from the spot where she had disappeared Saturday night. She had apparently got lost and fallen.

PINEAPPLE SUN-BONNETS

GRAHAMSTOWN, South Africa (CP)—More than a million growing pineapples in South Africa will wear sun-bonnets next season to wear off sunburn. The bonnets, made of waterproof paper with a hole in the centre, will be fitted over the fruit before the crops ripen.

RELEASE MISSIONARY

HONG KONG (AP) — Rev. Sicard Daniel of Colombia crossed the border into Hong Kong Sunday in chains. He was expelled by the Chinese Communists after a public trial on charges of beating a Chinese man. Father Daniel said he spent 13 months in jail, handcuffed in an effort to prevent him from praying before meals.

Workers Return To Their Jobs At Chalk River

CHALK RIVER, Ont. (CP)—Workers return to their jobs today at Canada's atomic energy plant here, three days after excessive radiation forced their evacuation.

Dr. David A. Keys, chairman of the project co-ordinating committee, said Sunday that all employees could return to work after second clean-up of radiation which leaked through a pin-point hole in the big atomic pile.

The radio active particles escaped to the ground Thursday, which carries off radiation, but were held down by a heavy overcast and a downdraft of air carried them down on the site of the 540-square-mile plant in northwest of Ottawa.

Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, president of the crown-owned Atomic Energy of Canada, said the atomic reactor, source of the radiation, may be out of operation for some time. Considered the most efficient heavy water reactor in the world, it is in a building structure 64 feet high and 34 feet in diameter encased in lead with concrete walls seven feet thick.

Dr. Keys said none of the workers—about 500—was in any physical danger Friday, but they were evacuated when 100 alarm sirens warned that automatic instruments had found an over-concentration of radiation.

The chief worry, he said, was that employees might spread the radio active particles on their feet to the delicate scientific instruments.

Decontamination squads cleaned up the area during the week-end. Contamination was checked. Contaminated materials were put in safe containers for their radio-activity to die away. A heavy snowfall Sunday was welcomed by officials, who said it would help confine contamination to the ground while it dissipates.

Dr. Keys said that any gases carried beyond the tract would be harmless and negligible.

60,000 Gallons Of Gasoline Spilled in River

DETROIT (AP) — A gasoline laden tanker and a freighter collided in the Rouge river Saturday, spilling 60,000 gallons of the highly-inflammable fluid into the river in what could have been a disaster, but wasn't.

Both ships were heavily damaged, but no one was injured.

As the expanding gasoline spread a fire hazard over the river, fire boats and truck companies converged on the scene. They tried to flush the gasoline downstream into open water at first, then finally blanketed the river with foam-like.

The tanker is the Blue Comet, owned by the McWilliams Blue Line, Inc., of New York, and carrying 250,000 gallons of gasoline. The freighter is the Carl W. Meyers, owned by the Browning Steamship Co., of Detroit. It was empty.

The collision occurred near River Rouge, Mich., in suburban Detroit. The gasoline created a peril not only to the ships and their crews, but the highly-industrialized water front.

The vessels were jammed together in the collision and drifted slowly downstream. Tugs finally parted them and pulled the tanker into dock.

A gaping hole was torn in the tanker, hit slightly forward on the starboard side.

Its gasoline costing dissipated, the Rouge River was reopened Sunday to ship traffic as the Coast Guard announced a board of inquiry would be called.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

"This is indeed a coincidence," Curly laughed, "y'see, I'm Curly Brown, and you don't have to look me up. But, I can't understand what Morven means. After all, we met last once."

"But that once was sufficient for him to form the opinion that if this northern part of the county is to ever amount to anything you are the man to give it the necessary boost," Halder smiled. "First impressions, y'know, are very often impressions that last. And that's why I'm going to prophesy that you and me are going to get along all right."

"I wouldn't be surprised," Curly said, with his eyes on the big box stove in the corner. "Have you any wood for that?"

"I'm going to the mill in the morning to see if they would send me a load. I need some lumber, some moulding, too. Have to make me a couple or stands."

"Leave that to me. And one of these days I'll bring you some hardwood from my bush at Hard Acres. I suppose you'll be printing advertisements and—birth notices?"

The two men sat down at an impromptu desk. Curly talked, Halder wrote. Curly offered to pay. Halder refused to accept.

"Dang it, man!" he snapped, "what do you think I am?"

The news that the Depot was soon to have its own newspaper spread like wildfire. And that same night the frame building that was to become a printing office was alive with men who wanted to help get the newspaper started. They helped to place the plant, they sat down and wrote advertisements, gave their orders for letterheads and envelopes and billheads. The editor's card in the window next morning, asking for two girls and a boy to learn typesetting, brought Eva Enright and Beatrice Williams, daughters of millworkers, but the boys remained aloof, for too many of them had been born with sawdust in their hair.

Curly was to drop into the Depot with offers or help or just to chat. Meanwhile Jack Halder was here, there and everywhere, drumming up business, getting acquainted.

People from the village and surrounding district kept the new subscriptions to his paper, for editor busy writing receipts for they expressed their confidence in him in a practical way. Curly sat down to dinner with him every day at the hotel, and they were soon sharing confidences.

It was late on Thursday afternoon, November 14th, when the first issue of the Depot Echo was run off on a hand-fed, hand-turned press—a press with a picture of Washington on it. Pretty soon copies of the Echo were in the business places, the post office and the hotel. Boys were delivering them to the houses in the village. Driving up street with lumber, Curly was stopped by the editor and given his copy.

"I'll keep this until I have had my supper," Curly said, "then I'll read it from end to end, and—he laughed, "if I don't like it, I'll tell you so in the morning."

"Oh!" answered Curly, Halder apologized, "you must remember this is only our first issue. Wait till we get acquainted around here, and we'll give you something that you won't want to be without."

That evening Curly and Hazel were bent over a copy of the Echo spread as it was on the table in the parlor at Hard Acres. Nearby Peter was rocking the cradle and he was loudly lamenting: "Aw, gee!" he protested, "I always wanted a baby sister, but I never thought I'd have to be rocking her all the time—I want to see the Echo, too!"

"Never mind, Peter," Hazel said, "you'll see it soon enough. And I'll bet it will be through with it in a few minutes . . . ah, there's Heather Ann's birth notice . . . and your advertisement, Curly . . . and Mr. Belanger is offering soap at a bargain on Saturday morning. We must get some of that, we're about out . . . Do you know, Curly, it's a dandy little paper . . . lots of news and—and everything."

"It would be a dandy paper, Hazel," Curly said, "but for one thing. Did you read that?" He pointed to an article under the heading 'It Would Be Wise' on the front page.

"Jack Halder should never print anything like that," he said, "read it out loud, Hazel."

Hazel read the article slowly, carefully.

"It must be clearly understood that the aim and purpose of this newspaper is not to take sides in a municipal election, not to tell you how you must vote. Yet there are occasions when such a rule must be broken, when to break the rule is in the best interests of all concerned. Such an occasion appears to coincide with the first appearance of your newspaper, the Depot Echo."

In a few short weeks the annual meeting to nominate reeve and councillors for the united townships will be held. And conscious of the fact that the condition of the roads, the village streets, is to say the least most uncomplimentary to the council, and that every effort should be made in the gear future to make amends by placing in office men who are not blind to our needs, the Echo must take the stand that Reeve Bill McTaggert, even though he is a good friend of ours, must quit at the end of the year and that Councillor Curly Brown who, by his two years in council, has shown that he possesses the necessary leadership—"

At that moment Curly stopped her.

"That will do, Hazel," he said, "I don't want to hear more."

"But, Curly," Hazel protested, "it's true, every word of it."

"That's not the point, Hazel," Curly argued, "it's only going to stir up trouble between me and Bill McTaggert, and Bill McTaggert is one of the best friends I ever had. I'm going to see Halder in the morning. I'll tell him to be more discreet in future."

But when Curly started into the Echo office next morning, he met Bill McTaggert coming out. And Bill must have sensed what was bringing him there, for he stopped long enough to say:

"Don't be too hard on him, Curly! After all, he's yet a stranger in these parts."

Curly had no wish to be too severe with Jack Halder. And yet he must remind him that the Depot was a small place, that he and McTaggert had always been close friends, and that was the way he wanted it to be. And this is what he said when he stepped inside.

"But Curly, I don't think any harm will come of it," Halder said, and as he spoke, he handed Curly a slip with a lot of writing on it.

"Two thousand letterheads, two thousand envelopes, one thousand statements—Bill McTaggert —make-up copy." Curly handed the sheet back to the editor.

"Well," he said in a tone of relief, "he isn't sore, anyway."

"Why should he get sore over a thing like that?" Halder asked. "As a matter of fact, he thinks it's fun. Wants you to run for reeve, but says he'll oppose you."

"Wants me to run, yet he'll oppose me! That sounds funny,"

Curly said thoughtfully, "but then, whose idea was it anyway that I should run for reeve? I never had such a plan. In fact, I've been wondering if it would not be better for all concerned if I were to drop out of council at the end of the year."

Jack Halder gave him a piercing look.

Earl Mountbatten Is NATO Admiral For Mediterranean

Choice Clears Up Dispute U.S. Fleet Is on Its Own

PARIS (CP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization cleared up an 18-month dispute between Britain and the United States today by naming a British admiral commander-in-chief of all but U. S. naval forces in the Mediterranean.

Admiral Earl Mountbatten was chosen for the job. His No. 1 assignment is maintenance of sea and air communications between Gibraltar and Suez.

The Allied Naples-based U.S. Sixth fleet, including heavy carriers and amphibious forces, remains independent as an Allied striking force under Admiral Robert B. Carney. Land and land operations in southern Europe. Both Mountbatten and Carney will report directly to Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, supreme Allied commander.

Ridgway Delighted

Ridgway notified the NATO council of foreign ministers through a spokesman today that the British choice of staff had appointed Mountbatten. The general said he was "delighted to concur."

The appointment is a compromise between British and American military leaders that preceded it capped a long wrangle between the two services as to whether an American or a British admiral should hold the top job in the Mediterranean. As it turns out, neither does. Mountbatten's status will be equal with that of Carney, who heads the southern European command under Ridgway.

Military leaders of the 14 NATO nations, including Canada, agreed last week on a compromise by which a Briton would take over this assignment while the powerful U. S. Sixth fleet, based at Naples under Admiral Carney, would be concerned primarily with supporting NATO's land forces.

British craft will make up most of Mountbatten's forces.

The admiral, of German descent, is a second cousin of Queen Elizabeth and an uncle of the Duke of Edinburgh. From a policy-making social leader in pre-war London, he became one of Britain's most popular heroes of the Second World War.

In Give-Away Mood

WATERLOO (CP) — Waterloo County council went in a give-away mood Monday night.

It increased Mayor Donald Willis' remuneration from $3,000 to $1,500 annually, retroactive to last Jan. 1, over the mayor's objection.

At the same time, councillors delayed any action on boosting their own pay. At present they get $300 a year. It was also proposed that they receive $30 each for meetings.

Council also authorized a $10 Christmas bonus to all permanent civic employees with fewer than six months' service with $15 for temporary employees will also receive $5 each.

STRONG MEN TO MEET

CAIRO (Reuters) — Col. Adib Shishakly, Syrian "strong man" deposed by a bloodless coup last week, left here by air for home today. Also in the aircraft with Shishakly during his stay Shishakly had political, military and economic talks with Premier Mohammed Naguib, Egypt's "strong man" premier. Egyptian newspapers agree that the talks has sealed an "entente cordiale" between in two countries.

Four Helicopters Rescue Last of Crew on Ship

39 Seamen Taken Off Grounded Navy Craft

By STAN SWINTON

LEGHORN, Italy (AP) — Four helicopters rescued the last crew members from the U.S. Navy ship Grommet Reefer today, 36 hours after an explosion and fire singled it out off Leghorn.

The helicopters brought off 13 men. Previously 26 had been removed by breeches buoy and boat. Aboard the ship, 1,000 tons of ammo were aboard, but this was revised to 500 tons.

As it turned out, neither doctors, nor the mayor's objection.

Ship Broke In Two

Savage winds and waves had broken the Grommet Reefer in the harbor reef 200 yards off shore here which threatened to break the ship in two. The stern, with all the crew aboard, wedged fast on the reef. The bow ship has been tryng to tie up in Leghorn harbor when a 100-mile-an-hour gust caught her.

In contrast to Monday's gales and swells, clear, sunny weather, and low seas today made a moderating sea aided operations today.

Men Thanked

One of those picked up by the boat, Serge Flushing of New York, stepped ashore with the simple words, "thank God."

Only a short throw from the shore, the ship's abandoned prow lurched heavily against the rocks with every wave. No one was aboard it, but sailors heard there was 1,000 tons of bombs in the hold.

The military sea transportation service, operators of the ship, reported that all the ammo was being beginning to buckle.

Eisenhower's Observation Reds Can be Impressed Only By Deeds May Mean Offensive

By ROBERT EUNSON

TOKYO (AP) —President-elect Eisenhower's opinion that the Communists can be impressed only "only by deeds" is interpreted by some Allied military sources in Japan and Korea to mean the United Nations will take the offensive in Korea.

Before his visit to Korea, military leaders planned to inform Eisenhower that the only hope for an end to the Korean conflict was a military one.

Eisenhower's statement on arriving in New York seemed to bear out the belief that a commander in chief of United States armed forces he will order an end to the "peace-at-all-costs."

"...We face an enemy we cannot hope to win through words, however eloquent, but only by deeds—executed under circumstances of our own choosing."

May Take off Wraps

In those 24 words, Eisenhower not only seemed to say he will take the wraps off Gen. Mark Clark's Far East command, but also that no armistice talks can result in nothing more than wasted time and effort.

One year ago last month, when a counter-attack by Chinese troops at Pannunjom, quiet settled over the Korean front. In the last 12 months that quiet has erupted frequently in savage, if small-scale fighting.

The battle line has changed little and neither side has elected to make it the target for a big breakthrough. While Clark and Gen. James Van Fleet, U.S. Korea commander, have been under orders only to hold, the Communists have made the most of the opportunity to build up in depth.

It is doubtful now if Clark has enough troops to smash through the 700,000 Communist soldiers facing him.

Therefore Eisenhower must have a way in mind to bring the Eighth Army to a real striking force.

There has 10 American divisions, counting two in Japan, 14 South Korean divisions, two Air Force and the U. S. Seventh Fleet.

If that force is bolstered by three or four divisions from Nationalist China and perhaps many additional thousands more S o u t h Korean troops still in training, Clark conceivably could take the offensive.

It is not revealing classified information to say that the Communists are suckers for a heavy punch.

The 1st Marine division landing at Inchon caught them flat-footed.

Wipe Open for Attack

The Reds have massed their forces along the front again and are wide open for an amphibious attack anywhere along the two coasts. The fact that there are two coasts makes it doubly hard for them to guess where and who led the attack on Anzio might smack them.

Once a beachhead were secured, the next move would be to hammer a line right across the peninsula and slam the back door on the Communists massed along the front. Cutting their supply lines would result in complete chaos and might bring the desired military decision.

If the stalemate is ever broken that's possibly the way it will have to be done.

Suchan, Jackson Surprised At Early Hour for Execution

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Suchan and Leonard Jackson died eight hours sooner than they expected.

The convicted killers of Toronto detective Edward Tong believed they were to be hanged at 8 a. m. today, and were surprised when the executioner appeared and took eight hours ahead of schedule. A jail official said both men "turned white" but said nothing.

The 24-hour hanging was the longest in the 83-year history of the Don Jail. The men were dropped through the trap at 12:14 a. m. and death was not pronounced until 1:00 a. m.

The march from the cells to the execution chamber started at 12:07 a. m. When they reached the scaffold, Suchan and Jackson were given no opportunity for a last statement, as the black crepe hood was placed over their heads and necks.

Within a minute of reaching the chamber the trap was sprung. Both men were rendered unconscious immediately and it was 46 minutes before death was pronounced. Suchan lasted seconds longer than Jackson.

TORONTO (CP) — Two men paid with their lives early today for the murder of a Toronto detective.

Nooses were placed around their necks, trap doors opened and killers Suchan and Leonard Jackson, back to back, paid for the murder last March 6 of Detective Tong, a sergeant of detectives.

With their deaths as the traps were sprung at 12:14 a. m. at Toronto's Don Jail, ended the famous Boyd gang bank robbers and gunmen had bowed before the hangman's axe for the second and last of the long penitentiary terms.

The double hanging, first in Toronto since 1921, went off without a hitch. Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner of Ontario, said: "I think it was a good job."

Statement Issued

The bodies, clad in the regulation prison garb of shirts and blue jeans, were cut down at 1 a. m. At 11:40 a. m. the coroner's inquests officially announcing the deaths were tacked on the door of the big east end jail.

The statement said:

"We the undersigned do hereby declare that judgment of death was this day executed upon Stephen Steve Suchan, alias Victor J. Lenoff, in the common goal of the county of York, in Toronto, in the presence of."

A similar notice was posted bearing Jackson's name.

Outside a noisy crowd which reached 400 persons stood in the raw wind. A middle-aged woman, who identified as Jackson's cousin but refused to give her name, pushed through the police cordon but was turned back by guards near the jail entrance.

The shooting of Tong on a Toronto street last March started one of Canada's most intensive manhunts. Within days, Suchan and Jackson were captured in Montreal.

Report Indian 176 Years Old Has New Teeth

Allahabad, India (Reuters) — A local paper here reported recently that Baba Haralsingh has celebrated his 176th birthday and hopes to live for another 25 years. The paper said Baba had grown a complete new set of teeth, the previous ones having fallen out when he was about 100 in the 1870s. His grey hair is also turning black again.

Rescue Party Works to Reach Trapped Miners

MANILA (AP) — A rescue party today worked to reach 36 miners trapped in a gold mine blast a day when a river broke through its walls, but a mine official said: "We have given them up as dead."

J. V. Stapler of Marsman and Co., agent for the United Paracale Mining Co. which owns the Lamon, said the whole mine was flooded when the river broke through a 400-foot-deep shaft.

Stapler, obviously sobbing, others stunned," manned the rescue squad a superintendent reported from the scene.

Stapler said damage would "run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. As far as we are concerned, the mine is a total loss and no further operations are generally be-

The mine employed 1,000 workers.

SISTERS DIE IN BLAZE

AIRDRIE, Scotland (Reuters) — Four sisters, aged between five and 14, died in a fire which swept their home near here early today. Their mother and two other sisters escaped from a bedroom window and were taken to hospital with burns. Their father, who has wife and 11 children were asleep in the house when fire began in a down stairs room.

BD. TO APPROVE FREIGHT-RATE HIKE FOR RAILS

Increase to Offset Recent Wage Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The board of transport commissioners intends to give the railways a freight-rate increase to cover the cost of their 16-cents-an-hour wage boost to non-operating employees, Mr. Justice John D. Kearney, chief commissioner, said today.

The announcement was made at the conclusion of a 1½-day hearing on a railway application for a nine-per-cent increase in rates to produce about $43,000,000 a year for the carriers.

Will Check Figures

Mr. Justice Kearney said the requested increase will be granted if examination of the railways' figures showed that the nine per cent in rates would cover only revenue needed to meet the new wage costs.

He added the nine per cent will be authorized "if we are convinced, as seems pretty clear, that the case has been established by financial material."

The board did not seem mooth room for the exercise of judgment, the chief commissioner said. It was a matter of checking the figures.

Railway witnesses at Monday's opening session on the rate case testified that cost estimates in their submissions related solely to the increased labor bill resulting from the compulsory acceptance of the majority report of a federal conciliation board dealing with disputed unions' unions representing 144,000 non-operating employees.

Extra Revenue

The railways said Monday the cost of the wage increase for employees engaged directly in freight and passenger rail operations would be $36,000,000 in the two major companies, and about $52,700,000 including all categories of workers who would receive it.

They estimated the nine-per-cent rate increase would produce $43,351,000.

A second nine-per-cent application now is before the board, but it is based on a claim by the Canadian Pacific Railway — the "yard stick" line for rates — that it should receive a special relief that all present on its investment in railway property.

This has been set down for a hearing in January, with the date not specified.

Liberal Leader Suggests Changes In Tax Structure

TORONTO (CP)—Real progress in easing the municipal tax load can be achieved only if the province "recognizes its responsibilities" and takes over some of the municipal burden, Farquhar Oliver Leyn, leader of the Liberal party, told Toronto Board of Trade members Monday.

In an address prepared for broadcast in the free-time "Provincial Affairs" series over a provincial network of the CBC, the Ontario Liberal leader declared that while that a solution to the problem does not lie in the creation of new taxes, it does lie in the municipalities could operate.

The province, Mr. Oliver suggested, should take over full cost of education.

As for education "a much larger share of the cost should be borne by the province generally because the problem will not be solved by increasing grants-in-aid."

Hobo Nabbed With $7,500 Bracelet Disappears Minus $1,000 Reward

NEW YORK (CP) — A $7,500 diamond bracelet that a hobo found buried in wood in his pockets for more than nine months was on its way back to its owner today after police sought the tramp — to give him a $1,000 reward.

The bracelet was lost by Mrs. Eleanor Littlewood-Marston of Toronto and Monte Carlo after a Halloween party last year. It was reclaimed Monday by her daughter, Mrs. Richard J. Reynolds who offered the reward.

Police uncovered the jewelry when they picked up the hobo, Herman F. Hamschmann, 55, for loitering in Central Park, police said.

The bracelet was turned up when police frisked Hamschmann. He said there he found the bauble in a gutter and carried it around with him because he feared he would be charged with theft if he turned it in.

Police learned the name of the owner through the Paris maker's name engraved on the bracelet. It was turned over to Mrs. Reynolds, who gave the reward to the finder.

Hamschmann dismissed on the vagrancy charge, had disappeared

Sabre Jet Pilots Destroy Four Communist MIGs

SEOUL (AP)—Allied Sabre jet pilots destroyed at least four Communist MIG-15 jets in a series of high altitude dogfights over North Korea today, the Fifth Air Force announced.

Allied pilots a'so were credited with damaging one MiG and probably destroying another.

Allied losses, if any, are announced weekly.

The air force said a total of 27 Sabres and about 32 MiGs engaged in 13 separate dogfights. The battles raged from 45,000 feet down to 800 feet.

Ground action subsided to routine patrol fights except in the Kumhwa ridges area of the central front, where Chinese soldiers continued harassing attacks.

The Reds hit Pinpoint hill and Rocky point five times before midnight in their heaviest ground attacks. They were driven back each time.

Teen-age Addict Admits Murder; Feared Exposure

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—A 18-year-old high school student told police today he fatally stabbed artist Ida C. Mackaway, 67, when she threatened to tell officers he was a marijuana user.

Booked on suspicion of murder was Donald B. Lee. Police said the youth led them to a trash can where they found a knife with a four-inch blade.

Mrs. Mackaway's body, punctured by stab wounds, was discovered Monday by neighbors in her fashionable studio home in nearby La Jolla. The well-known miniature portrait painter had been at work on a picture of a child. Coroner A. E. Gallagher said she was killed Saturday.

"I didn't know if she was dead or not, but when I left I heard she was so she couldn't identify me," police quoted the youth as saying.

Neighbors who had noted a "teen-ager standing on the Mackaway porch Saturday gave police a description. Officers tracked their list of known juvenile delinquents. Then they arrested Crosby, who had been arrested on a correctional institution.

Police said Crosby gave the following version:

He was soliciting work in the La Jolla neighborhood.

While talking with Mrs. Mackaway, he picked a pack of cigarets out of his pocket and a marijuana cigaret dropped out on the floor.

Mrs. Mackaway threatened to call police.

"I slapped her and when she began screaming I pulled out my knife. Then I stuck her over the head with my fist."

Crosby wasn't able to say how he hit a cb ceagle wounded Mrs. Mackaway.

Crosby wasn't able to say how Mrs. Mackaway could recognize the marijuana cigaret.

Machine Dedicated to Discovery Secrets of the Insides of Atoms

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

UPTON, N. Y. (AP) — A giant machine was dedicated Monday to the task of discovering secrets of the insides of atoms and new forms of the basic stuff.

The machine is the cosmotron, the world's most powerful atom smasher. It is a great doughnut-shaped magnet, covered with a red plastic skin to keep it clean and rust-free, weighing 2,200 tons and measuring 144 feet in diameter.

It is the newest tool for learning what holds the hearts of atoms together, where the energy of stars comes from, what are the basic building facts of life of the universe.

The cosmotron was dedicated, at Brookhaven national laboratories, here on Long Island by discovering secrets of the insides of atoms and new forms of the basic stuff.

Full Scale Probe Of Defence Effort Is Now Demanded

Currie Report Produces Fireworks in Commons

OTTAWA (CP)—The official Opposite wants an inquiry into Canada's defence effort that would dwar' the Currie investigation.

Within a few hours of the tabling of the spectacular Currie report on the Army works services, the Commons Monday heard Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC (PC—Nanaimo) suggest a full-scale inquiry by an independent commission into the makeup and administration of all three armed forces.

His speech was one more indication that this session of Parliament, due to adjourn this week until mid-January, has likely encountered its No. 1 issue and quite possibly a key factor in a 1953 election campaign.

The issue showed up in the form of a 74-page report by the Montreal accounting firm of George S. Currie, former deputy defence minister, who spent seven months investigating the implications of the Camp Petawawa fiasco.

Tabled by Prime Minister St. Laurent, the report offers the results of the most penetrating inquiry into the defence department since the war ended and has not unearthed a variety of faults and failures in the Army.

It pictured a general breakdown in the system of administration, supervision and control in the army works services, a branch concerned with an estimated $750,000,000 worth of building and plants.

Claims Jackson Statement Will Help Free Man

KINGSTON (CP) — A sworn statement made Monday night by Leonard Jackson, shortly before he was hanged, may help to free a man serving 12 years in Kingston penitentiary on a charge of bank robbery.

A Kingston lawyer, who asked that his name be withheld, said that Jackson's statement says Anthony Brunck, 29, of Toronto had no part in the $9,000 Toronto bank robbery for which he was convicted.

Jackson, hanged early today with Steve Suchan for the March 6 murder of a Toronto detective, is reported to have said in his statement that Brunck had been under direction of a leader who called signals like a football quarterback.

Brunck was arrested two hours after the bank was robbed and Louis Stavaroff. Each pleaded innocent. They were convicted on circumstantial evidence and given terms of 12, 15, 1951, to 15-year terms

Brunck's counsel argued in vain that identification of his client was open to question because he was not in penitentiary, the Kingston lawyer was asked to help in the case. Through his investigation, the affidavits were obtained from Shirley and Lyons along with an admission by Stavaroff that he drove the getaway car although he had no part in the robbery.

Blind Beggar Got $50 a Day Goes to Jail

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A blind beggar got 60 days in jail Monday for begging on the streets. Magistrate Harry Bronzo imposed the sentence on George E. Binning and said blind beggars must suffer the full penalty of the law because they pin a badge of dishonor on them. Police said Monday blind man Binning collected some $50 daily by playing an accordian, police said.

Labor Minister Intervenes In Textile Strike

THREE RIVERS, Que. (CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell awaiting trial for illegal assembly after the Riot Act was read during disturbances at strike-ridden Louiseville Thursday last, textile workers are holding the key to settlement for settlement of their nine-month strike.

Labor Minister Barrette announced Monday, after a special cabinet meeting, that he will approach Associated Textiles Ltd., and the Catholic Textile Syndicate (CCCL) whose 800 members went on strike last March 6 over wages and better working conditions.

Dupleasis Acts

Premier Dupleteis, in a brief statement, said the Quebec government is "taking all reasonable steps to obtain a settlement that is fair and just basis."

Last riots made by the American-owned company in August included a work consumption bonus of $140 and a pay increase of 12 cents an hour.

Heavy wages previously ranged from 70 to 75 cents an hour but with the 12-cent increase, would range from 82 to 87 cents an hour.

Mr. Barrette said there could be no question of forcing a settlement."

He estimated all but 300 of the strikers have found jobs since the mill reopened last summer with the company operating from area surrounding Louiseville, 17 miles west of here.

He would do his best to have the 300 re-employed in the mill, "but respect of the community.

Many Arrested

Twenty-five were arrested in the disturbances, of which police have used guns, clubs and tear gas to break assemblies.

Six were released almost at once, one 16-year-old turned over to juvenile court, one man fined $10 for creating a disturbance while drunk and another $50 for disturbing the peace, six fined $100 and costs or two months in jail for illegal assembly and two ordered to trial. The remaining eight are scheduled for preliminary inquiry Dec. 17 on the same charges.

Kinsmen Hold Pre-Christmas Ladies' Night

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club with their wives were guests of the Hotel Quinte Monday evening when at their annual pre-Christmas ladies' night approximately 125 persons enjoyed a turkey banquet in the main dining room of the hotel.

The dinner meeting was one of the highlights social functions of the club this year, being highlighted by an appropriate address on the Christmas spirit by Archdeacon Arthur Smith, of St. Thomas' Church. Instrumentals by four members of the Kinsmen Boys' Band, and solos by Miss Sylvia Motley, talented young local singer.

Urging all people of all religious faiths to forget differences and be of one purpose, especially during Christmas with all its religious meaning, Archdeacon Smith referred to experiences as a chaplain with the armed services during the last war.

During the Allied advance through Italy a bombed-out Roman Catholic church and its relations had been used for holding Anglican church services during the Christmas season. Drawn together by the war, members of many nationalities and religious faiths had taken part in the service.

With the current spread of communism throughout many parts of the world the speaker urged that the Christmas spirit and the love of God was now more important than ever before.

Club president Harry Knott presided over the meeting, the speaker being introduced by Cleo Colling, with Ted Follwell expressing the appreciation of club members. Arthur Cruji proposed the toast to the ladies with Kinsgirl president Ruth Follwell, responding.

POLICE BLOTTER

A fight, which appeared to have resulted from an argument over a girl friend, sent a soldier member of the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, at Picton, to hospital last night. The man was reported to have taken place outside a tavern and the injured party was taken to hospital where he was treated for a cut on his head and other bruises. Police took no action in the matter.

Key Personnel of American Optical Co. Honor Mr. and Mrs. W. Buckley

On Thursday evening, nineteen members of the supervisory and key personnel of the American Optical Company Canada Limited, Lens Manufacturing Division, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Buckley at a dinner at the Queen's Hotel.

Mr. Buckley, who retired this year, joined the American Optical Company in Southbridge, Massachusetts, 43 years ago. In his position as lens room foreman in charge of lens manufacturing for the company, he has had close contact with the Belleville plant throughout the years.

Gilbert Scott, manager of the A. O. Lens Manufacturing Division in Belleville, speaking on behalf of the Belleville people, stated that Mr. Buckley had always been their true friend and was with regret that the announcement of his retirement was received. Mr. Scott extended to Mr. and Mrs. Buckley a sincere invitation to visit the city many times in years to come.

Miss Frances Reid, in making a presentation of a figurine to Mrs. Buckley, repeated Mr. Scott's invitation, and stated that the Buckleys many more happy years together.

Before presenting Mr. Buckley with a guiding jacket, Bill Norris spoke of the love and assistance Mr. Buckley had given to the Belleville plant.

In expressing his thanks to the group, Mr. Buckley commented a bit, touching on the highlights of the lens manufacturing division in Belleville, and humorously stated that as he had retired he was speaking unofficially but he wished to say that he had the highest regard for the Belleville people and he felt that the success of the lens manufacturing division in Belleville was largely due to not just a finer group of people now in that place but those people to live than in this country.

Mr. Scott informed the group that although Mr. Buckley had officially retired, he had been retained that the company to take charge of a special development, which, if successful, would mean a great deal to those connected with the American Optical Company. Mr. Scott wished Mr. Buckley every success in his post-retirement occupation.

Five New Rotarians Inducted Into Club

Five new members were inducted into the Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon held at the Hotel Quinte on Monday. The new members and their sponsors are as follows: Rev. Andrew Adams, sponsored by Harry Ackerman; Rev. Ralph Middleton by Jamieson Bone; Joseph Devuna by Wilfrid Mathieson; Philip Cane by George Campbell and Frank Mitchell; Arthur Lloyd.

One other member to be inducted, and unavoidably absent was Les Grills. He will be inducted at the induction at a later meeting by Ross Davies.

Following the introduction of the new members, Gilbert Scott outlined the privileges of the Rotary Club. Fred Wilson explained the club's attendance scheme and O. B. Scott formally welcomed the new Rotarians. The five men were presented with membership diplomas and Rotary literature.

The next meeting will be the annual Rotary Christmas program.

Obituary

WILLIAM OSCAR SPRING

Funeral services for the late William Oscar Spring were held Monday afternoon from the Pinkston Funeral Home.

The service was conducted by Rev. Dennis McTavish, of Bridge Street United Church. Albert Clarke, acting chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Division No. 189, and Percy Kerr, chaplain of the brotherhood conducted their services.

Honorary bearers were James Cooper, Frank Parsons, Edward Hall, Thomas Burden, William Adams, Alex Bremner, William McGee, Herbert McMorran, Forbes McLean, George Finding and Norman Williamson.

The bearers were William Weese, Richard Sargent, Thomas Hall, Ernest Wilson, Walter Brown and William Dunn.

Interment was in Belleville cemetery.

MRS. GEORGE KERR

Marmora — Under the auspices of Marmora Chapter No. 169, Eastern Star and amid manifestations of deepest sympathy, the late Mrs. George Kerr was held on Saturday afternoon. The service was held at St. Paul's United Church, which was filled to overflowing. Rev. Mr. Brownlee officiated. The hymns were "Peace, Perfect Peace," "Abide With Me" and "The Strife Is O'er." Canon Brownlee spoke on the text: "In My Father's House Are Many Mansions."

Interment took place in Marmora Protestant Cemetery, with a profusion of floral emblems lining the grave.

The bearers were: William Lavender, Ross Sandham, Percy Sandham, Eugene Brady, Edward Hewitt and Harold Naylor.

MRS. WILLIAM CRAWFORD

Marmora — The death occurred in Arnprior on Friday of a former highly esteemed resident in the person of Mrs. William Crawford. Mrs. Crawford was thirty-seven years ago in Marmora Township, Myrtle Theresa Cook, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Cook. Her husband predeceased her thirty-five years ago. For some years she was housekeeper for Dean H. J. Farrell when he was priest of the Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, until failing health laid him low.

In the days of her good health she was a prominent member of the Catholic Women's League, the Altar Society and the League of the Sacred Heart. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Harold Lawless, of Arnprior. Also surviving are two brothers, James and Bert in Western Canada, and four sisters, Mrs. Clement Gillon, Winnipeg; Mrs. Arthur Murphy, Mrs. Philip Trolling and Mrs. George Legris, of Vancouver.

The funeral was held on Monday, leaving the Dunlay residence for Requiem Mass in the Sacred Heart Church. Interment followed in the Sacred Heart cemetery.

LUTHER MORSA EMBURY

The death occurred today of Luther Morra Embury, of 69 S. Front Street, in the Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 76th. year.

Born at St. Ola, he was the son of the late, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Embury. A resident of the locality for 16 years, the deceased had been ill for some time prior to his death. Before moving to this area he had been a resident of Kipling, Saskatchewan.

Surviving are his wife, the former Alexandra Godfrey; three sons: Alvin, of Vancouver; Ivan, of Belleville; Orval, Belleville, and Bele of Belleville. Surviving also are seven daughters: Mrs. Beatrice Wilson, of B.C.; Mrs. Lillian Holiday, of B.C.; Mrs. Myrtle (Eunice) Thorn, of Belleville; Miss Inez Embury, of Kingston; Miss Doreen Embury, of Belleville; Miss Janice Embury, of Belleville, and Miss Karen Embury, of Belleville. There are two brothers, Morris, of Tweed, and Wallace, of Camp Shilo, Manitoba; one sister, Mrs. Alex. Donald, of Canyon Creek, Alberta.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home; a funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

WILLIAM EDWARD SMITH (Deserotto)

Funeral services for William Edward Smith, of Deserotto, were held from the White Funeral Home to Christ Anglican Church on Saturday last. The Rev. K. F. Blanchard, of Deserotto, officiated, and the bearers were: Peter Marchild, Abel Green, Benson Brant, Stafford Claus, Herb. and Russell Marsh.

Mr. Smith died in the Belleville General Hospital last Wednesday. He was 79. Mr. Smith, born in Deserotto, was the son of the late Mary Smith and Ellen Powless. His wife, the former, Lydia Claus, also predeceased him.

The deceased was only ill a short time. Educated in Deserotto, he was a member of Christ Anglican Church on the Tyendinaga Reserve, and a lifelong resident of the district.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Brant, of Deseronto.

Interment was in Christ Anglican Cemetery.

MRS. GERTRUDE M. WOODHOUSE

Marmora — Following a period of suffering borne with great fortitude Myrtle Lee, beloved wife of George Woodhouse, passed away late Saturday evening at the age of 71. She, with her husband and two children moved to Marmora from Yarker twenty-three years ago. Her husband being transferred as section foreman for the C.N.R.

She was the daughter of the late Alexander Lee and Rhoda Walker and in her younger days was most active in the work of the United and formerly the Methodist Church. She was also secretary for a period of the Sunday School Class. Before being a teacher; also she sang in the choir and treasurer for membership in the Epworth League. Shortly after coming to Marmora she became a member and was unable to continue as she would have been a life of active church membership. Two years ago she underwent a critical operation in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

As in Yarker, so in Marmora, she was favorably known for her nursing and hospitality and leaves many friends to mourn her passing.

She is survived by her husband, and one son, Ford of Marmora, and one daughter, Mrs. Melvin Johnston (Vivian), of Eldorado.

The funeral service was conducted at St. Andrew's United Church Saturday afternoon, Dec. 13th afternoon, with Rev. K. J. Crawford, B.A., B.D., officiating, assisted by Rev. H. E. Stevenson, of Arnprior, a friend of the family. Burial took place in Yarker cemetery.

MATTHEW JAS. McGARVEY

Marmora — Early on Sunday morning, December 14th, Matthew McGarvey died at his home on Main Street, Marmora, at the age of 63. He was born at Stanhope, Hastings, Marmora, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David McGarvey, leaving school, he assisted his father in the latter's personal lumber business. Later he entered the employ of the Pearce Company and did his father, and each was known for his prowess at river driving.

He enlisted with the 155th. Battalion, Canadian Infantry, in the First World War and was stationed a little over two years in England. Upon his return from overseas he resumed employment with the Pearce Company, but later worked for the late D. R. Airhart at his grist mill. Next he became employed with the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited.

Ill health forced his retirement about four years ago when he opened a grocery store at his residence. He was popular with a host of friends. He was a member of Pentecostal Church where his funeral service will be held on Wednesday afternoon, to be followed by interment in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, the former Annie Bowen, and five children: Mrs. Wesley Cuddy (Olive), Marmora; Rose, Toronto; Orville, Marmora; William, of Peterborough, and Delbert, at home. He also surviving are one brother, and three sisters: William, of Belleville; Mary Nobel and Mrs. William Smith, Marmora and Mrs. Dennis Roberts, of Toronto.

Friends Honor Albert T. Howe On Retirement

Albert (Ab) Thomas Howe carried his lunch pail to work at the C.N.R. roundhouse Saturday, November 29th for the last time. The 65-year-old "Ab" climaxed 39 years and five months of service that day.

Last Friday his friends gathered to honor his retirement, through an informal farewell party at the roundhouse, where Mr. Howe had been employed since 1913. The shop foreman, Albert Taylor, presented a purse of money to the retired employee on behalf of the men at the roundhouse. C. Vince, assistant locomotive foreman, gave a farewell speech.

Mr. Howe, now residing at Belleville, R.R. 3, was born at Sidney Crossing in 1887. He joined the staff at the roundhouse on June 27, 1923 and was employed in general capacities until his retirement. He will retire on pension from the company.

N.C.O's of Regt. Hold Christmas Party 'n Mess

The Warrant Officers and Sergeants of the 9th Anti Tank Regt. (SP) R.C.A. (A.L.L.) were hosts to approximately 60 children on Sunday afternoon as they held their annual children's Christmas party. The afternoon was climaxed with a visit from Santa Claus, who presented each child with a present from the huge decorated tree, which adorned the mess.

During the afternoon the children and their parents were entertained by a program of films and special entertainment provided by Harold McNish at the Hammond organ installed in the mess through the courtesy of the Northern Electric Co. Ltd.

Mess president, WO 2 Gerald Scott, acted as master of ceremonies and welcomed all those present on behalf of the executive and extended thanks for the compliments of the season.

Special guests were Lieut.-Col. D. W. McGregor, commanding officer of the regiment and Mrs. McGregor. In a brief address Lieut.-Col. McGregor complimented the members on their fine party and extended to all the compliments of the season.

The party was under the supervision of the mess committee with Sgt. Gord. Carter as chairman assisted by Sgt. Bennett and WO2 Howard Kokesh.

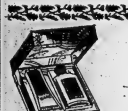
IN MEMORIAM

EVANS. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Millie Evans, who passed away December 16, 1945.
No one knows how much I miss her
No one knows but those who
I have suffered. Since I lost you
Life has been a pain in the same.
In my heart you are kept hungry,
Sweetly tender, fond and true,
There is no one can replace you
That I do not think of you.
—Loving daughter, Ernest. D16

EVANS. — In loving memory of a dear wife, Millie Evans, who passed away December 16, 1945.
Time speeds on, two years have flown
Since death, its ghost, its shadow thrown
Wilder our home, where all seemed bright
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
Her vacant place can fill.
—Sadly missed by mum, but not in vain
We up to heaven our prayers ascend
That we meet remembered by husband Wesley. D16

CARDS OF THANKS



The family of H. Harold Hoff wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation at this time to Rev. Spurrell, Dr. McIlveen, and nurses of Prince Edward County Hospital, friends, relatives and relatives for the many acts of kindness shown, for the lovely flowers, cards and gifts received, and for the care of a loving husband and father.
—Mrs. Hoff, Mary and Hudson. D16

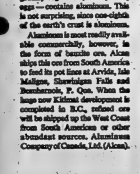
TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Western oils continued recent advances at a slower pace in early afternoon stock market trading today while golds declined.

Grédul led the western oils with a gain of 25 cents in a third-hour turnover of 17,000 shares. New Superior, Britalta, Devon Leduc and Joplar also gained. Central Leduc, Husky and Pacific led the losers.



Senior golds slipped although Lamaque added points. Junior producers also showed but a single gain. Prospects drew a little better support as Coverdale and Gunnar gained but most slipped. Holding companies were weak.

Papers and refining oils were weak in the industrials list while utilities gained. Most other groups were mixed.

Base metals showed a small majority of losses as Hudson Bay, Steep Rock and East Sullivan fell. Beverage gained and Rio and United Asbestos added pennies in active trading.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The American dollar was at a discount of three per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Monday's noon rate was 97 7-32. The pound sterling was 2.71 15/16 against 2.73⅜ Monday.

CHANCES are you have, somewhere around you, the wealth of grains, vegetables, meat, milk, eggs — contains aluminum. This is not surprising, since one-eighth of the earth's crust is aluminum.

Aluminum is most readily available commercially, however, in the form of bauxite ore. Alcan ships this ore from South America to feed its pot lines at Arvida, Isle Maligne, Shawinigan Falls and Beauharnois, P. Que. When the huge new Kitimat development is completed in B.C., refined ore will be shipped up the West Coast from South America or other abundant sources. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Rush's Tender of $65,000 To Collect Garbage for Two Years Accepted by Council

Hugh "Paddy" Rush, Church Street, will be the city garbage collector of 1953 and 1954 it was decided by city council Monday at their last regular meeting of the year. Mr. Rush's tender of $65,000 for the two-year term was the lowest of five submitted.

In awarding the contract, however, councillors made it clear that the required surety bond and public liability insurance would have to be posted with city officials by December 22nd or the contract would go to the next highest bidder.

The garbage collection contract is approximately five thousand dollars greater than received by Rex Bridge, whose tender price for the two year term now being completed was $59,988.

City comptroller Harold D. Bateman will become clerk-comptroller at the beginning of the year when the city clerk Wilfred Holmes will be given six months' leave of absence. At the same time Gordon Lumnliss will be made assistant clerk.

Not Permanent Until July 1

The appointment of Mr. Bateman to the dual position of clerk-comptroller saw considerable discussion on the part of councillors, several of whom wished to know if the appointment would be permanent. Mayor A. M. Hay stated there could be no permanent appointment for six months as Mr. Holmes would not officially retire until June 30th.

Alderman Lattimer asked if Mr. Bateman's salary would be increased because of the dual position. He was told this would not be the case although Mr. Bateman would be in line for any general increase granted city hall staff members. Alderman Hyde, as chairman of finance, emphasized the appointment would mean no increase in staff at city hall.

Not Considered Feasible

Alderman Tice asked if consideration had been given to hiring a clerk-solicitor. He was told this had been considered but the appointment was not considered feasible. "We didn't think we would get the best solicitor for the salary offered," Alderman Hyde said.

An amount of $1,000 was recommended transferred to the police commission budget to pay for the additional cost of school guards and signs. It was pointed out that additional school guards had been hired following the setting of this year's budget.

Lyle Vanamanker was hired as member of the local fire department replacing Alonzo Wilson who recently was retired.

Want Welfare Fund

Council received a communication from the local fire fighters asking that consideration be given to setting up a welfare fund to be used by firemen, the soon for retirement. It was pointed out that Mr. Wilson had served over 20 years with the department, but due to the fact that the city pension scheme had been introduced only a short time his pension would amount to less than $40 per month, including allowance for past service.

Alderman Angus Duffy as chairman of the fire committee said his committee had been approached by firemen with a request somewhat like Mr. Wilson but no action had been taken. He said firemen had been told there was nothing to stop them approaching council as a whole.

"The weakness of the request is that if you do it for one you have to do it for all," he pointed out. He went on to say that the city's share of pension contributions for fire personnel under the retirement scheme was $2,400 per year, while private contributions for certain city officials amounted to $2,700 annually.

Referred to Committee

The request of the local fire fighting personnel asking that Mr. Wilson's pension be raised by $70 per month was referred to the finance committee.

A request from the Shell Oil Company for permission to erect a neon sign on service station property at the corner of Bridge and Coleman streets, was referred to the public works committee.

Council will accede to a request from the Belleville and District Builders' Exchange and will insert a clause into all calls for tenders for city construction work to the effect that wages paid must conform with rates set by the Industrial Standards Act.

It was pointed out in the communication that it was not fair if some contractors were permitted to pay wages below the rate set for the Belleville zone.

There was considerable discussion on the matter, some councillors maintaining the request did not concern the city, while others pointed out inclusion of the requested clause in tender calls would do no harm.

Policing by Laber Unions

City Solicitor R. A. Pringle did not see how any contractor could avoid paying the standard wage rate to employees. "All that is being asked is for the city to insert the clause saying prevailing rates must be paid," he said. "Any policing would be done by labor unions."

The city executive committee will take up with Poundkeeper Charles Trost and contractor could the city pound be moved outside the city limits. Alderman Duffy tabled a recommendation asking that the city pound be moved outside the city, stating that residents in the area of the present pound were objecting.

The tender of the Trinidad Leaseholds Ltd. for the supply of gasoline and fuel of the Utilities Service Oil Company for motor oil was accepted by council.

A delegation from the Wallbridge Road section objecting to their street oiling treatment, and other from the Miller Street area with the same complaint, was heard by council.

Spokesman from the group said residents had understood there was to be no assessment for oiling this year, but this week had received assessment regarding payment.

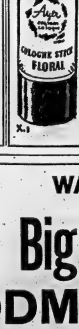
Under Local Improvement

Alderman Thomas pointed out that street oiling was done under local improvement and that oiling two or three years in a row was necessary to get a firm top surface. He said the latepess of the bills going out was because the city hall staff had to wait until all oiling for the year was completed so that an average rate per foot frontage could be struck. This year's rate was 11 cents per foot was the same in all parts of the city.

City treasurer Drury S. Denyes said if Wallbridge Road residents wished payment for street oiling could be laid over and included in next year's taxes. This would cost the residents only a small amount of interest charges.

A Miller Street resident objected to paying for street oiling until flood conditions on the street had been remedied as each year's work would not be deteriorated every spring. Water coming down through Coleman Flats flooded the street surface each spring and caused damage, it was stated.

Members Named



William Baldwin and Enos David were named members for two years for the Bay of Quinte Area High School Board.

Two readings were given to the proposed final building and zoning by-law which was recently drafted by the city planning board and local building inspector, David Barker. The by-law will go to the Municipal Board for tentative approval.

Prior to adjournment Mayor A. M. Haig expressed regret that council was losing three of its members this year. Aldermen Rollins, Lattimer and Porter will not be with the council next year. Alderman Hyde also expressed regret at losing the fellow councillors go.

Reply to Mayor Haig for his direction of council this year. "It has been a real pleasure for me to sit under Mayor Haig this year," he said.

Township Clerk Has to Cast Deciding Vote

Recounts for municipal elections in Hastings County seem to be the order of the day this year.

A week ago a recount was necessary to decide the second position on the school board in Dungannon township while this week another recount was held to decide a council position in Tudor and Cashel township.

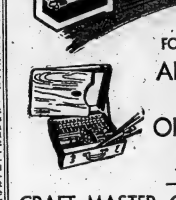
At the recent election for the above combined townships, William Birrell and William Mallory were tied for the last place on the municipal council with 67 votes each. Today a recount was held by Judge J. C. Anderson and the count still remained a tie.

Judge Anderson said it would be the duty of the township clerk, W. R. Armstrong of Millbridge, to cast the deciding ballot.

In the previous recount for Dungannon township, the clerk was asked this responsibility when one ballot disallowed in the original count was allowed by Judge Anderson. In this case Mrs. Dorothy Price was the school board, seat by reason of the extra ballot and the township clerk, Clayton Price, did not have to choose between his wife and a neighbor.

Farm Forum Notes

The definition of a community is determined not by a heated discussion at a recent meeting of the Brooklads, Foxboro, Hazzards and Melrose Farm Forum groups.



The Brooklads organization was split on the matter, one group maintaining that they had no such centre. The other group contended that any meeting in some school or hall constituted such a centre.

Foxboro, on the other hand, has two schools in its district which can be fitted as community centres. Melrose has no such facilities.

The Hazzards group has access, without charge, to the Orange Hall. The organization is planning several improvements to the facilities of the hall, providing the lodge approves the project.

It was announced that Hazzards has plans underway to make available a travelling library.

HOW CAN IT MAKE SENSE?

The news will probably not reach the battle areas in Korea for Christmas but along with their New Year's greetings the boys in their bunkers will be able to read how that stalwart Canadian patriot, Tim Buck, has had a full hour's audience with a committee of the Senate in Ottawa, protesting proposed revisions of the Criminal Code in respect to treason.

Secretary of the Labor Progressive party, and long acknowledged as No. 1 Communist in this country, Buck spent a fruitful hour needling the select legal minds of the upper house. To indicate how well he performed his propaganda chore, the Ottawa Journal report of the hearing opened with this paragraph:

"Senator members of the Banking of Commerce Committee Thursday labored for more than an hour attempting to reassure Tim Buck that Canada is not being handed over to American 'imperialism'."

In an editorial comment the Globe and Mail remarked: " . . . the country has been regaled with the bizarre spectacle of Tim Buck, the Communist leader, lecturing the senators on points of law."

It is all very well for those of us at home to be reassured that Buck was treated exercising his privileges as a free citizen, and to know that his professed alarm over imagined infringements upon the freedom of his fellow Canadians is but one more fantastic delusion. But we wonder how the boys in the 25th. Brigade will reconcile the news from home, along with other current reports of municipal elections across the Dominion where known Communists have been seeking election, and in some cases have been elected, to public office.

It should be hardly less palatable to any Canadian that this leading exponent of Red in our midst could make the bald, palpably false statement to a Senate committee that: "It is generally accepted that the changes proposed in the Criminal Code are made at the request of the United States."

This is an undisguised slander against Canada's Parliament. Such statement were made in Parliament by any member of the House of Commons or the Senate it would be greeted with cries of "Shame!" It would be met with an order from the Speaker that it be withdrawn.

But Mr. Buck was permitted to withdraw not a word of his offensive remarks. He was permitted to indulge his privileges as a free citizen by proceeding to declare that the new law is a direct attack at the basic civil rights of the citizen under British law; that it would make Canada subject to a system of "thought control" equivalent to that imposed in Japan before the war. He was permitted to digress from the relevant question to charge that American forces now were stationed in Canada with extra territorial privileges usually associated with the occupation of a colonial area by an imperialist power.

This avowed advocate of everything that is contrary to British concepts of freedom and liberty was allowed to place on the record the slanderous implication that the name of "the average Canadian citizen" with only the slightest show of indignation on the part of the Committee.

We wonder just how many of the boys, now going in toiletting these blatantly subversive tactics of Stalin's henchmen. Every right and privilege to which the Labor Progressive party, or any other political group in this country is entitled, must have been fully respected in thus permitting the submission of a written brief on this subject to the Senate committee. But the Senate committee preferred to exercise the fullest flexibility in bending over backwards to extend democratic courtesy to Moscow's fifth column agents in our midst, and grant them a personal audience.

Millions are in slavery today behind the Iron Curtain because their erstwhile, and long since liquidated political leaders felt it beneath them at all times to accord the fullest privileges of democratic courtesy to the emissaries of Moscow.

The sorriest part of it all is that these things will certainly be read by the men in the 25th. Brigade now engaged in a life and death struggle against Communism 24 hours of every day of their lives. Many of them are young men who enlisted in late teens and early twenties without having had to give much serious thought to Communism itself as the only issue in the Korean war. To be given by all their self-good cause to know more beyond doubt what the issue is and who their enemies are. And they have come to realize beyond all doubt that in fighting the Reds there, they are engaged in the most crucial single battle in the universal battle against them.

It seems to us that it would take a great deal of fast talking to convince them that there is not something tragically awful insofar as concerns the future of Canada, when them to face death at the hands of Communists in Korea in order that Communists in Canada may be accorded the fullest privileges of free citizens.

Perhaps the select legal minds of the Green Chamber in Ottawa might undertake such an explanation. If they could, it might be of some help to the many who have some sense to a Canadian soldier in an outpost bunker under Communist fire on Korea's barren and desolate hills this December they would be authors of a document destined for posterity.

But perhaps things are not supposed to make much sense to anyone any more if we expect them to conform with ordinary standards of thinking. Much easier it is for the Communists. They do not have to bother thinking and in losing the capacity to do so, can reconcile all things.

THE DEVIL'S KNELL

Seven hundred years ago in the English town of Dewsbury, in Yorkshire, a boy was murdered and his body thrown in a nearby stream. The crime was discovered and the murderer, a rich man named Thomas de Scothill, presented as a penance a tenor bell to Dewsbury Church. The bell became known as the Devil's Knell and every Christmas eve it is tolled once for each year of the Christmas calendar.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

According to a bank manager, who occasionally groans in one of the most dangerous thing a manager of any kind can do, these days, is to recollect how hard he used to work, how he had to do things and struggling, and to compare it to the way his employees work today.

"I find myself," he says, "when I get into that late Xmas and early twenties without having had to give much serious thought to Communism itself as the only issue in the Korean war. To be given by all their self-good cause to know more beyond doubt what the issue is and who their enemies are. And they have come to realize beyond all doubt that in fighting the Reds there, they are engaged in the most crucial single battle in the universal battle against them.

walk out. There are too many soft or jobs available. We are in one of those periods when there are more jobs than people to people to fill them. A manager has to take what he can get, in the way of help.

I asked the manager if there were one or two, or even three people on his staff who were good, hard, unselfish workers.

"Well, yes," he admitted on reflection.

"Do they," I checked, "work as hard and as fast as you did when you were their age?"

"I suppose so," he said.

"Well, then," I suggested, "you became manager."

"These two or three are likely to become managers, too. Don't you figure there were just as many grudging and complaining workers around you when you were as young as here are now?"

"Mmmmm," he said.

The probability is that the business rise up, and the rest of us just dope along; and we complain about each other generation after generation. It isn't social, or economic, or political. It is merely biological.

JUST FOLKS

NO HINTER

I'm not one to drop a hinter.
Surely not in public print.
When the Christmas ads I'm reading
I don't mention things I'm needing.
No one ever hears me saying:
"My bow ties have started fraying."
Just before the dinner's ending
I don't say: "My socks need mending."
And then casually tell them
Of a fine shop where they sell them.
I'm not one forever dropping
Tips for them when they go shopping.
I repeat that I'm no hinter,
Saying: "Gloves I'll need this winter,
Kid for dress and wool for driving."
I detest such sly conniving.
Shirts worn out? The collars show it.
Anyone who looks must know it.
What I need I am not stating.
Still for Christmas I'm waiting.
And I'm willing now to bet them
Shirts and ties and socks, I'll get them.

Snack Is Best of All Meals

(New York Times)

There are various schools of belief, all firmly held, about what constitutes the best meal of the day. One stresses breakfast, pointing out that the authority that a proper breakfast will make a proper day, whereas a poor one will make a day that will be full of blue throughout. Another mentions lunch, and not in passing, observing that a midday break is the lonely hour that separates the mind from losing control and darting off into obscurities, repetitions and misstatements. Dinner, of course, is seen by many as the come at the end of the day, an acknowledged virtue and for it the good is inclined to make definite plans and preparations. No, dinner does not come out of a can, and dinner is an honest meal. But none of these can be called the most delectable institution, the best meal of them all. That position is held by the one which comes in between those that are known as a bite to eat, and it is so good as to be habit-forming. Almost universally so.

There are no set rules about a snack. It may be any time or in any size. It ranges from a cracker which is the lowest form of snack, to the full scale compiling of the drumstick left over from Sunday's dinner. The chief characteristic of the day's snack is not down by the clock but there can be one or many. When work is more intense and nerves more on edge, we are naturally more snacks than on a day when all is serene. This is merely the rule of balance, the good making up for the bad. Any time at all is permissible. Whether or not it comes accompanied by a cup of coffee is beside the snack, too, is informal. Many meals, such as dinner, require a drink and a fork, sometimes even a coat and a necktie, but that is not the case with the snack which often can be held by the fingers, sometimes with the aid of the kitchen-utensil known to man. A table is not necessary for a snack, nor a napkin, for a snack is no better when taken in company than when eaten alone.

The snack is an any time, any purpose meal.

In any normal day the first snack comes about mid-morning, when recognition is made of the terrible sensation of being at work. A snack then is better than an aspirin—although there even are those who make their snacks of aspirin. A cup of coffee and an English muffin do nicely for the mid-morning snack, and there is no miss the twenty minutes they take from the feeling of filling up the Tuesday ironing! The mid-morning snack will make the rest of the morning's chores more quickly, and not necessarily only because there will be less morning to pass. Energy will be restored, and nothing is better than energy to drive away the balance of any lingering morning. Much the same thing is true of the snack of mid-afternoon. Recuperation is needed then from the terrible sensation of having hours of work yet ahead. Yes, after the manner of the English muffin for the mid-afternoon snack, with a little pie or cake to give body. As an afternoon snack a candy bar may be purchased at the corner drug store, but in the circumstances of another snack, late in the afternoon. This is recuperate from everything in general.

The best of all good snacks probably is the one which comes late at night. There is the afternoon theatre snack, the "after-bridge party" snack, the big supper-dance snack taken before going to bed. And there is the snack indulged on some of the rare beauty of the Tri Mahal, and in it can be found numerous bits of insurance, and what is stew as opposed to continuing good health?

The snack is an easy time, any purpose meal.

Threesome In Commons

(Windsor Star)

When Flinderiz Minister James Sinclair and Mr. W. Ross Thatcher, C.C.F. member, were seated in Commons debate on tax policies there would be no animus between the two. Many meals, such as dinner, require a drink and a fork, sometimes even a coat and a necktie, but that is not the case with the snack which often can be held by the fingers, sometimes with the aid of the kitchen-utensil known to man. Crime On N.Y. Waterfront

(Hamilton Spectator)

It may be assumed that among those vested interests on the eastern seaboard who are opposed to the attempt to clean up waterfront crime in New York City are the extortionists and ex-criminos who exert such a malign control over the New York City waterfront. But the public may be delighted to take his business elsewhere if he could.

Now that the current investigations, the New York State Crime Commission has been told of shocking story of racketeering and corruption on the waterfront. Many have been the indictments taken over the handling of cargoes at the major piers in New York City. Many have been convictions for employment has become a criminal record. On the waterfront a man is a convict: "The worse record you have, the easier it is to get a job."

Union bosses (many of them with criminal records) have terrorized their workers. Gangster-controlled operators require the services of "longshoremen" for less than a dollar an hour. For instance, it is reported to have paid out $32,000 in two years to an ex-convict leading forman who had done no work on Grace Lines Pier; and Joseph Ryan, president of the union, used to recruit convicts who have not yet served their terms.

The Jarks Stevedoring Company told the crime commission that it had paid out $1,000,000 in cash, on check book, it had been compelled to do so by the "Organization" of "loans" and straight cash payments of the way up to Joseph F. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association.

It is a most interesting and depressing story of corruption that will challenge prosecuting attorneys to take a lead in cleaning it up.

NO EQUALITY OF OPPORTUNITY IN HIGH SCHOOL GYMS

Parents of high school students are meekly submitting to the exploitation of their youngsters in Physical Education classes.

The eminent jurist, Learned Hand, warns us that we are in danger of imminent destruction as the result of the power of repealed suppression and of "consecrated platitudes."

One of these "consecrated platitudes" is the cry that we must have competitive sports in secondary schools. Certainly this may be true. It is, then it must be true not for a few, but for all the students.

The coaches, and the players, cry out righteously that only on the competitive games can be developed the young learn lessons of sportsmanship, only in expensive stadiums, it appears, can be observed by hysterical student bodies, can be properly developed training for the terrifying competitive struggle ahead.

Granting this appalling conception to be true, then a tax-supported school certainly owes this fine preparation for future "success" not to just the members of the "varsity" teams, which compose less than ten percent of the school, but to each and every student.

Or do Physical Education teachers believe in the concept of Hitler, producing supermen and casting off the "weaklings"

These "varsity" teams are supported financially by contributions from the student body, and it's a whale of a contribution. This money could be better used to give the whole student body, in which every student might learn a technique having future value for a success at anything learned in scrimmage.

Many are the boys languishing in the cheering - sections who could learn their football to swim every day. Many crave to learn good form at tennis and golf, to master the art of fencing, and to take on the advanced skill at badminton necessary to preserve the ego. But they can't afford private lessons.

These sports can be taught, should be taught in high school gymnasiums to every student. How many of you parents wish you might have had such opportunity in early life? But do you feel the need of kicking a field goal at even second-string standard?

You can't play football on your day off from your business, profession or trade. You can't play golf, but to each your own vocation.

A high school worth its salt ought to give gymnastics a program before it is forced into it by outraged parents.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SAY SO!

We miss so many opportunities to make people happy, and incidentally to enrich our own lives. We let just many a chance to uplift the spirit of others. We withhold the encouragement that would please them, perhaps a compliment or some personal interest, but we don't say what we felt like saying at the moment. It people only knew how much we have the impulse to express our appreciation, to tell a friend that kind word, to do that kind deed. The time is short, and tomorrow may be too late.

Many a mother awaits that letter or card from a wandering boy or girl. Just to say often in a brief note, that you love her, will open the floodgates of joy. We often hear that worn out phrase, "If I have flowers to send, I will," but are never too busy to be kind to give out some word of hope and encouragement to someone who needs both. People can stand a lot of loneliness—if they are not forgotten!

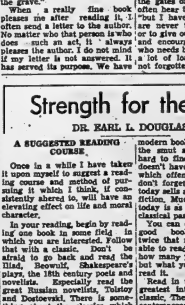
A SUGGESTED READING COURSE

Once in a while I have taken it upon myself to suggest a reading course and method of pursuing it which I think it consistently altered to, will have an elevating effect on life and moral character.



In your reading, begin by reading one book in some field in which you are interested, and be that with a classic. Don't be afraid to go back and read the filad, Beowulf, Shakespeare's plays, the 18th century poets and novelists. Approach upon some of the great Russian novelists, Tolstoy and Dostoevski. There is something about the classics which distinctly altered to, will have an elevating effect on life and moral character.

You can certainly read twelve good books a year—perhaps twenty, many more. You may be able to read one a week. It's not how many to read that counts, but what you read and how you read it.

Read in the field of your greatest interest. Then read a classic. Then read the best that contemporary minds are producing. You will soon find there a balanced intellectual, emotional, and moral diet.

modern book. You may well skip the most artists, although it's well to read a novel today that doesn't have in it some material which attends refined taste. You don't forget that the non-fiction today sells almost as well as does strictly altered to, will have an elevating effect on life and moral character.

Writer Believes Western Policies Have Thrown China Into Russian Camp

By Gerard Filion

China is not a Russian satellite. Western policies have thrown her into the Russian camp but there is no guarantee that she is happy there.

The Chinese stress the fact that Mao-Tse-Tung came to power without foreign aid. If he did get any supplies or arms from the USSR, the help could not have been very important because it came at a time when the war was going his way. Besides, there are certain points of friction between the two Marxist giants. I have mentioned them in a previous article.

If it hadn't been for the unfortunate Korean war, and all the things that have happened since, it is quite likely that New China would have had her proper place in the United Nations and played her own part, in no way servile to the Soviet Union. I came back from the Far East more convinced than ever that the Korean war was planned, at least encouraged by the Soviet Union for the sole purpose of preventing the Western Powers from recognizing New China and to fan the hatred of the yellow races for American and European imperialism.

More Than Arrogance Reformers

Certain optimists would have us believe that the Chinese Communists are merely agrarian reformers. This point of view completely underestimates the frankly Marxist character of China's rulers. You have only to read some of Mao-Tse-Tung's speeches, or those of Kuo-Mo-Jo, the philosopher, to be convinced, that this Marxist government has not yet established Communism. It gave land to the peasants and allowed them the right to transfer it to their dependents. Small industry and business is wholly in the hands of private enterprise with the exception of agricultural and urban consumer good co-operatives which the new regime is trying very wisely to expand. Big business is still largely in the hands of private groups. In fact the Popular Chinese Government which has such a Marxist philosophy, has not, to date, socialized anything more than the possessions of its political enemies and some of the major businesses in the country. Its program certainly envisages the complete socialization of all China but you wonder when the program can be put into effect. The government would need to be able to control millions of small family concerns or trades and at present it hasn't got enough administrative talent to handle its current requirements.

Socialism and Reality

Talking about China's socialism, one Chinese smiled slightly and said, "you know, in China, reforms never go very far. We don't like extremes. We usually wind up taking the middle road."

That is exactly the impression I got after spending three weeks in the country and it seems to jell with the Chinese sense of reality. In a country like China socialism can't get very far. It's against the very nature of things.

The Russians didn't hesitate to cause two terrible famines and overthrow the economy of their country to put their Marxist theories into practice. Communism had to be established, no matter the cost, even if millions of Russians starved. That doesn't seem to be the policy in China. Not only is the government not trying to bring things to a head, the regime is constantly appealing to private enterprise to help the country's economy. As time goes on, principles tend to give way to daily reality.

It has been said that Chinese Communists are like radishes, red outside and white inside. There may be more truth than fiction in the comparison. One thing is certain. Chinese Marxism is vastly different from Soviet Marxism. China has a special facility for digesting the nuts and ideas which enter its boundaries. Marxism will pass through the Chinese melting pot and come out a very different thing from that confronted by Lenin at Petitlee Without Reality

It is my belief that the policy of the West towards China is lacking both in realism and vision. It lacks realism in the sense that it has not exploited the friction between Moscow and Peiping. It lacks vision because it thinks only of the present and refuses to prepare for the long-term objective. It needed a break between Belgrade and Moscow before the West realized that Communism cannot change human nature and make man into a peaceful animal. As Communism increases, elements of division are introduced into its ranks. Nationalism inevitably interferes with the so-called brotherhoods of man which makes a business of wiping out frontiers, languages and religions.

When the rulers of China declared that they wanted to do business with America and Europe, that they had food products to exchange for tools and machinery, when they wanted to industrialize their country and appealed for the help of western technicians and scholars, I think they were sincere. I am almost convinced that if China had access to foreign markets and was given international assistance she would gradually recede from Moscow. Of course, it's a long-range objective that would take plenty of patience and tact. But I am convinced that it would be well worth trying.

There is a small but powerful section of public opinion that would like to hurry things up. If we were to listen to this group, we would be ready to call the turn right now with the Communist bloc. According to them, a hot war is the inevitable consequence of a cold war. But I still think there is a way to replace the cold war by a cold peace.

LAWYER DIES

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Hiram Fletcher Smith, 80, associate member of the law firm of Gunn and Smith, died Monday after a long illness. Born in Belwood, he came to London 50 years ago. SHANNONVILLE

H-S Association Sponsors Bazaar

SHANNONVILLE — The Shannonville Home and School recently held a bazaar followed by a euchre and dance at the Orange Hall.

Early Christmas shoppers were in evidence at the fancy work table where pa'ow cases, centrepieces, lovely dolls and aprons were on display. This table was presided over by Mrs. Herbert Brant and Mrs. Lewis.

Beautiful Cakes

The homecooking table was overladen with beautiful cakes, date and coconut cookies and candies and many other goodies. Mrs. Gordon Johnson and Mrs. Margaret Hill were the conveners for this table.

After school the children made haste to the fish pond which was cold and in a short period of time, Mrs. Ruth Stoliker was in attendance at the fish pond.

Misses Margaret Lewis, Gail Juby and Jackie Brant were in charge of the school children's table. There was evidence that the young ladies had been quite busy by the looks of their display of cookies, candy, brooches and handpainted pic-ce cones. Also on sales was a beautifully decorated cake which was donated by Mrs. William Conway. Tickets were sold on the cake with the lucky winner being Mrs. Ruth Stoliker.

Buffet Style Dinner

Dinner was served buffet style. Mrs. Fred Lewis, Mrs. Percy Howard and Mrs. P. Marion were those who replenished the plates. The table was laden with beautiful buns, jellies, salads, macaroni and cheese, salmon loaf and a large assortment of pies.

Two long supper tables were in the centre of the hall which were decorated with pink and white paper and flowers Mrs. Walter Brant and Mrs. V. Conley presided at one table while Mrs. Ruth Stoliker and Mrs. Maurice Sword were at the other.

Music was enjoyed when supper was being served. Mr. George Reid made this possible by playing the record player.

After 7:30 six card tables were set up for euchre and later in the evening, a dance was held with a good crowd in attendance.

Much appreciation is due to the Home and School members and especially to Mrs. Jerry Dafoe for her tireless efforts to bring the members to the bazaar and taking them home again. Also to several of the community who donated to the bazaar.

Log Cabin Fire Kills Three

A heat-warped baby carriage is all that remains recognizable after fire razed the home of Ernest Proulx at Green Valley Station, 25 miles north of Cornwall, Ont. Three children, all under five years, died in the fire. The father, Ernest Proulx, awakened by the smoke in his log cabin, rescued his wife, but could not fight his way back through the flames to save the children. — Central Press Canadian.

Mrs. Charles Christie, Nassau, Bahamas, arrived Monday by T.C.A., to spend the Christmas holidays with her mother, Mrs. Stanley Gonin, 39 Donald Street, who has been ill for some months.

OUT-OF-TOWN PERSONALS

Mr. Wellington Smith, of Fort Frances, Ont., Worthy Grand Patron of Grand Chapter of Ontario Order of the Eastern Star, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hadley, of Trenton, were among the Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Elliott, Stirling.

Tabernacle E.A. Holds Christmas Meeting

The Christmas meeting of Tabernacle Evening Auxiliary was held at the home of Myra Irvine, Grier Street.

The president, Dorcas Cowles, opened the meeting with a welcome to all.

A business period was conducted during which it was decided to bring to the January meeting clothing for babies which will be sent to Korea.

Temperance Discussion

Myrtle Lockyer conducted a short discussion on Temperance her topic being "Social Drinking".

Gladys Shane was in charge of the devotional period, which consisted of the reading by Leona Bailey, Clara Matthews, Myrtle Lockyer and Edith Bastion of the various Bible versions of the Christmas story. Short comments were made by Mrs. Shane between each reading and Christmas carols were sung at intervals.

Diane Irvine favored with a solo "Away in a Manger".

After the meeting closed refreshments were served by the committee.

At the close of the social half hour, Kathryn and Diane Irvine passed a basket of Christmas parcels around from which each member took a parcel and opened it bringing to a close a most enjoyable meeting.

Capt. Brightwell Addresses Pr. Ed. Belleville Club

Thirty-four members of Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club and guests attended the annual Christmas meeting in the Y.M.C.A.

Mrs. Lent presided, Mrs. Detor acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Parliament.

Mrs. I. Wransmaker reported financial standing, while Mrs. A. Detor reported cards and letters sent. Mrs. Lent welcomed back several, who had been absent through illness.

Mrs. Osborne introduced Mrs. Campbell, who gave a most interesting story of the birth of Jesus, using a flannelgraph portrayal of the little town of Bethlehem, among the hills.

Black Madonna

The story of "The Black Madonna", with all its meaning and teaching that God gave a Saviour for all colors, all races, all people was given by Mrs. Youdale.

Miss Helen Sulman delighted us with Christmas stories over new.

The special guests were Captain Brightwell and Mrs. Brightwell of the Salvation Army. Both Captain and Mrs. Brightwell led in several carols and Mrs. Brightwell closed with her own version of a Christian's sacrifice. She also favored with another solo.

Mrs. B. Weese expressed the appreciation of the club to all those assisting in the program, while the treasurer presented the Christmas Cheer gift of $25 to the Salvation Army guests.

Delicious refreshments were convened by Mesdames Gorsline and Wardner, with hostesses Mesdames Clegg, Spencer, Osborne and Weese. Mrs. Osborne furnished the Christmas cake.

New Officers Installed By Scott's W.M.S.

The December meeting of Scott's W.M.S., was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edison Sine, recently, with eight members present.

Following the treasurer's report that the allocation had been met and that $100.00 had been received, the officers for the year 1953 were elected, resulting as follows: president, Mrs. F. Farmer; vice-president, Mrs. M. Sine; secretary, corresponding and recording, Mrs. R. Dafoe; treasurer, Mrs. C. Copeland; Christian Stewardship, Mrs. K. Frail; Supply, Mrs. A. Sine; Temperance, Mrs. C. Frost; press reporter, Mrs. E. Sine; community welfare, Mrs. J. Scott; Mrs. E. Sine and Mrs. C. Frost; pianist, Mrs. C. Frost, assistant pianist, Mrs. A. Sine; literature secretary, Mrs. A. Sine.

Mrs. M. Sine led in the worship service which included the Christmas prayer. "Thank we sing praises to the Christ Child and return home in peace knowing that we have been brought salvation and glory through His birth."

Several passages of Scripture were also read portraying the Christmas story by Mrs. K. Sine, Mrs. A. Sine, Mrs. J. Scott and Mrs. K. Faul and verses of hymns read by Mrs. R. Dafoe, Mrs. C. Copeland, Mrs. F. Farmer, and Mrs. C. Frost.

Pot Luck Supper Party Ends Successful Year

A delightful pot-luck supper party was held last evening by Christ Church Evening Branch of the W.A., in the parish hall when 45 members and guests partook of the abundance of good things provided.

Following the gracious welcome given by the president, Mrs. H. Ingram, all sat down to tables prettily appointed with miniature Christmas trees formed of sparkling, colored squares, the serviettes also bearing out the Christmas motif.

Carol singing, solos by Canon O. R. Creegan, and brief addresses by Mrs. G. G. Wright, Mrs. E. Hickey, Rev. J. Cantrell, Rev. J. B. Creegan and the Rev. Everett Smith, all of whom extended the season's greetings to the assembly, added greatly to evening's enjoyment.

Later, Santa Claus, in the person of Mrs. K. Smith, appeared and distributed gifts to all from the gaily lighted Christmas tree, a fitting finale to a most successful year.

Mrs. W. Lavender Heads St. Paul's Guild

MARMORA. — Mrs. William Lavender, past president of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild, will head that energetic organization for the 1953 activities as a result of the annual election of officers held in the parish hall on Thursday evening. In charge of the December meeting also elected were: honorary president, Mrs. Donald Robertson; vice-president, Mrs. Harold Price; secretary, Mrs. Jack Hickey; treasurer, Mrs. Donald McInroy.

Canon M. Brownlie having opened the meeting, the president, Mrs. D. Robertson, presided, for the opening business.

Adoption of minutes of the November meeting read by Mrs. W.-D. Lavender was followed by acceptance of the financial statement presented by Mrs. D. McInroy.

The statement revealed the splendid success of the recent bazaar.

The retiring president expressed her thanks to the members for their valued support and words of sincere appreciation were added by the rector.

Various accounts were ordered by motion to be paid. At this point, Canon Brownlie took the chair for the election of officers, at the conclusion of which the members stood in silence for a minute as a token of respect for the memory of Georgina Kerr, who had passed away that morning.

Continuation of the group system will be decided at the January meeting and the meeting closed by Canon Brownlie, refreshments were served.

Tabernacle United Ch. Comrade Club Elects Officers

The Comrade Club of the Tabernacle United Church recently held their annual Christmas party at the home of Mrs. H. H. Ketcheson.

After the regular business meeting, Mr. A. A. Rowley presided at the election of officers which are as follows: past president, Mrs. D. A. Ross; president, Mrs C. A. Mott; 1st vice-president, Mrs. H. B. Yarrow; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. G. I. Wamboldt; secretary, Mrs. W. D. Embury; treasurer, Mrs. M. Cumming; membership convener, Mrs. H. R. Moorman; basket convener, Mrs. C. H. McBride.

After refreshments were served by the hostess, an exchange of Christmas gifts was held bringing an enjoyable afternoon to a close.

Girls' Victory Lodge Installs Officers

The Girls' Victory Lodge No. 23 met recently in Orange Hall, Church Street, under the chairmanship of Worthy President, Miss Jean Ferguson. Prayers were said by Chaplain Miss Edith Donnelly.

Visitors were Mrs. A. Buck, Mrs. Keitha Ferguson, Mrs. E. Bell, Past Worthy Mistress of Lydia Lodge No. 250.

The usual business of the meeting had been dealt with, the Worthy President named P.W.M. Keitha Ferguson installing officer. Mrs. E. Bell, as Past Guardian of 23, acted as pianist. Officers Installed

Officers installed were Leone Lucas, Guardian; Pearl Buck, Assistant Guardian; Jean Ferguson, Worthy President; Joyce Conners, Worthy Vice-President; Diane Linton, Recording Secretary; Betty Ferguson, Financial Secretary; Elaine Weese, Treasurer; Helen Weeks, 1st Escort; Bonnie Sweet, 2nd Escort; Lena Bradshaw, 1st Standard Bearer; Dale Sharpe, 2nd Standard bearer; Nancy Wood, 1st Lecturer; Arlene King, 2nd Lecturer; Elaine Conners, Chaplain; Sharon Sweet, 1st Guard and Bernice Wannamaker, 2nd Guard.

At the conclusion of the installation, the Worthy President was escorted to the President's chair.

Mrs. Mabel Kent, Senior Guardian for 1952, who previously had resigned, was then escorted to the President's chair and presented with a gift from the girls who expressed their appreciation of her kindness and excellence during her time in office.

Mrs. Kent thanked the group for the co-operation she had received during her tenure of office.

The meeting then closed and all adjourned to the dining room which featured a fine Christmas tree. Music was later provided by the Sweet Sisters.

Other events on the program were a duet by Dianne Littler and Joyce Conners; a reading by Bonnie Sweet; a solo by Donna Weeks; a solo by Charles Lucas; a reading by Helen Weeks; tap dance by Charles Lucas; humorous songs by Rose Sweet and a reading by Mrs. Kent.

Presto Music Club Holds Yuletide Party

The Presto Music Club held its annual Christmas party recently at the home of Norma Arkles, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

A brief business meeting was held under the chairmanship of Miss Helen Cook, who acted for president, Loretta McDougall. Miss Cook extended a hearty welcome to all guests of the Club. Following the meeting, a party program convened by Norma Arkles was greatly enjoyed by all.

A piano solo, Chopin's "Polonaise No. 1", was played by Elizabeth Hubbs. Helen Cook sang "Night of Nights", by Vanderwater, and "Come to the Stable to Jesus", by Geoffrey O'Hara.

Christmas Hymns

In keeping with the Christmas season, the entire group sang "Adeste Fidelis", "God Rest You Merry Gentlemen", "Hymn for Christmas Day", and "We Three Kings of Orient Are". Sheila Alec Gordon conducted the group and played the piano accompaniment. Herb. Brown Jr., assisted with his violin.

A trio consisting of Ada MacDonald, Norma Arkles and Doris Burgoyne sang "In a Winter Wonderland", "Jolly Old Saint Nicholas", and "Slumber Song of the Madonna", by Michael Head. The accompanist was S. Alec Gordon.

A selection, "The Music Box", which was composed by Belleville's Joan Bennett, was played on the piano by William Connor.

Ada MacDonald and Norma Arkles concluded the concert with a vocal duet "Santa Claus is Coming Into Town". Santa must have been listening to this number because at its conclusion he came bounding into the room and with great gusto proceeded to distribute gifts to all those present. Curiously enough his voice had a remarkable resemblance to that of Alec Gordon.

During the concert, recordings were made of several numbers and these were listened to with great interest by all.

To conclude a most enjoyable evening, hostesses Irma Brown, Mrs. Locke, Bessie Handley and Evelyn Bird served refreshments.

Women's Institute

ROSLIN W.I.

ROSLIN — The December meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. Chisholm with 15 present.

Mrs. Empson presided. It was decided to send Yard showers to two members who are away.

Mrs. G. Sills, convener of 'Citizenship and Education', gave a paper entitled "Let The Poor Thing Alone," with reference to the place, hostess and her assistants and a social time enjoyed.

A reading "Where Christmas Is Canada."

The topic, "The Charm of Christmas," prepared by Mrs. W. White, was given by Mrs. H Chisholm. Carols Carol Prom," was given by Mrs. A. Bates. This was followed by the singing of carols and the exchange of gifts from the gaily decorated tree.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social time enjoyed.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By HEATHER FARFAX

Why return to a situation you have relished?

I wonder why it is that so many women who get themselves out of an unbearable situation, or right back into it of their own volition, then act embarrassed because things are no better than they were before.

Here's a letter to point:

"For 18 years my husband was a public school teacher and high school teacher, and in all those years I never saw his cheque. He did all the buying of everything that was purchased, including the marketing, and his buying was usually not done wisely. I even had to ask for ten cents for soap for the laundry when I did it, and not have it on Saturday; I had to wait until Monday. One time he bought me a fur coat. I wore it one season and then he said such a coat should go into storage. I have never seen it since. We had one child to raise, and I have a lot more interest than he took in me, so I had to be wise and clothe her the best I could.

"At the end of those 18 years I left my home and went to another city. First, I rented a house and let out rooms. Then I worked and, without telling my husband anything about it, bought a home and a car. All the 'money I ever got from him was $10 now and then, even after he left the teaching profession and took a better paying position. When our daughter was married he sent still less.

"He came to see us occasionally, and on the last occasion he wanted to stay a week so I let him have the room in the basement of the house. He has been buying the groceries—but only the things he likes himself—and paying himself and his bills, but he takes no responsibility for the upkeep of the house and the car, which are mine anyway. He is most untidy and dirty and does not try to keep things clean in his room. He's been writing an educational book for 14 years and hasn't finished it yet.

"Now he wants to stay on permanently, and I am wondering if I should ask him to leave. After all, it has been 14 years since we separated."

Now the trouble here, of course, is exactly the same as the trouble which is responsible for a very large percentage of all such tangled marital situations: The wife was not strong enough to hold to a decision once made.

Did Not Remodel Habits

This woman left her husband and made out on her herself, and apparently found contentment that way. Whether she actually found happiness, or, her letter does not indicate. However, having established herself in a new and more desirable pattern of living, she then deliberately allowed that pattern to be destroyed as she worked back into the same old one by yielding to her husband's suggestion that he move in with her. Through the years during which they had been separated, his actions and attitudes had obviously shown no change for the better whatever. Losing his wife and daughter did not, apparently, affect him enough to cause him to remodel his habits in the hope of getting them back. There was nothing in the picture to give his wife any reason to believe, or even to hope, that they would get along together any more compatibly than they did all through the 18 years before she left him. Yet in spite of all this, she sat on the same old merry-go-round at exactly the point where she got off. What sense does that make?

What she wants, it seems, is for me to back her up in her decision to ask her husband to leave her house, and if, as it would appear, that is the only way in which she can give her life contentedly, it would probably be the wisest thing for her to do. There is no point in doing it, however, if she does not hold to it this time any more decisively than she did before. Unless she can make up her mind once and for all what she wishes to do, and cease thereafter to vacillate, she might just as well leave the present situation alone. But if she does do that, then the only way she can live with any satisfaction at all is to adjust to the things she dislikes in the situation by accepting the fact that she cannot change them, and pursuing her own life in spite of them.

NEHRU STILL HOPEFUL

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru told Parliament today that India's government still hopes Communist China and Russia will consider the Indian-sponsored United Nations proposal for a Korean armistice. If they do, he said, he feels they will appreciate that it is "just and fair."

ASKS U.K. TAX CUTS

LONDON (Reuters) — The Association of British Chambers of Commerce Sunday night asked Richard Butler, chancellor of the exchequer, to reduce government expenditure drastically in his budget next April. The association said federal and local taxes add 33 per cent to the selling price of British goods and services.

Glamorize Your Christmas Dinner Vegetables

By Mary Moore

On Thursday in this space I will give you a delicious Christmas dinner menu. I have chosen riced parsley potatoes, fresh or frozen green peas and onions au gratin, but since your choice of vegetables can make the difference between that feeling of the same old thing or the thrill of something different I am giving you some glamorous vegetable suggestions. Substitute these if they appeal to you more. If you do not use them for Christmas dinner clip them now and tuck them away in your file. The time will come in mid-January when you will crave a change in your vegetable-cooking ways.

HOW TO COOK VEGETABLES

A good general rule for cooking most vegetables—especially green ones—is to undercook them and to use as little water as possible, so that the water has all evaporated by the time they are barely tender. Thus you conserve a maximum of their precious vitamins and minerals.

SPINACH WITH HOT FRENCH DRESSING
